ARAB MASSACRE APPALS BRITAIN

Statements in Parliament by Asquith and Grey Regarded as Unsatisfactory.

PROOFS IN PHOTOGRAPHS

Pictures of the Slaughter in Tripoli Make Giolitti's Denials Ineffective.

EGYPTIANS IN UGLY MOOD

Alexandria Riot Was Very Serious and Situation in Cairo Is Grave—Kitchener Takes Active Steps.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Premier Giolitti's denials of Italian atrocities at Tripoli have failed to eradicate the impression created by the reports of several correspondents and the absolute evidence of their correctness afforded by photographs.

Protests have been made in Parliament, but ineffectually, both Premier Asquith and Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Secretary, deprecating questions phrased in such a form as to be offensive to a friendly nation.

C. Leach, M. P., of Yorkshire, who received the rebuke, had inquired whether the Foreign Secretary would not use his good offices to put a stop to the killing of Arab men, women, and children.

Sir Edward said that the military operations in Tripoli were a matter with which the British Government could not interfere consistently with its declaration of neutrality. This answer has failed to satisfy not only Mr. Leach, but the major portion of the British press and public.

It is pointed out that when military operations have assumed the character of grave offences against humanity, the rigidity of diplomatic etiquette has often been relaxed, and that when Austria took to treating Italian insurgents fighting for their country as Italy treats the Arabs successive English Governments did remonstrate with considerable asperity.

England's Powerful Lever.

One suggestion made to Sir Edward Grey is significant. England possesses special means of influence upon Italy. In the words of The Standard:

"We have declared our neutrality so far as actual warlike operations are concerned; but our declaration does not free us of all our responsibilities. When the war is over and Italy proceeds to regularize her achievements, she will have to ask our consent to the denunciation of the Treaty of Paris, by which she, with ourselves, guaranteed the integrity of the Ottoman Empire. That consent need not be given unconditionally, and the Foreign Office might hint that it would be withheld if the war were not conducted according to the recognized rules and dictates of humanity."

Signor Giolitti's part denial and part explanation of the massacres is generally dismissed as both unconvincing and inadequate. Nothing less than a searching judicial investigation, which will either establish the responsibility of or vindicate the Italian soldiery, can meet the requirements of the case.

The Italian Premier's suggestion of treachery on the part of the Arabs is also regarded as untenable. What was this treachery, it is asked.

The mere concealment of arms is not treachery, and to punish it by death is not in accordance with the rules of war as understood and accepted by civilized nations.

Nor is it shown that the uprising itself was treachery. There could only have been treachery if the Arabs had, in the first instance, given their parole, and there is nothing to show that this formality was ever observed. If they did not give their parole, then they were at liberty to resist the invader by all patriotic means at their disposal, and, according to the views laid down by Great Britain and several other States at the Brussels and The Hague conferences, they had the right to be treated as belligerents.

Question of Arab Treachery.

In connection with this the Turkish Ambassador here pertinently says:

"As for the allegation of treachery on the part of the Arab population, it is obvious that the surrender of arms had only been carried on by force, and that the Arabs, who could not have submitted to the rule of the invaders, were in their natural right to take up all the arms available to defend their native territory."

It would be easy to fill columns with examples of the horrified denunciation and virulent invective which the Tripoli atrocities have called forth in the English press. More important is the conclusion come to by a man like George Macaulay Trevelyan, Grandnephew of the historian, and a writer whose works show his deep love and sympathy for Italy. Even Mr. Trevelyan does not think that Signor Giolitti's statements close the question. He considers that

CRITICISES ALL JUDGES.

Know Too Little of Humanity, Says Dr. Woods Hutchinson.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Judges, from the Justice of the Peace to those who occupy the Supreme bench, were assailed to-day by Dr. Woods Hutchinson. They do not know enough about mankind, the doctor said.

"From a lawyer's standpoint, the majority of the Judges are competent men," Dr. Hutchinson said. "That is just the point. A lawyer's education is narrow and he becomes a precedent worshipper out in practice. As a Magistrate he doesn't know the conditions that he deals with every day. He makes decisions that touch closely industrial conditions, and he never has seen them. He looks at everything from the standpoint of the law, and the law he gets from a lot of dusty books.

"A Judge recently ruled unconstitutional a law limiting the length of day of women laborers. His reason was that in the law he could find nothing to differentiate the man and woman as wage-earners. That is just a sample.

"The remedy? Have some Judges that are not lawyers—some men that know the needs of the masses and that know a law that will help meet those needs when it is before them.

"Human nature is the great mass of the people. Before a man could go on the bench I would make him stay weeks and months in the hospitals, insane asylums, the slums, in the society of the '400,' everywhere, looking for the causes of things. Then, having acquired a knowledge of man, he would make a good Judge.

"There ought to be a Supreme Court, but it should have no power to annul laws under any pretext."

JURY WORTH $50,000,000.

Many of Chicago's Richest Men Called to Try Insanity Cases.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Seldom in the history of this city has so much wealth been represented as was in the County Detention Hospital, where many of Chicago's richest citizens had been called to-day by Judge Owen to sit as jurors in insanity cases.

All traffic in Wood Street, which pases the Detention Hospital, was stopped while the "$50,000,000 jury," as it was called, was in session. More costly automobiles than are ordinarily seen at one time west of the river were drawn up in front of the curb.

Among those who were ready to answer the roll at 8:30 o'clock when court convened were Edwin F. Mandel, Vice President of Mandel Brothers; Edward J. Lehmann, Vice President of The Fair; Harry Hunt, General Superintendent of Schwarzschild & Sulzberger Company; J. P. Marsh, a banker; Dr. H. I. Davis, former Superintendent of the Detention Hospital; Arthur Meeker, General Superintendent of Armour & Co.; Charles H. Swift, Vice President of Swift & Co.; Frederick L. Wilk, Vice President of the Union Trust Company; Charles M. MacFarlane, Secretary of Morris & Co.; Rudolph C. Keller, Cashier of the Colonial Trust and Savings Bank.

The jury disposed of thirty cases in the three and one-half hours it was in session.

MINISTERS SEE BOXING BOUTS

Programme by A. J. Drexel Biddle Thrills Rockefeller's Son-in-Law.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 3.—"This almost equals the thrills of aviation," said Harold F. McCormick, son-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, this afternoon as he sat in A. J. Drexel Biddle's private gymnasium watching a series of twelve one-round boxing bouts, arranged by Mr. Biddle for the entertainment of several clergymen.

The pace set by the boxers seemed to bewilder the visitors and brought forth the exclamation from Mr. McCormick, who was Mr. Biddle's guest. He added:

"We have aviation and other dangerous sports in Chicago, but boxing is under the ban. I have taken three flights with Sopwith, once skimming through the air at the rate of 45 mile an hour at an altitude of 2,000 feet. It is a great sensation and thrilling, too, but these bouts have some thrills also."

The programme included bouts by Frank J. Floyd, former amateur middleweight champion, versus Jack O'Brien; A. J. Drexel Biddle versus Tommy Sullivan of Lawrence, Mass.; Floyd versus Mickey Gannan; Biddle versus Danny Hutchinson; Jack O'Brien versus Mickey Gannon; Floyd versus Hutchinson; Livingston Sullivan versus Young Jack O'Brien.

The last-named bout so thrilled the crowd that the fighters were obliged to respond to an encore and box an extra round. Mr. Biddle and Jack O'Brien closed the show.

TO RETIRE COTTON AT ONCE.

Farmers Urged in Telegrams to Hold Out for 13 Cents.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 3.—Urging the holding of every available bale of cotton until Sept. 1, 1912, if necessary, for a price of 13 cents per pound and the reduction of acreage next year to not exceeding 60 per cent. of the arable lands of the farmers, telegrams were dispatched to-day from the office of E. J. Watson, President of the Southern Cotton Congress, to each Commissioner of Agriculture and each State President of the Farmers' Union in the States throughout the cotton belt.

The plan aims to effect an immediate and belt-wide retirement of cotton from the markets and follows an action taken by the farmers' convention here last night.

In substance, the plan calls for books of agreement to be opened in every county throughout the belt in which farmers will be asked to sign plans to hold a stated number of bales till Sept. 1, or until a price of 13 cents is reached. An assessment of 2 cents per bale is called for from cotton growers to pay expenses for the campaign.

PLAN CRUSADE IN POLITICS.

America's Young People to Fight Liquor Traffic and Dishonesty.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—A plan to merge all the young people's church societies in the United States and Canada as a force to fight the liquor traffic, the social evil, and dishonesty in public life, was effected at to-day's meeting of the organization known as America's Young People, now in session here. The chief means by which these things are to be attacked is through a campaign to induce young men to enter local politics.

The society will act through the International Citizenship Committee of Young People's Societies. The officers are: Chairman—Harry S. Warner, Chicago; Vice Chairman—The Rev. Charles D. Bulla, Nashville, Tenn.; Secretary—Miss Margaret Winterwig, Prairie, Ill.; Treasurer—Miss Mary Balcolmb, Chicago.

"There are 15,000,000 young people enrolled in the various church societies in Canada and in the United States," said Mr. Warner, "constituting a tremendous force, which can be organized and set to work and do much to elevate citizenship and public morals."

PITT BROTHERS FAIL, BANKS CHARGE FRAUD

Grand Jury Indicts Baltimore Grain Dealer Who Borrowed $500,000 on Collateral.

GRAIN SLUMPS IN CHICAGO

Lichstern Said to Have Lost About $3,500,000—Small Firms in Financial Trouble.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 3.—The grain firm of Pitt Brothers & Co. was forced into a receiver's hands to-day, and the Grand Jury presented Pembroke W. Pitt, senior member of the firm, on the charge of obtaining money from four banks on fraudulent bills of lading.

The discovery of irregular collateral was made by National Bank Examiner Huhn in the course of his examination of one of the four banks involved—the First National, the National Bank of Baltimore, the Farmers and Merchants', and the National Bank of Commerce.

It is said that the National Park Bank of New York also made loans to the firm on alleged forged collateral.

In the bill for the receivership it is stated that the firm's indebtedness to the four banks exceeds by $168,000 the valid collateral they hold. Pembroke W. Pitt disappeared from Baltimore on Thursday afternoon after drawing $4,000 from a personal bank account, and it is believed he went to New York. The police of that city have been asked to look for him. His bail has been fixed at $25,000.

The application for a receivership was made after a conference of the Presidents of the four banks with Clarence M. Pitt, the other member of the firm, who is still in this city. The petition made mention of the condition of affairs, and stated that the firm had contracts on which there would be a profit of $40,000 if the business were continued. Mr. Clarence Pitt immediately filed an answer to the bill, in which he admitted the truth of the charges made, and consented to the appointment of a receiver.

Mr. Blanchard Randall, Vice President of the First National Bank, was appointed receiver and his bond fixed at $10,000.

Cashier Ewer of the National Park Bank of New York said to-night that his bank had lost at least $50,000. He said that most of this money had been loaned on bills of lading and the rest on other paper which had been considered good security. Mr. Ewer said he would co-operate with the local banks in trying to realize on what can be saved from the assets of the firm.

To-day also there was filed in the record office a bill of sale of Pitt Brothers & Co. to J. Allen Smith & Co. of Maine, conveying several steamships, all of the elevator properties of the firm, and all their equipment to J. Allen Smith & Co., a Maine corporation. The bill of sale was dated May 17, but was not put on record until to-day. The bill was a surprise to the creditor banks as well as to the receiver, who did not know what the effect would be on the available assets.

Mr. Randall took charge of all the property of the firm and notified all the employes to be on hand to-morrow to continue the business as usual.

Until a few days ago, it was stated, Pitt Brothers & Co. owed the several banks upward of $300,000, but peremptory demands from the banks resulted in the indebtedness being reduced to $168,000. The fact that the firm was being pressed by its creditors has been known in business and banking circles for several days, but not until to-day was it believed that it would be at all necessary to seek the protection of the courts for the benefit of creditors. It is said that Pitt Brothers borrowed money from the four banks on warehouse certificates and bills of lading which are now the subject of dispute. Some of them are said to be numbers of gondola and flat cars, which are never used for the shipment of grain, and one is said to have borne the number of the caboose which was attached to one of the freights.

The firm of Pitt Brothers & Co. is one of the oldest grain houses in Baltimore, having been established in 1884. The house has played a prominent part in the development of the grain trade of Baltimore.

CHICAGO GRAIN LOSSES HEAVY.

Lichtstern Supposed to Have Sacrificed About $3,500,000.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 3.—One brokerage firm on the Board of Trade suspended to-day and another transferred its trades as a result of the severe break in the price of wheat in the last few days. The financial difficulties of each firm involved only a small amount.

The firm of Sam Finney ordered its trades closed early in the day when there was a call for margins. Mr. Finney, head of the firm, said $2,500 in cash would have prevented the suspension. Trades were transferred by the firm of Pringle & Wing after the call was made for margins, but there was no necessity for more drastic action.

Fear of a Federal investigation sent prices tumbling again and, after causing a wild opening forced the interests accused of engineering a corner to come to the support of the market. In spite of the aid they gave the price remained from 1 to 2 cents below the closing price of yesterday on the morning trading, and hundreds of thousands of dollars was added to the loss of the interests on the long side of the market. This loss on paper is already in the neighborhood of $4,000,000. The Armour Grain Company, A. J. Lichtstern, and their supporters are the principal concerns hit by the fall in prices.

Three and a half million dollars was given as an estimate of the amount lost by Adolph J. Lichtstern as the result of his struggle to get out from under the heavy load of wheat he took on in the May corner.

While no one was able to say exactly what the speculator paid for the wheat, it was generally believed that the average price was near $1.04. Added to that was 9 cents a bushel he was compelled to pay for storage at the rate of 1¼ cents a bushel per month since that time.

The price he secured when he sold his holdings was also kept secret, but some brokers to-day said they believed it to be about 94 cents, making a loss of 19 cents a bushel on approximately 18,000,000 bushels.

Lichtstern led a rush of the important longs to rid themselves of their holdings, but the stability of the board prevented any serious consequences.

The speculator and the others who unloaded worked as carefully as possible, and as a result the bottom did not fall out of the market, although there had been a dangerous sagging for days.

Part of the recovery was attributed to a report which was current among the members of the Board of Trade that the announcement of the plans for a Federal investigation had leaked prematurely. It was reported that the Government officials who had ordered the investigation of the grain trades had really no basis to work on at present, and that the disclosure of their intentions would hamper their inquiry. On this basis buyers worked on the supposition that the investigation would lag for a time, and that meantime they could go ahead with the present deal without fear of Federal interference.

BY C. P. RODGERS.

By Telegraph to the Editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

IMPERIAL JUNCTION, Cal., Nov. 3.—After getting everything in readiness I got in the air at Stovall, the water tank station in the desert, where I spent last night, at 1:32 P. M., Pacific time, or three hours later by Eastern time. I got away in good shape, and my special left at the same time that I did. I was in hopes that it would stay with me to-day, but I soon ran away from it.

My motor was running fine. I cut across one range of mountains that the railroad had to run around, and saved myself a few miles thereby. It was not long before I picked up Yuma in the distance, and I was soon over it and did not land there, but kept on my way. Yuma is 140 feet below the sea level, and this is the worst part of the desert that I have come across so far, being very sandy and rolling. I noticed as I flew along that there were some hills just of sand fully as large as mountains.

As I passed Imperial Junction I flew on a space over the Salton Sea, a lake by that name. But motor trouble developed, and as I was up about 4,000 feet I was able to volplane down to a landing place at Imperial Junction. The cause of the trouble was that a small screw came loose from inside the motor, causing my connecting rod to break in two and thrusting a hole through my crank case, and, of course, I had to land immediately in the best place I could find. Fortunately for me it was not the Salton Sea.

My motor was simply tearing itself to pieces as the wind kept turning the propellers. I succeeded in making a very good landing in a very bad place. I got to work to take my motor out and tear it down, as my train was three hours behind me, and I wanted to have everything in readiness for my mechanicians so that they would be that much ahead and save time.

We had to fix up my spare motor before putting it in my machine, because we had been robbing it of different parts previously. It has delayed me here so long that I won't be able to start until morning. I shall try to get started at daybreak, and plan to make Los Angeles, the end of my transcontinental flight, which is 167 miles from here.

I found that I had flown the 133 miles from Stovall to Imperial Junction, in 125 minutes to-day, and it is the longest stretch that I have done during my trip without having to make a landing for even gasoline and oil.

My wife and her mother, Mrs. H. S. Sweitzer, who are traveling on my special train, had heard at Yuma that I was down and had had a bad accident, and were simply dumfounded to see me calmly sitting beside the track working on the motor.

IMPERIAL JUNCTION, Cal., Nov. 3.—C. P. Rodgers, the aviator, said to-day that he would settle in Southern California permanently, planning to build an aeroplane factory and an aviation school near Los Angeles.

To-day's accident was his ninth serious mishap, and his companions vow he bears a charmed life. His aeroplane has been damaged so often that now only the vertical rudder and the drip pan are left of the original machine in which he left Sheepshead Bay. He has replaced all else along the route, and from the triplicate parts carried in his special train.

VANIMAN DIDN'T GO UP

And Won't Promise a Flight Until His Balloon Is in the Air.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 3.—Some hitch at the last minute prevented Melvin Vaniman from making a flight in the airship Akron to-day after a large crowd had gathered to witness an ascension, and he then announced that he would not set any special time for future trials. He will make an attempt to-morrow at some time, but at what part of the day he declined to say.

"I have fooled people so many times unintentionally that I have decided not to make any definite announcements hereafter," said he. "I have arranged that when the balloon is out of the hangar and the machinery running in first-class order, and there is no doubt of a flight, to have the big siren on the ice plant blown. But when the blast sounds the Akron will be up in the air."

The last two days have been spent in trying out the engines, and the motors have run along for hours at a time, until it would seem impossible that there could be any further delay on their account. All that is needed now is a calm day.

FIRE CAPTAIN GOES DOWN WITH THE ROOF

Felt It Going Beneath Him, but Insisted That His Men Get Out of Danger First.

TRAGEDY OF BROOKLYN BLAZE

Hagen of Engine 117 Was to Have Kept His Third Wedding Anniversary at Thanksgiving—Instantly Killed.

Capt. James A. Hagen of Engine 117 found the crew of Engine 106 already on the scene when he reached the Veneer Barrel Company works, a four-story brick building, at 62 Water Street, Brooklyn, where an oil stove set fire to a wooden partition about 10 o'clock last night. Hagen instantly, therefore, ordered his men to the roof, toward which flames were making their way up the elevator shaft, and with the Captain at their head the men dragged a line of hose up an extension ladder.

Flames rose from the upper windows of the building and curled around the coping on the roof, but Hagen and his men held their places, keeping a stream pouring down through an open scuttle into the mass of fire which roared just beneath them. To reach this vantage point they had had to forsake their ladder, though its top rose still, reassuringly, above the edge of the roof.

Suddenly there was an ominous swaying beneath their feet and Hagen, quick to recognize the feel of a weakening roof, shouted instantly to his men:

"Back to the ladder! Don't lose a moment. This roof is going in in about a second."

There was a scramble across the now trembling roof, which swayed and rocked like the deck of a steamer in a heavy sea. Hagen, at the far end of the line of hose, urged his men toward the ladder, pushing and driving them, but keeping himself, the last man, from this goal of safety. His voice still rose behind them as the last man threw himself over the edge of the roof to grip the ladder top in his hands, but when a sudden crashing, rending noise behind him caused the last man to look around, Hagen had disappeared. Where the roof had been was a red glow of swirling flames.

Down through the building went the sound of breaking timbers and twisting steel and iron, till finally the last sound died out in a mighty crash far below the feet of the firemen on the ladder. Heavy machinery on the top floor had fallen through to the basement, and the top floor supports had dragged the roof with them.

Hagen's men slid down the ladder, shouting as they went, and in the street cried out the news that Hagen had gone down in the smash. Instantly other work ceased.

Every man of Hagen's crew and of the crew of Engine 106 except the few who still had to stick to their lines went plunging through the smoke and flame into the lower floor of the building. Deputy Chief O'Hara led the men himself, though about them dropped burning embers, and bits of wood and steel girders and supports were still falling from the wrecked floors above.

In this mass of débris, glowing hot, and lighted by the flames above, they found Hagen, his body broken and burned, half crushed by heavy timbers and pieces of machinery. They dragged him out into the street, beating out the fire in his clothing and praying that he might still be alive. One look by an ambulance surgeon, however, told him that the fire Captain was dead, probably killed instantly by the fall.

The firemen returned to the work of quenching the flames and in a few moments had subdued the blaze raging through the now wrecked building. Only one alarm had been needed to conquer the fire, and not more than $25,000 damage had been done, but Hagen was dead.

The Captain was 34 years old, and had been in the department ten years. Four years ago he was made an assistant foreman, and eighteen months ago got his last promotion. On the strength of his first advancement he married, and on Thanksgiving Eve was to have celebrated the third anniversary of his wedding. Mrs. Hagen and her 18-months-old daughter Ruth did not learn last night that Hagen had been killed. Some old friend in the department will carry that news this morning to the little flat at 1,273 Park Place, Brooklyn.

SECOND FIRE KILLS HER.

Girl, Rescued at Shirtwaist Disaster Here, Burned to Death in Pittsburgh.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 3.—Death by fire finally has overcome Anna Rosen, factory girl.

Last March Anna Rosen was one of those rescued from the Triangle shirtwaist factory disaster in New York. This morning she died from the effects of burns sustained last night at her home in Mulberry Street, McKeesport. She came here from New York three weeks ago.

Gas from a disconnected hose filled the room in which the girl slept last night. It exploded and almost demolished the little frame house in which the Rosen family lives. Ida Rosen, her nine-year-old sister, was badly burned but will recover.

The explosion is thought to have been caused when the younger sister entered Anna's room and struck a match. A woman named Weiss, who was passing the house, was badly injured.

SMOKY FIFTH AVE. BLAZE.

Six Firemen Overcome Fighting Flames in Cellar.

Fire discovered at 8 o'clock yesterday morning in the cellar of the Seymour Building, at Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street, did $15,000 damage. Although the blaze called for only one alarm, it presented difficulties to the firemen in the way of smoke in such volume and so dense that six of the men from Engines 65 and 26 were overcome and had to be carried out of the cellar by the men of Hook and Ladder 24. There had been a small fire in the basement of the same building the day before.

The building, 503 Fifth Avenue, was once the home of Levi P. Morton. The stores in the building suffered varying losses, and the wires of the Postal Telegraph Company's office were put completely out of service.

The fire was discovered and checked before the working-day population of the building had arrived, and the twenty or more women cleaners who were busy on the upper floors were brought down in the elevator by the janitor.

CAN FIX A SELLING PRICE.

Owner of a Patented Article May Dictate to the Retailer, Court Rules.

Judge Ward in the United States Circuit Court upheld yesterday the right of the owner of a patented article to impose on retailers buying from him the condition that they shall not sell the article below a certain price.

The decision was given in overruling the demurrer filed by Charles A. Keene of 180 Broadway in the action which the Waltham Watch Company is bringing against him for an alleged violation of the purchase contract in selling movements for less than its stipulated price. Keene received twenty days in which to file his answer to the complaint.

12 ABOVE ZERO.

Coldest in Northwest—16 Above Elkins, W. Va.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The cold wave stretched across the country to-day with a low mark of 12 degrees above zero in Wyoming and North Dakota.

The coldest weather in the East was 16 at Elkins, West Va., and in the South, 22 at Asheville, N. C. Zero temperature had disappeared off the weather map, but it was cold everywhere east of the Rocky Mountains, including the northern portions of the Gulf States, with snow in some of the Central States.

It was colder to-night along the South Atlantic States.

MRS. CLARK 'SERVANT'S WIFE'

Speaker's Wife Registers in That Way in School Visitors' Book.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 3.—When visiting the Manual Training High School in this city, to-day, Mrs. Champ Clark, wife of the Speaker of the National House of Representatives, was asked to sign the visitors' register. Mrs. Clark wrote her name and residence. Then came the blank marked "occupation." She wrote "a servant's wife."

When asked by E. D. Phillips, Principal of the high school, to explain, she said: "Mr. Clark is a servant of the people. I am his wife."

Mrs. Clark later addressed the high school students on the "Self-Reliance of the American Boy and Girl."

It is not a part of the holdings of the John Jacob Astor estate, which is administered from the office at 21 West Twenty-sixth Street. The "Blue Book" of the Realty Records Company lists the property at 276-284 Bowery as part of the holdings of the William Astor estate, which is administered from the office at 23 West Twenty-sixth Street.

JURY HOLDS JERSEY HUNTER.

Verdict of Manslaughter Against Norcross, Whose Gun Killed Two.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 3.—Coroner Sontheimer's jury to-night returned a verdict of involuntary manslaughter against Charles Norcross of Iona, after investigating the tragedy which snuffed out the lives of Constant Steelman and Thomas S. C. Youse of Pleasantville, at dawn of Wednesday, near May's Landing. The gun which the prisoner used when he mistook the two men for deer was exhibited at the hearing.

Norcross collapsed when the verdict was returned, and had to be almost carried back to jail. He was committed without bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

LYNCHBURG, Va., Nov. 3.—A registered package containing $20,000 from a Bluefield (West Va.) bank to a New York correspondent disappeared from the mails last Friday night, between Bluefield and Charlottesville, Va.

The pouch containing the package reached here Friday night over the Norfolk & Western Railroad and was transferred to the Southern Railway at the West End station. Soon after leaving Lynchburg the train clerk telegraphed that he was short the package, and that his way-bill did not correspond with the number on the registering lock attached to the pouch. Four or five postal Inspectors are at work on the case here.

INSIDE POLITICS REVEALED

Willett Shows Strain as Ketcham and Callahan Tell How They Came to Consider Him Unfit.

The inside story of what Joseph Cassidy, the Democratic boss of Queens, has termed the "jobbing" of William Willett, Jr., Democratic and Independence League candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court in the Second Judicial District, was told with an amplitude of picturesque detail yesterday by several witnesses at the investigation of the judiciary scandal which is being conducted by Supreme Court Justice Townsend Scudder, sitting as a committing Magistrate in the Queens County Court House, Long Island City.

The witnesses who gave this testimony included the principal actors in the events that led up to the undoing of Willett as a candidate. John H. McCooey, the Democratic boss in Brooklyn, testified in the morning and was followed in the afternoon by Surrogate Herbert T. Ketcham of Kings and Patrick E. Callahan, both of whom appeared with Mr. Willett on the Democratic judiciary ticket.

Of the principals whose names have figured in the judiciary scandal, the only ones who have not testified as yet are Boss Cassidy of Queens and Mr. Willett, whom Cassidy put forward unexpectedly as a candidate a few hours after Mr. Willett had drawn $10,000 in bills from the Jamaica branch of the Bank of Long Island.

William A. De Ford, of District Attorney Whitman's staff, who is acting the part of Grand Inquisitor at the investigation, is out with a standing invitation for Candidate Willett to occupy the witness chair. So far this invitation has gone unheeded, though both Mr. Willett and his counsel have complained that the investigation is a piece of political persecution to prevent Mr. Willett's election, and have been clamoring for an opportunity to be heard. If Mr. Willett should desire to clear himself of the accusations lodged against him before the ballots are cast, he will have his last chance to-day, for at the close of yesterday's hearing Justice Scudder announced that he would not assume the responsibility of letting a case so fraught with political dynamite continue on the eve of election. Consequently there will be no hearing on Monday, or until after the political fate of Mr. Willett has been decided at the polls, for Election Day is a legal holiday, and the court does not sit.

As on the first day of the investigation, William Willett, Jr., sat in the court room all of yesterday with his counsel, Col. Alexander S. Bacon. It was apparent that he was under greater strain than the day before. It was a severer ordeal, too. With flushed face and lips tightly compressed, he literally writhed in his chair as his two associates on the ticket told their stories, incidentally making it clear that in their opinion the financial transactions in which Mr. Willett engaged in the days preceding his nomination could have been undertaken only for a corrupt purpose, and declaring flatly that they considered him an unfit candidate for the bench.

Much testimony damaging to Mr. Willett, and, incidentally, the prosecution believes, to other persons either named or "unknown" to whom the complaint in the case has reference, was brought out in the course of the day. On top of it all it was learned last night that Mr. De Ford has evidence to show that in addition to the two $10,000 loans obtained by Mr. Willett prior to his nomination, there was a third loan of the same amount. Mr. De Ford was not willing to discuss this new loan yesterday, but it is understood that it was obtained by the accused candidate after the disclosures made by William Berri, publisher of The Brooklyn Standard Union.

This new link in the chain of evidence has not as yet been connected, but it stands out, salient and significant, in view of some testimony that was given yesterday by Leader McCooey and Surrogate Ketcham.

The Surrogate, testifying of the events that followed after the charge of criminal libel had been made against Mr. Berri, said that Willett, after he had been compelled to make a clean breast to his associates of the loan he got on the day of the convention, jingled a bunch of keys in their faces and declared hotly that he could explain the transaction to everybody's satisfaction.

"If anybody questions it," he was declared to have said in substance, "I will hand him this bunch of keys and tell him to go to my safe and see for himself if the money is not there. I have nearly all of it left."

It is the theory of the prosecution that this new loan was obtained by Mr. Willett in order to provide him with a convincing exhibit to prove his innocence.

Prosecutor De Ford announced in court yesterday that his subpoena servers had been unable to locate Louis T. Walters, Jr., the Cassidy lieutenant who spent much time with Candidate Willett and who put his name before the judiciary convention a few hours after Mr. Willett had drawn $10,000 in bills from the Jamaica branch of the Bank of Long Island.

and. Mr. Walters is regarded by the prosecution as a most material witness.

Leading Points of the Testimony.

At the close of yesterday's hearing Mr. De Ford said he regarded the progress made during the day as most satisfactory. As a result of the testimony these points appeared to have been established beyond dispute:

McCooey and the leaders in Brooklyn had virtually been eliminated as factors in the nomination of Mr. Willett. Mr. McCooey testified that he had left the matter of the Queens nominee entirely to Joseph Cassidy, and that he did not know that Willett was the man until the day of the convention.

Mr. Willett, in the loan he made from the First National Bank in Far Rockaway, where Cassidy lives, demanded that the money be given him in $1,000 bills. After the disclosures he explained that he wanted the money to buy postage stamps with which to mail circulars to the voters.

Boss Cassidy was "flush" after the convention had been held. Deposit slips produced in evidence showed him to have deposited one day almost $13,000, a part of this amount being a check for $5,250, which is being looked up by the prosecution.

Louis T. Walters, the man who put Willett in nomination, deposited $500—an unusually large amount for him—on the day after the convention. The money drawn by Willett from the Bank of Long Island the previous day was in bills of the $1,000 and $500 denominations.

Willett made every effort at concealment with regard to his loans, and did not own up even to his associates on the ticket until after he had seen the President and cashier of the Long Island Bank on hand under subpoena at the first hearing scheduled in the libel charges against Publisher Berri.

Ketcham's Inside Story.

While the collateral lines of evidence that were adduced with regard to the bank transactions of Candidate Willett and Boss Cassidy are regarded as highly important by the prosecution, the testimony given by Surrogate Herbert T. Ketcham regarding the events that followed the publication of the Berri editorial, was the feature of the day.

It was shot through and through with glimpses of "politics as it is played" behind the scenes where the voters ordinarily do not have a look in. It was vibrant with the play of emotion as the elderly Surrogate told of the days of anger and vexation which followed the editorial attack and the days of panic and shattered hopes that came when Mr. Willett at last was forced to make a clean breast of his money transactions. It was alive with action, as Mr. Ketcham described how the three candidates had flitted in and out of lawyers' offices and Judges' chambers, and how they had put their wise heads together over luncheons at their clubs in order to devise a means to escape the consequences of the attack.

A hush fell on the crowded courtroom as Mr. De Ford called Mr. Ketcham after Boss McCooey had been excused, his testimony completed. The Surrogate is a tall man, slightly bent, with gray hair and somewhat scraggy gray beard. He testified that he knew McCooey—who is the chief clerk of the Surrogate's Court in Kings—Boss Cassidy of Queens and Mr. Willett. The last named, he said, he met for the first time in eighteen years on the day of the convention. Eighteen years ago he had tried a lawsuit together with his fellow-candidate. That was the limit of their acquaintance up to the present time of trouble.

Surrogate Ketcham testified that after he had read the "tainting touch of money" editorial he had a conference with Leader McCooey and with Mr. Callahan.

"Mr. Callahan said the article was libelous and offensive to him in the extreme," said the Surrogate. "He said he had never been associated with any transaction involving the payment of a tainted dollar or a dirty dollar or an evil dollar. What he said largely represents what I said. We both were working under the emotion of men who had lived decent, honest lives and had been shamefully outraged."

"This was on the day following the publication of the editorial—did you decide on any course of action?" asked Mr. De Ford.

Willett Called It an "Outrage."

"We did not that day," was the reply. "The next day Mr. Willett came into my chambers. We discussed the article. Mr. Willett said it was a grave injustice to him. His record with regard to the nomination was clear. Mr. Willett said it was an outrage that ought to be resented. We made a luncheon appointment for the Brooklyn Club, where we sat alone and discussed the matter for three-quarters of an hour together. We talked about nothing else."

"In the first conversation did Mr. Willett make any reference to his loans and money transactions?" asked Mr. De Ford.

"He did not, nor at the luncheon. Nothing was said by him there aside from protestations of complete innocence."

"He did not say anything about having raised money for postage, even?"

"He did not."

Surrogate Ketcham said that first they had discussed whether or not to demand a letter of retraction from Mr. Berri.

"I said that this was entirely insufficient," Surrogate Ketcham went on. "I said that Berri had known me for twenty-five years; that he ought to have known the accusation was unjust. A letter of retraction was no use to me. Mr. Berri, through his action, had placed himself beyond the pale of ordinary consideration. I also told Mr. Callahan and Mr. Willett that I would look upon merely a civil action as inadequate reparation."

"What did Mr. Willett say to that?" asked Prosecutor De Ford.

"He said that in his own judgment if anything was undertaken, it should be in the form of criminal prosecution."

There was some more talk, but finally Mr. Ketcham told his two associates over the luncheon table:

"We are all three of us as mad as mad can be, and that is liable to interfere with sound judgment. We had better get the counsel of some cooler head. There 's Will Dykeman across the street."

Will Dykeman is William N. Dykeman, one of Brooklyn's foremost lawyers. Surrogate Ketcham had him called on the telephone, and he came over to the club, where they talked the case over with him for a while, with the result that they repaired to his law office to draw up the papers in the libel action against Mr. Berri. Mr. Dykeman had advised them that it was a proper subject for criminal prosecution.

"Did Mr. Dykeman ask Mr. Willett if there was any foundation for the insinuations made in the editorial?" asked Mr. De Ford.

"Not at the club, but he did later at his office."

At his office Mr. Dykeman told them that the matter was of such importance, involving as it did candidates for the Supreme Court, as to justify the designation of a Supreme Court Justice to sit as a committing Magistrate. Justice Blackmar was sitting in Special Term, and they planned to submit the matter to him. The papers were being drawn, dictated, and discussed when Surrogate Ketcham suggested that each of the complainants should make a communication to counsel, including everything they could think of that possibly might be brought up in justification of the editorial attack.

Ketcham Told His Sins.

Surrogate Ketcham made the start himself by telling Mr. Dykeman that—following the custom of many years—he had subscribed $200 to the Democratic campaign fund, prior to his nomination. Then, as it occurred to the Surrogate that his appointment of Leader McCooey as Chief Clerk of the Surrogate's Court at a salary of $9,000—an increase of $2,000 over what his predecessor had drawn—might be interpreted as part of a possible bargain for the nomination which McCooey was known to control, he told Mr. Dykeman that at the time of Mr. McCooey's appointment the bill providing for the three additional Justices in the Second Judicial District, under which the nominations were made, had not been signed by Gov. Dix, and that he had no idea the Governor would approve it.

One day, after McCooey had been appointed, he was told by the latter, much to his surprise, that Gov. Dix, acting partly on the advice of Chief Judge Cullen of the Court of Appeals, had signed the Kings County Court bill.

"I told Mr. McCooey," the Surrogate testified, "that if I had thought the Governor would sign that bill I would not have appointed him Chief Clerk. I told him to forget when nomination time came that I had any claim on his gratitude and I admonished him to go ahead and do what he and the organization thought best, regardless of me, and that if he did otherwise I would be very much displeased. Mr. McCooey replied that he understood all that and how I felt in the matter."

Surrogate Ketcham testified that Mr. Dykeman, to whom he told all this, had previous knowledge of the facts surrounding the nomination, inasmuch as Mr. McCooey had labored to get him to take it.

"Two days before the convention," the Surrogate continued, "Mr. McCooey told me at luncheon that Mr. Dykeman had declined to run."

"What did you say then?" asked Mr. De Ford.

"I said: 'McCooey, I am human and I have feelings. Where do I come in?' McCooey said: 'I am going to be right behind you.'"

After the Surrogate had told his story to Mr. Dykeman, his fellow-candidate, Mr. Callahan, came forward and volunteered a similar statement.

"Mr. Callahan said he had given $100 to the Democratic campaign fund before his nomination, and that this was in accordance with his practice in other years," said the Surrogate.

And Willett Was Silent.

"What did Mr. Willett tell Mr. Dykeman?" asked Mr. De Ford.

"He did not tell him anything. He said that no one could make the slightest suggestion of anything that would reflect on him."

"He said nothing about his loans?"

"He did not."

"When and how did you obtain the knowledge that induced you to sign the letter of apology to Mr. Berri?" asked the prosecutor.

Surrogate Ketcham said the information came to him on the forenoon of the Friday when they had made their second appearance in court in connection with the libel suit.

The story that came from Surrogate Ketcham was listened to with breathless interest by the crowd in the courtroom. It referred to the day when Willett was compelled to make a clean breast of his loans. They had just returned from court. Callahan, Willett, and McCooey were in Mr. McCooey's office at the Surrogate's Court when Surrogate Ketcham entered. Callahan was the first to speak.

"Tell Ketcham what you have just told us," he said, turning to Willett.

"Well," said the candidate, according to Mr. Ketcham, "I borrowed $10,000 on the morning of the convention at the Long Island Bank in Jamaica, and I saw the President and cashier of the bank in court under subpoena, so I suppose they will tell all about it. I got it in $1,000 and $500 bills. I knew I would need money in the campaign for postage to mail circulars to voters. But I've got most of it in my safe now, and I shall say to anybody who questions my intentions: 'Here are my keys; go to my safe and see for yourself that the money is there!'"

"What a lamentable indiscretion!" the Surrogate exclaimed, after Willett had spoken, as he told the story on the stand.

"Yes—a lamentable indiscretion indeed," Willett had admitted.

Willett had said nothing about the $10,000 he borrowed on Sept. 30, but he had said something to Callahan and McCooey about a loan of $2,500 that he had given ex-Sheriff Harvey of Queens. Mr. Callahan reminded him of this and told him to let the Surrogate in on it.

"Well," Mr. Willett had said, "I lent Harvey $2,500 to help him out in his primary fight. He wouldn't pay it, so I sued him, and then he paid up. But that was two years ago."

Mr. Callahan had said that in his opinion it was a most unsatisfying situation, and this Surrogate Ketcham did not dispute.

"You were disturbed about it?" asked Mr. De Ford after Mr. Ketcham had finished telling of the episode.

"Yes," said the Surrogate. "I was very much disturbed because I could not make up my mind whether it was merely an indiscretion or a crime. And I could not fail to see that it would affect other minds as it had affected mine."

The Surrogate testified that finally, when the letter of apology to Mr. Berri was being signed, Mr. Willett protested that every circumstance in connection with his loans was capable of satisfactory explanation, but that aside from this he made no difficulty.

Why Ketcham Apologized.

"Now, tell us," said Mr. De Ford, "how you came to withdraw your action, practically admitting that there had been no libel?"

Surrogate Ketcham flushed a little under this question and flared up as he answered it.

"Well, there were 125 witnesses, and I knew that we wouldn't get a chance to open our mouths before election. In the second place, I knew that the courtroom was being decked out and the stage set for a big show and that spectacular features would be introduced that would continue to do us injury every day until election. A thing like that would hurt anybody, no matter how pure and holy he might be. In addition to that, I knew that I could not maintain the position I had taken after what I had learned."

"And you did not care what became of the public?" said Mr. De Ford.

District Attorney De Witt of Queens, who virtually has been sidetracked in this investigation conducted in his own county, and who had not said a word since the hearing began, stepped forth and submitted to Justice Scudder that the question was improper. There was a tilt between the two prosecutors. In the midst of it Surrogate Ketcham half rose out of the witness chair, showing every sign of anger, and shouted:

"I took care of my own litigation in my own way, Sir! And besides, I knew that the thing could not be suppressed."

This concluded Surrogate Ketcham's examination. He was followed by Mr. Callahan, who is an elderly man with gray hair and imperial and an air of blunt frankness. He is much given to gesticulation. He said he had heard the testimony of the preceding witness and it was true in every respect. Explaining why he had joined in the withdrawal of the libel suit, he said:

"I knew that the unfortunate action of Mr. Willett, to use as charitable a term as I can, would give Mr. Berri at least the appearance of having a basis for what appeared in the editorial. But when I signed the letter I said that it was merely the beginning of the case and had asked Daniel F. Manning, President of the Bar Association, to call his Grievance Committee together and sift the matter to the bottom, as a start. I though the public should not be denied knowledge of all the facts."

"Did you consider Mr. Willett a fit candidate after what you had learned?" asked Mr. De Ford.

"No," fairly roared Mr. Callahan as he shot an angry glance in the direction of the accused candidate. "We tried to get him off the ticket. We put it right up to him, Ketcham and I. He said it would make him out a criminal were he to retire, but Mr. Ketcham told him it would not if he could explain. But it did no good."

"Did Mr. McCooey want the letter of withdrawal signed?" asked Mr. De Ford.

"He did. There is no question about that," said Mr. Callahan. "But so did we."

Mr. McCooey was the star witness of the forenoon session. His testimony was largely in reference to the various conferences following the appearance of the editorial article and was largely identical with what Messrs. Ketcham and Callahan testified to.

McCooey Didn't Consult Murphy.

"I considered it good political strategy," he said when asked to explain why he had so strongly advocated the withdrawal of the libel action. He denied that he had talked to Tammany Leader Murphy regarding the nominations to the Supreme Court in Kings, or any other nominations in that county. He told Mr. De Ford that he had left the question of who should be the nominee from Queens entirely to the organization in that county, after it once had been settled Queens was to have one of the three nominations.

"I asked Mr. Cassidy, when he called on me to talk the mtter over, whom he had in mind for the nomination," Mr. McCooey testified. "He mentioned Surrogate Noble, Judge Humphrey, Borough President Connolly, and some others, including Willett, but said he had not made up his mind. I did not know Willett was to be nominated until the day of the Convention. Some of the Queens delegates talked rather deprecatingly about the choice."

Mr. McCooey was recalled in the afternoon and questioned briefly as to where he did his banking. He named the Nassau Trust Company. In reply to questions he said he had made no deposits in the Lincoln National Bank or the People's Trust Company.

"Have you made any deposits aggregating $20,000 since Oct. 3?" asked Mr. De Ford.

"No, nor any part of that amount," said Mr. McCooey. This line of examination was prompted by the disclosures made regarding Mr. Cassidy's bank deposits.

Valentine W. Smith, Vice President of the First National Bank of Far Rockaway, produced deposit slips of Mr. Cassidy, showing that on Oct. 13 he had deposited $1,500 in cash and twelve checks, in the aggregate nearly $13,000. The largest check was for $5,250, drawn on the People's Trust Company of Brooklyn. Mr. De Ford showed Mr. Smith a deposit slip of Oct. 5, showing that a check drawn on the Lincoln Trust Company for an amount that was not named at the hearing was deposited by the Democratic boss of Queens.

Harry J. Heyson, President of the First National Bank, appeared in court yesterday and was questioned regarding the loan obtained by Mr. Willett on Sept. 30. He said Willett wanted the money paid in $1,000 bills, but could not be accommodated, and obtained a draft on a New York bank instead. He said Mr. Willett did not tell him why he wanted the money except that "he had a chance to make a good investment."

After the disclosure came, Heyson testified, he had met Willett in the street, and the latter had asked to renew the note he had given, on the ground that if he repaid it then, it would be put on record and appear to confirm the stories printed in the newspapers.

The hearing will go on to-day. Justice Scudder announced that he would sit all next Summer if necessary to sift the scandal to the bottom.

What is known as a Supreme Court Grand Jury will remain in session in Queens until after the conclusion of the present investigation. Unobserved at the noon recess yesterday, the Grand Jury reported to Justice Scudder and handed up a batch of indictments. After the indictments had been handed to the Clerk of the Court, Justice Scudder in an undertone said to the waiting jurors:

"Gentlemen, you may take a recess until Friday of next week," and the jurors filed out of the court as quietly as they entered.

WHY TAMMANY? ASKS GAYNOR.

Mayor's Answer to Judiciary Scandal—Prosecutor's Request for Advice.

District Attorney De Witt of Queens County and Assistant District Attorney De Ford of New York County wrote to Mayor Gaynor yesterday asking him to tell the source of his information that William Willett, Jr., had paid the Hearst league and Boss Cassidy for his nomination, as the Mayor declared to be the case in an interview he gave out on Thursday. The Mayor was also called upon to give "any information whatsoever that you may have that will lead to the discovery of the truth of the matter which the District Attorneys referred to are at present investigating." The Mayor sent District Attorney De Witt this reply:

Nov. 3, 1911.

Dear Mr. De Witt: Your letter of this date is at hand. That the Hearst League Convention nominated Willett is as well known to you as to me. What induced it to do so? In fact the nomination was fixed up with the Hearst League first, as I understand. In order to ascertain why and how the Hearst Convention came to nominate Willett, and what the inducements were, it will be necessary, I suppose, to get at the Hearst leaders in Queens County, like Sheriff Quinn of Long Island City.

Of course, in the multitude of my duties I have not had the time to trace statements and settle on witnesses. Hearst and his leaders are all shouting that what they call "Tammany" nominated Willett. How can that be? Tammany is the local Democratic organization in Manhattan. It could nominate no one over in Brooklyn or Queens. What could it have to do with the Hearst Convention that nominated Willett? Really, are people to be humbugged so easily?

Your letter is joined in by an Assistant District Attorney of New York County. I do not include him in this answer, as the District Attorney of New York County has no jurisdiction whatever in your county. If there be anything further I can do for you in the matter, I shall be very glad to do it. Very truly yours,

W. J. GAYNOR, Mayor.

The Hon. Fred G. De Witt, District Attorney Queens County, Long Island City, N. Y.

It could not be learned last night if the Mayor's reply was satisfactory to the investigators, or if they intended to take any further steps to have him be more specific.

BAR ASSOCIATION'S PLEA.

Wants Proposed Constitutional Amendment No. 2 Defeated.

The Bar Association issued an appeal to voters last night to vote against the proposed constitutional amendment No. 2 which provides that the power to fix the time and place for holding special terms of court as well as the right to assign the Justices of the department to hold such terms be taken away from the Justices of the Appellate Division.

Resolutions passed by the association state that "the present system tends to secure the impartial selection of the best qualified Judges by those who have constant occasion to observe and review their judicial work; that the proposed change might be distinctly prejudicial to the due and satisfactory administration of justice; that the provision in the present Constitution was inserted after careful consideration on the part of the Constitutional Convention of 1894, and that the whole subject should be left to the next Constitutional Convention, when it can be carefully reconsidered in the light of practical experience throughout the whole State, and the change then made if deemed necessary or advisable."

The appeal is signed by Francis Lynde Stetson, President of the association, and William D. Guthrie, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, and it is indorsed by Elihu Root, President of the New York State Bar Association; A. T. Clearwater, Chairman of the Committee on Law Reform, and Joseph H. Choate, President of the Constitutional Convention of 1894.

ELECTION CASES ADJOURNED.

Another Effort to be Made to Indict Tammany Captain Joseph Either.

Magistrate Murphy, in the West Side Court yesterday, adjourned the case of Joseph Either, the Tammany Captain of the Fifteenth Election District of the Third Assembly District until next Wednesday, after he learned from Assistant District Attorney Stryker that the Grand Jury refused to indict Either on a charge of substituting nine repeaters for as many voters living in a Broadway lodging house.

Either is charged with getting a list of the names of lodgers from John E. Heney, the night clerk in a lodging house at 283 Bowery and bringing in nine men, who represented themselves to the Election Board as the persons living in the house. None of the men whose names were registered would admit that the signatures appearing on the registration books were theirs, and three of them submitted affidavits to that effect. All the others have moved from the district. Assistant District Attorney Stryker placed the matter before the Grand Jury and says he will resubmit the case next week.

Magistrate Murphy also adjourned the case of eighteen men living on Blackwell's Island who are charged with violating the election laws in that they registered as qualified voters when they were living upon public charity. Their cases were adjourned until to-day.

REGISTRATION TOO HIGH.

Supt. Voorhis Orders Investigation of Many Up-State Districts.

John R. Voorhis, State Superintendent of Elections, has written to his deputies throughout the State instrucing them to investigate complaints of illegal registration that have come to his office in the last week.

Inspectors of Election in many towns and villages have reported that the number of persons registered is entirely out of proportion to the population, in many instances being one-half of the total population as shown by the 1910 census.

Democrats at Carnegie Hall To-night.

What is expected to be the largest Democratic mass meeting of the present campaign will be held to-night at Carnegie Hall. Mayor Gaynor will preside, and among the speakers will be Senator James A. O'Gorman, Alton B. Parker, ex-Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals; Herman Ridder, Samuel Untermyer, Nathan Straus, and Norman E. Mack, Chairman of the National and State Democratic Committees.

FLASHLIGHT READY AT POLITICAL ARREST

Took Collector In Act of Accepting Campaign Cash from Pretended City Ferrymen.

ACCUSED OF A MISDEMEANOR

In Accepting Political Contributions in a Public Building—Won't Hold, Says R. G. Tompkins's Counsel.

Two newspaper sleuths from Manhattan, accompanied by other employes to the number of five, including sketch artists, special staff photographers, &c., visited Staten Island yesterday and made a dramatic arrest of Robert G. Tompkins, a well-known business man of Port Richmond, who is active in Democratic politics. He was arrested in the ferryhouse at St. George, the charge against him being based on the section of the civil service law prohibiting any one from receiving campaign contributions in a public building.

The detectives said they had received a complaint that Tompkins was receiving such subsscriptions. They did not state the source from which the communication came. There is, however, a hot fight in Richmond Borough between the Democratic ticket and that of the Republicans and Independence League. It centres about the candidacy of Magistrate Handy for County Judge. He was appointed to his present place by a Democratic Mayor, but fell out with the local powers of the party and last Summer was the sponsor for stories about Staten Island as a hotbed of moral depravity rivaling Manhattan's Tenderloin. Now he is running on the Hearst-Republican-Fusion ticket against the regular Democratic nominee.

Mr. Tompkins said last night that his business in the ferryhouse was to take orders from the ferry employes for clothing.

"I furnish many of these employes and those of the trolley lines with clothing," he said. "From time to time I spend a few days at the car barns and again at the ferryhouse with my samples and receive orders from the men. Recently I have been taking orders at the ferryhouse. For four years I was Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Democratic organization, and this year, although I had given up this post, I was asked if I would receive any contributions voluntarily offered by ferry employes, and agreed to do so.

"Two men came tome to-day and said they were a ticket seller and a ticket taker, respectively, on the municipal ferry. They wanted to make contributions to the campaign fund. I told them it must be understood that the contributions were voluntary, and one of them, who said he had four children and could afford only $3, I advised to make no contribution at all. The other offered $5. I told them if they wanted to make the contributions I would take them. They said they would be back with the money a little later. They came back and gave me the money, which was marked, and immediately called over Detective Sergt. Graham, who arrested me. I never heard of the law against taking political contributions in a public building."

When the two sleuths left Mr. Tompkins after their first interview they went to the police station and told Sergt. Graham what their plans were. They marked the money—bills of $5, $2, and $1—in his presence. Then they went back and gave the cash to Tompkins. As they did so the special staff photographer let off a flashlight and snapshotted Tompkins in the act of taking the money. Their associates seemed to spring up out of the ground, Sergt. Graham said last night, and he counted seven or eight of them.

"They had everything ready, all right," he said. "When I asked them what they were going to base the charge on, they had the book marked and showed me the section."

Tompkins was taken before Magistrate Handy and held in $500 bail for examination this morning. The bond was quickly obtained and he was released. The charge against him is a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine. His lawyer said last night that as the sleuths were not city employes the charge wouldn't hold water anyhow.

KEEP ON HITTING MURPHY.

McAneny, Mitchel, and Prendergast Together at Fusion Rally.

Borough President McAneny, Controller Prendergast, and President Mitchel of the Aldermen continued their attack upon Mayor Gaynor, Tammany Leader Murphy, and the Democratic Legislature at a meting last night at the Society for Ethical Culture, Central Park West and Sixty-fourth Street. There were about 400 present and half the number were women.

Mr. Mitchel spoke principally about the proposed Charter, which he termed reactionary and vicious legislation. "And I am sure it will be passed," said Mr. Mitchel, "if you leave Tammany in control of the Legislature."

Mr. Mitchel quoted from Mayor Gaynor's letter to John D. Crimmins in defense of the Charter, which was inserted as an advertisement in some of the newspapers a few days ago, and then said:

"I am not surprised to find that the Mayor has to advertise to get his opinions in the newspapers, but I would like to know, and the people would like to know, whose money was spent to advertise them."

Mr. McAneny said that the business administration given by the Fusionists would be threatened if there was another Tammany Legislature. Referring to proposed pavement repairs, he said that forty-one miles of good modern pavements would be laid this year, and if the money were put at his disposal he would double that amount next year. Much of the work had been done with money he had saved by introducing business methods.

Controller Prendergast reviewed the Charter in detail and got a laugh by referring to Mayor Gaynor as "the only really truthful man in this campaign." "We have no objection to a good Charter," he added, "but we do object when some people want to pass a personally perfect Charter. In my opinion the last Legislature was the worst the State ever had, and that is saying a good deal, and I regard its invasion of the principle of home rule as one of its most vicious practices. The Legislature has undertaken to managed the affairs of New York City, and it is not managing them in the interests of the people. Gov. Dix ought to pray for a Republican Legislature to save him."

Terry's Name, Independent, Off Ballot.

ALBANY, Nov. 3.—The name of Assemblyman Edmund R. Terry of Kings County cannot go on the official ballot as an independent candidate for re-election, according to a decision by the Court of Appeals to-day. The court affirmed the order of the lower court, holding that his petition did not come up to the requirements of the Levy election law regarding the requisite number of signatures to the petition.

Courts Open Early Election Day.

Chief Magistrate McAdoo wrote to all the Police Magistrates in the city yesterday, announcing the programme for election day. So that all election arrests can be promptly disposed of, he says, all Magistrates must be at their courts on that day at 7:30 A. M., and the courts must not be closed until 5 o'clock P. M., the time for the closing of the polls.

the facts recited by the Premier do not dispose of the temperate and careful dispatch from The Times's correspondent cabled to THE NEW YORK TIMES on Tuesday.

"If it was permitted," writes Mr. Trevelyan, "to shoot those found in the oasis with arms in their hands, there may have been ample latitude for the ruthlessness which The Times correspondent could not commend. For instance, T. E. Grant, over his own signature in The Daily Mirror of Nov. 2, writes:

"'The two-mile ride to the cavalry barracks was a perfect nightmare of horrors. To begin with, one had to pass a huddled mass of some fifty men and boys, who were yesterday herded into a small space enclosed by three walls and there fired upon until no one was left alive.

"'It must have been a veritable carnival of carnage. The heap of cartridge cases in the road is evidence of how the execution was bungled. A fellow correspondent witnessed this, and his description of the ghastly scene is too shocking to write down.'

"I do not guarantee this story," continues Mr. Trevelyan, "but it would be quite consistent with the Italian official account, for all these fifty males may have been taken with arms in their hands."

Mr. Trevelyan's conclusion is that the Italians' military courage did not fail them, but that after the battle a not unnatural spirit of savage reprisals entered into many of them. This has often happened to troops of other countries, not excluding the British, in kindred circumstances.

A German's Account.

A dispatch from a German correspondent at Tripoli throws some new light on the subject. Telegraphing under Tuesday's date he says:

"The suppression of the revolt among the natives is being continued with merciless rigor. Arabs, thoroughly well armed, had occupied the whole oasis. They did not shoot any European civilians, but they shot many soldiers, and on this account the panic which arose among the troops was increased owing to the helplessness of the officers.

"A wild man-hunt began. The troops were even ordered to fire on women and children. Thus far at least 3,000 natives have been executed or shot down. The Italian soldiers have conducted an equal number as prisoners to Pantelleria.

"I myself witnessed unheard of atrocities. Hundreds of Arab corpses and also carcases of animals are still lying about in the oasis."

Another correspondent sends this significant dispatch:

"The wonderful feature of all these executions is the manner in which the Arabs meet their death. There is never a sound from them. I have seen numbers shot in the same cold-blooded way, and, in no case, has there been the least sign of fear.

"It is this utter contempt of death which seems to be getting on the nerves of the Italian soldiers, and it accounts for much of their savagery.

"This morning a large party of women and children were sent into the town and, with perfectly needless brutality, were made to pass scores of bodies of their own husbands and fathers. The whole thing is sickening, and makes one think of the fearful reprisals should the Arabs and Turks retake the town—not such an impossible idea as it may seem to the outside world."

Riots in Egypt.

The possibility of trouble being made for England by the exasperation engendered among Mahommedans by the news of the Italians' behavior at Tripoli has been brought home to the public here by reports of anti-European riots in Egypt. A Cairo dispatch says that the situation there is regarded as very serious, and Lord Kitchener is taking active steps to deal with any recrudescence of the trouble.

Meanwhile all Europeans have armed themselves. Full details of the scenes at Alexandria show that the riot was of a most serious and threatening character. It was started by a band of Arab students, who, inflamed by statements in the native papers, paraded the streets carrying a standard bearing fanatical anti-Christian inscriptions.

As they marched along they shouted: "Long live the Sultan! Death to the Italians!"

A European police officer attempted to seize the standard, but was knocked down and stoned by the students, who, by this time, had been reinforced by large bodies of other Arabs.

The spirit of riot spread rapidly throughout the town, and large crowds of Arabs began rushing wildly through the principal thoroughfares, assaulting Europeans, breaking doors, and ransacking shops, and shouting threats against all Christians or infidels.

Many shots were fired and a number of persons were stabbed. It is impossible to state the total number of injured, but a rough estimate makes it at least fifty.

The Italian and Greek Consuls have protested against this inaction of the British Military Police, who, they allege, did not turn out till 6 o'clock, when the rioting had assumed serious proportions; while they also declare that many native policemen sympathized with the rioters.

MOSQUE FULL OF DEAD.

British Officer Also Saw 120 Bound and Butchered in Arab House.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The agitation against alleged atrocities by Italians in Tripoli, which has arisen in the British press and been taken up by a few members of the House of Commons, received fresh impetus to-night through a telegram received by a news agency from Herbert Montagu, a Second Lieutenant of the Fifth Fusiliers. Lieut. Montagu telegraphed on Nov. 2 from Seukelyohma by way of Dehibat, on the frontier of Tunis, as follows:

"I feel it my duty to send to you the following telegram, and I beg you in the name of Christianity to publish it throughout England. I am an English officer now voluntarily serving in the Turkish army here.

"As you know already about the ferocious resistance which the Turks and Arabs are offering the Italians, I can only express my admiration for their bravery and fortitude, which would warm the heart of any Englishman or of any true soldier in the world.

"Imagine my feelings when, on entering and driving the Italians out of Arab houses which they had fortified and were holding, we discovered the bodies of some 120 women and children with their hands and feet bound, mutilated, pierced and torn. Later on at, (the name of the town was lost in transmission,) we found a mosque filled with bodies of women and children, mutilated almost beyond recognition. I could not count them, but there must have been 300 or 400.

"In this European war are such crimes to be committed? Cannot England do something to stop such horrors? In our civilization and times you can hardly believe it, but it is true nevertheless. I myself have seen it, so I know.

"Even now we are getting news of further massacres of women and children who were discovered on different farms lately occupied by Italians. The idea of the Italians when they slaughtered the innocents obviously was one of revenge for their heavy losses in battle.

"We are at this moment under a heavy shrapnel fire, so you must excuse me if these sentences are somewhat disjointed. There is also an aeroplane circling over our position and directing the enemy's gunfire on us."

REPORT 4,000 EXECUTIONS.

German Correspondent Also Puts Italy's Losses at 1,500—290 Killed.

BERLIN, Nov. 4.—The Lokal Anzeiger's Tripoli correspondent says that Italy's losses in Tripoli since Oct. 23 amount to 1,500 men, of which 280 were killed. Eighty-seven soldiers are suffering from cholera.

"The Italians," continues the correspondent, "have executed 4,000 Arabs, including 400 women and children. Cholera is rapidly increasing among the Arabs and Jews. No room exists in the city for the expected reinforcements, and their arrival must further increase the ravages of the cholera."

MAY SHELL SYRIAN COAST.

Italy Decides Not to Occupy Turkish Islands to End War.

ROME, Nov. 3.—It is understood that Italy has abandoned the idea of occupying one or more islands of the Grecian Archipelago as a measure of bringing the war to an end, as it is now considered that this would not bring sufficient pressure upon Turkey to compel her to yield. It is more probable that a naval demonstration on the Syrian coast, with the eventual occupation of some point, will be decided upon.

About ten days ago the Government confidentially notified the powers of the cessation of Ottoman rule in Tripoli and Cyrenaica, but the official proclamation of annexation to Italy has been delayed, as Premier Giolitti wishes this communication to be preceded by such military operation on the part of Italy as will demonstrate her effectual possession, or the withdrawal of the enemy, thus acknowledging incapacity to hold her position.

Officers of the Italian troops report great cruelty on the part of the Arabs toward the wounded Italians. These victims, it is said, are ruthlessly killed, robbed, and stripped of their clothing. In some instances fingers have been cut off in order that the tribesmen might more quickly obtain the rings the victims wore.

TURKS HOLD OUTER FORTS.

Italians Command Those Within Tripoli—Consuls Want to Leave.

BERLIN, Nov. 3.—The report that all the outer forts at Tripoli are in the hands of the Turks is confirmed in well-informed circles here.

The Italians hold the forts within the city proper.

FRANKFORT, Nov. 3.—A dispatch to the Frankfurter Gazette from Constantinople says: "The foreign Consuls are asking permission to remove from the city with their nationals, as an attack by the Turks cannot be postponed. Negotiations betwen the Consuls and Gen. Caneva of the Italian forces on the matter of the removal of the former were without result."

Turkey Protests to Powers.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 3.—The Government has lodged a protest with the powers which signed The Hague agreement of 1907 against the execution of Arabs in Tripoli.

FUSION BY 20,000.

That's the Prediction of J. J. Martin, Former Tammany Chieftain.

Ex-City Chamberlain James J. Martin, who is working hard for the success of the Fusion ticket this year, although he was at one time a member of the Executive Committee of Tammany Hall and an adviser of Charles F. Murphy, predicted last night that the Fusion ticket would be elected by at least 20,000 plurality.

"About 300,000 votes will be cast," he said. "Deducting the Socialist and Prohibition vote, about 20,000, the balance of 280,000 will be cast for the Fusion and Murphy tickets. This year's election should be compared with 1907, when a Sheriff, Judges, Assemblymen, and Aldermen were elected, the same as this year. The Tammany candidate, Sheriff Foley, was elected in 1907 by less than 25,000 over his Fusion opponent, Max Ihmsen.

"A comparison of this year's registration with 1907 shows a decrease in the Democratic districts of 8,000 and an increase in the Republican districts of 5,000.

"The Fusion ticket this year was nominated by the Democratic League, the Republican Party, and the Independence League. It is much stronger than the Fusion of 1907. There is a great deal of defection among the rank and file of Tammany Hall, who are disgusted with the leadership of Mr. Murphy. The principal battleground is in the Bronx, which usually is strongly Democratic. I believe the Fusion ticket will carry the Bronx by a very large majority. There is general dissatisfaction on account of high taxes, high rents, and bad rapid transit facilities. I am confident that the Fusion ticket will be elected by at least 20,000 majority."

Joseph C. Hammitt, Secretary of the Citizens' Union, predicted yesterday that the Fusionists would elect at least 32 out of the 63 Assemblymen in the city, and that the next Assembly would be anti-Democratic. In his opinion, the Fusionists will elect thirteen Assemblymen in Manhattan, two or three out of the four Assemblymen in the Bronx, two or three out of the four in Queens, the one Assemblyman in Richmond, and sixteen or seventeen in Brooklyn.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—James Carney, who saved ninety-six lives from the wreck of the steamer Lady Elgin on Lake Michigan in 1860, died at his home in Evanston yesterday at the age of 77. The Lady Elgin was wrecked off Evanston and 297 persons lost their lives. Mr. Carney's father, who owned the territory now in Evanston, was the first white settler in the Evanston territory, the fashionable north shore suburb.

Basic Points of New Constitution Aim Wholly at Curtailing Dynasty's Authority.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Dr. Morrison, telegraphing to The London Times from Peking under to-day's date, says:

"To-night's edict, in which Prince Chun, the Regent, accepts, on behalf of the throne, the National Assembly's basic points of a new Constitution, is of historic importance.

"The National Assembly, in submitting nineteen fundamental principles of a new Constitution, urges their immediate acceptance and promulgation as being more powerful than armies, and as the only remedy for the desperate situation.

"The throne, with the best grace possible, unreservedly accepts them as the basis of the final draft of the Constitution, and undertakes to announce immediately their acceptance in the temple of its ancestors, and promulgate them throughout the empire.

"The security of the dynasty is guaranteed. The person of the Emperor is sacrosanct. But in place of the barbaric despotism, guided by a capricious weakling under the pernicious influence of palace women and degraded eunuchs, there will be a constitutional monarchy, a Parliamentary Government, a responsible Cabinet appointed by the Prime Minister, and Parliamentary control of the budget, including allowances to the imperial household.

PEKING, Nov. 3.—An edict issued this afternoon confirms the throne's acceptance of the principles for a constitution as drawn up by the National Assembly, and promises that:

"We shall arrange a day to swear before our ancestors in the temple and to issue the constitution to the whole empire on yellow papers."

A committee of the assembly will be appointed to draw up the actual constitution. It will be assisted by representatives of the army and the work probably will occupy months, as the provincial assemblies will be consulted.

The outlines of the proposed constitution have excited much interest, and the outcome of this latest step toward popular government is a matter of lively speculation in the foreign quarter. A study of its basic points shows it to be a drastic curbing of the powers of the Manchu throne.

It refers wholly to the reduction and control of the dynastic powers and gives no idea of what Parliament's intention is with respect to the duties of the Chinese subjects, or the duties and responsibilities of the Parliament itself. It is entirely directed at the Manchu sceptre.

It is a revolutionary advance over the constitutional scheme promulgated by the throne in 1907, which was modeled after the constitution of Japan, and which was thought by conservative foreign friends of China to be an acceptable one.

The first four articles in the demands of the National Assembly conform to the first four articles of the Japanese constitution. In the tenth article the Emperor of China is granted the direction, but not the supreme command, of the army and navy, which the Japanese Emperor enjoys. Whereas in Japan the Emperor makes treaties, the Parliament in China assumes this power. Whereas in Japan the Government or Ministers of the Emperor, in consultation with the Emperor, framed the imperial house laws, the reformers in China intend that the Parliament shall make these laws.

Article 14 covers the financial affairs of China that are the stated causes for the outbreak of hostilities and the present revolution. They have a direct bearing on foreign interests. They place control of the budget, beginning last year, with Parliament, and prevent the Government taking extraordinary financial measures. This affects the carrying out of the Hu-Kuang Railway loan, the currency loan, as well as the reported war loan negotiated with Belgium and French financiers.

Bases of Constitution.

The National Assembly's draft of the bases upon which it proposes to construct the new constitution reads:

1. The Emperor shall reign forever.
2. A person of the Ta Ching dynasty (the great pure dynasty, the same being the name adopted by the ruling family) shall be Emperor inviolable.
3. The power of the Emperor shall be limited by the constitution.
4. The order of succession to the throne shall be prescribed by the constitution.
5. The constitution shall be drawn up and adopted by the National Assembly and promulgated by the Emperor.
6. The power of amending the constitution shall belong to Parliament.
7. The members of the upper house shall be elected by the people from among those particularly eligible.
8. Parliament shall elect and the Emperor shall appoint the Premier, who will recommend the other members of the Cabinet, who shall also be appointed by the Emperor. The imperial Princes will be ineligible for the office of Premier or members of the Cabinet or administrative heads of the provinces.
9. If the Premier, when impeached by Parliament, does not dissolve Parliament, he must resign. One Cabinet shall not be allowed to dissolve Parliament more than once.
10. The Emperor shall assume direct control of the army and navy, but when this power is used in connection with internal affairs the Emperor must observe special conditions to be decided by Parliament.
11. Imperial decrees cannot be issued to replace the law except in the event of urgent necessity, in which case they may be issued in accordance with special conditions.
12. International treaties shall not be concluded without the consent of Parliament, but a treaty for the conclusion of peace or a declaration of war may be made by the Emperor if Parliament is not sitting, the approval of Parliament to be obtained afterward.
13. Ordinances in connection with the administration shall be settled by acts of Parliament.
14. In case the financial budget fails to receive the approval of Parliament, the Government may not act upon the budget of the previous year, nor may items of expenditure, not provided for in the budget, be appended thereto. The Government shall not adopt extraordinary financial measures outside the budget.
15. Parliament shall fix the expenses of the imperial household and any increase or decrease therein.
16. Regulations in connection with the imperial family must not conflict with the constitution.
17. The two houses shall establish the machinery for the administration of the court.
18. The Emperor shall promulgate the decisions of Parliament.
19. The National Assembly shall act upon Articles 8, 9, 10, 12, 13, 14, 15, and 18 until the opening of Parliament.

Assembly Muzzles Throne Party.

The preliminary constitution was drawn up at a single sitting of the Assembly, which refuses to permit half its membership to participate in debate. The hundred appointees of the throne dare not speak in the Assembly, and even the Moderates are often cried down. From forty to fifty Radicals dictate the policy of the chamber, and the remainder of the members like the throne, are afraid to disagree with them.

"The country has gone mad," said a prominent diplomat to-day, "and only a strong dictator will save it. The Radicals of the Assembly seem intimidated by the army and well-wishers of China hope to see a man in office who can dictate, namely, Chang Shao-Theng."

Two days ago a train brought to Peking an officer named Lu as the emissary of Gen. Chang Shao-Theng, who commands 5,000 modern troops at Lanchou. Lu was accompanied by an escort of 200 cavalrymen. The Government at first considered opposing by force the memorial conveyed by Lu, which peremptorily stated that twelve demands should be granted. The last of these demands provided that the army should participate in the establishment immediately of a constitutional Government.

Both the Assembly and the Throne complied, and Lu and his colleagues remain in Peking, forming a military league to which already the various garrisons adhere.

But while the nominal Government, acting under dictation, pardons rebels, grants general amnesties, and promises not to employ force against the revolutionists, the War Board proceeds steadily to the checking of the revolutionists at Hankow and along the Tai Yuan Fu Railway, although in the latter region the imperial troops have refused to engage the Shansi rebels.

To-night it was reported that the Third Division of troops is being brought from Mukden with the evident object of getting them down between Lanchow and Peking. Since trouble has come into the very province in which the capital is located, the Government seems to feel that it is lost, and is leaving the provincial Manchu garrisons to shift for themselves.

REBELS TAKE SHANGHAI.

Important Strategic City on the Yang-tse Quietly Capitulates.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 3.—The arsenal and the native city of Shanghai were taken over by the revolutionists late this afternoon. No resistance was offered by the authorities or by such of the public as remains loyal.

Some of the foreign warships landed marines in this city before the rebels took possession. Foreign volunteers were called out and have taken every precaution to protect the concessions.

The revolutionary flag is hoisted over all the buildings in the vicinity of the arsenal, and thousands wear on their arms the white band insignia of the Constitutionalists gathered in the street. The police and native soldiers made no attempt to interfere; on the contrary, they fraternized with the insurgents.

At 5:30 o'clock all telephone and telegraph communication with the arsenal was cut off. The rebel throng grew to greater proportions and in the excitement a number of shots were fired by the Government forces in the direction of the mob, but without effect. It was plain that the Chinese soldiers, the police, and the native volunteers were all in sympathy with the revolutionists. At this point the Taotai fled and the arsenal and native city quietly capitulated.

The native constabulary of Cha-Pei, a suburb of Shanghai, which forms part of the Chinese quarter, mutinied to-day, and after burning the police station and the residence of the Chief of Police formally declared their adhesion to the rebel cause and took over control of the native quarter in the name of the revolutionists. The Cha-Pi district is on the border of the European settlement in Shanghai.

British Breach of Neutrality.

Quickly following the demands for the surrender of the arsenal came an attempt to cut the wires of the Nanking-Shanghai Railway, which was frustrated by A. W. U. Pope, General Manager of the company. Mr. Pope found a revolutionary inside the station and disarmed him. Then he telephoned the British Consul that the railway property was threatened, whereupon the British volunteers of Shanghai were called out and mounted guard over the station and outlying properties.

This action has caused much comment, because this section of the railway is entirely outside the concession. The apparent breach of neutrality is defended, because the British bondholders claim a prior right in the railway property. The revolutionaries say they were prepared to maintain order, and while they intended to seize the railway they did not mean to destroy it. Therefore the British Consul's action in calling out the British volunteers is regarded by the revolutionists as the first breach of neutrality, and its effect may be far-reaching.

Throughout the night seventy armed Britishers stood guard over the railway property, while on the other side of the road an equal number of uniformed Chinese police, wearing the white badge, were drawn up, asserting the right, on the behalf of the Chinese revolutionary government, to maintain order.

The occupation of Shanghai is strategically the most important recent movement of the Chinese rebels. Though not the capital of its province, Kiang-Su, Shanghai is the great emporium for the trade of the Yang-tse and northern and Korean ports. The annual imports and exports aggregate more than $200,000,000. The population is estimated at about 500,000, of whom some 10,000 are foreigners.

Of the total population about one-half is resident within the foreign concessions, where, though the natives have no right of residence, they have sought protection at the time of earlier rebel movements and invasion from other parts of the empire.

The native town, which is inclosed by a wall, is small, being only about one mile in diameter, but immediately outside of it are populous suburbs, which probably were included in the revolutionary movement.

Shanghai is situated on the left bank of the Hwang-Pu, which joins the estuary of the Yang-tse River, where that broad channel opens into the sea. It is about twelve miles from the sea coast and 160 miles east by southeast of Nanking.

YUN-NAN PROVINCE SECEDES.

China's Switzerland, Rich in Mineral Deposits, Declares Its Independence.

SHANGHAI, China, Nov. 3.—The Province of Yun-Nan, on the southwestern frontier of China, has declared its independence, according to reports received here to-day.

Yun-Nan is the southwesternmost province of China, fronting on Thibet and Burma. It is a mountainous region, known as the Switzerland of China, and has an area of nearly 150,000 square miles—about three times that of New England. Its population is estimated at 12,000,000.

Yun-Nan contains China's richest mineral deposits and boundless stores of anthracite coal. Agricultural and stock raising are extensively carried on, and the province produces some of the best grades of tea in the empire. It was the principal scene of the great Mohammedan rebellion, which lasted for sixteen years, and was suppressed in 1872.

FOR CEASING HOSTILITIES.

Rebels Ask Gen. Li to Do So Pending Peking Developments.

SHANGHAI, China, Nov. 3.—The revolutionary leaders here have telegraphed Gen. Li Yuan-Heng, the head of the rebel movement, advising him to cease hostilities pending developments at Peking. Their message is being forwarded to Gen. Li from Wu-Hu by a special dispatch boat.

The latest advices from Hankow give assurance that the foreign concessions are safe, and have not been seriously disturbed by the rioting in the native city. Dispatches describe the situation there on the night of Nov. 1 as appalling. An enormous conflagration was sweeping over over the city, and fighting was in progress in several quarters between considerable bodies of rebels and loyalists. The imperial batteries were lifting explosive shells into the native quarter, while the rebels on the other side of the river had brought long-range guns into play from the Wu-Chang fortifications, and were firing with fair effect on the loyalists' positions. The fighting was clearly visible from the European concessions, and several stray shells dropped in the British concession, but without doing serious damage.

The Viceroy of Canton has dispatched a gunboat to this city to transport an immense supply of ammunition, firearms, and Maxims, which he has contracted for with foreign firms here.

HANKOW, Nov. 3.—Representatives of the British Consulate to-day visited Gen. Li Yuen-Heng, the leader of the revolutionists, and protested against the firing upon a British ship by the rebels.

Gen. Li this morning warned the Consuls at Wu-Chang that the forts held by the rebels would bombard the Imperial batteries situated behind the British and Russian concessions unless these batteries were removed. He declared such a step would be rendered necessary by the fact that the presence of the batteries endangered the foreign concessions. The Consuls thereupon asked the Imperial General, Chang, to move the batteries, which he promised to do.

BERLIN, Nov. 3.—Dispatches received to-day from Tsing-Tao, in the German territory of Kiao-Chow, announce that fifty German marines have gone from that city to strengthen the foreign guard at Tien-Tsin.

Tien-Tsin is the port of Peking, and is now crowded with refugees from the Chinese capital.

WU-SUNG FALLS.

Rebels Expected to Take Nanking and Ching-Kiang To-day.

WU-SUNG, Province of Kiang-Su, Nov. 3.—The imperial forts here have been entirely taken over by the rebels. There was no disturbance, and the telegraph lines have not as yet been interrupted. Wu-Sung is ten miles north of Shanghai.

It is confidently believed that Nanking and Ching-Kiang will be captured by the rebels to-morrow.

CENTRAL AMERICAN FERMENT

Honduras Revolt Grows—That Country and Guatemala Threaten Salvador.

PUERTO CORTEZ, Honduras, Nov. 1. (Delayed in transmission.)—Government troops defeated 200 revolutionists under the leadership of Ocho Velisquiz, a member of the Cabinet of Honduras, in a desperate battle on Sunday. The rebel losses are said to be heavy. Velisquiz escaped into Salvador.

Another engagement took place on Sunday at San Pedro Sula, where a number of rebels were wounded and thirty-eight captured while planning an attack upon military headquarters in that city.

Still more serious trouble is reported on the Salvadorean frontier, where Gen. Carias is reported to be at the head of a large body of revolutionists. Carias is said to have invaded Honduras from Salvador on Oct. 21 with several hundred former adherents of Zelaya, who ruled Nicaragua, and whose influence extended into Honduras. These revolutionists have been in exile from Honduras for a year or more.

In connection with this uprising trouble is threatened between Honduras and Guatemala on the one hand and the Government of Salvador on the other. Guatemala and Honduras have made a demand upon Salvador to either deport or imprison a large number of exiles of the two former countries, who are charged with fomenting revolutions.

Guatemala is said to have massed 25,000 troops along the Salvadorean border, and Honduras has placed along the frontier several thousand well-armed troops. Nicaragua, it is said, has given the Honduras and Guatemalan Governments assurances that she will assist in enforcing their demands against Salvador.

MUST GO TO ROME.

New Cardinals to Visit Eternal City to Receive Red Hats.

ROME, Nov. 3.—Pope Pius has decided that the dignitaries to be created Cardinals at the consistory on Nov. 29, must come to Rome to receive their red hats except the Spanish and Austrian candidates, who by the terms of the Concordat with their countries, must receive the beretta through their sovereigns.

On other occasions, as in the case of the late Cardinal Satolli, who was Papal Delegate in the United States, the red hat was sent to America, but in the present instance the Pope wishes to avoid the period between this consistory and another later, during which otherwise the new Cardinals would hold office without the formal and official sanction. The expense of sending the Papal mission to America would be considerable, whether it fell upon the Holy See or the Cardinals themselves, and this feature also influenced his Holiness.

Plan Big Celebration for Farley.

When Cardinal Farley returns from Rome late in December a big celebration will be held in his honor. The plans for the celebration will be discussed at a special meeting to be held next Monday night at the residence of Mgr. Lavelle. The meeting has been called by Frank Smith, President of the Federation of Catholic Clubs. It is planned to make the celebration a civic one.

JAIL FOR GERMAN SPY.

Lieut. Schultz to Serve 21 Months for Espionage in England.

EXETER, England, Nov. 3.—Lieut. Philip M. Schultz of the Thirteenth German Hussars, stationed at Frankfort-on-Main, was convicted at the Devonshire Assizes to-day on the charge of spying. The German officer was sentenced by the Lord Chief Justice, Lord Alverstone, to twenty-one months' imprisonment.

Lieut. Schultz was arrested at Plymouth on Aug. 19 last. It was alleged by the prosecution that he was especially commissioned by the German authorities to obtain precise information as to how far the British Government was supporting France in the dispute over Morocco.

Attorney General Isaacs, in prosecuting the case, contended that there could be no doubt that Schultz was in the pay of the German Government.

New Austrian Cabinet.

VIENNA, Nov. 3.—The new Ministry of Count Steurgh was formed to-day as follows: Premier, Count Steurgh; Minister of the Interior, Dr. K. Heinold d'Udynski; Minister of Commerce, Dr. von Roessler; Minister of Railways, Dr. von Forster; Minister of Education, Dr. Hussarek von Heinlein; Minister of Works, Herr Trnka, and Minister of Agriculture, Ritter von Zaleski Wenzei. The Ministers of Justice, Finance, and National Defense remain the same as in the last Cabinet.

MOROCCAN TREATY TERMS DISCLOSED

France Cedes 96,525 Miles to Germany, Who Recognizes Protectorate.

GERMAN DISSATISFACTION

Compensation Inadequate, Says Colonial Secretary, Whose Resignation Follows the Councilor's.

PARIS, Nov. 3.—The contents of the Franco-German accord, officially made public to-day, show that Germany recognizes the right of France to establish a protectorate in Morocco, while both nations engage to obtain the adhesion to this accord of the other signatories to the Algeciras agreement.

France, as compensation for German recognition of her protectorate in Morocco, cedes to Germany about 250,000 square kilometers, or about 96,525 square miles, in Northern French Congo, touching the German Kameruns. The territory ceded is inhabited by about 1,000,000 negroes, and has a commerce valued at $2,400,000 annually. The new German frontier starts at Monda Bay and extends to the Sanga River, thence to Kandeko, thence through the Congo, finally attaining Lake Tchad by way of the Ubanga and Logone Rivers.

France retains the right to run railroad lines across German territory, so as to connect the different parts of French Central Africa. The accord does not affect Togoland, but Germany cedes her "duck's bill," extending from the Charl River to the Logone River. France and Germany agree to submit to The Hague Tribunal all difficulties arising from the operation of the accord.

In reference to Morocco, France agrees to safeguard the economic equality and commercial liberty for which provision is made in existing treaties. The only reference to commercial rights in the ceded territory is the mutual agreement to take over the rights and obligations in connection with the companies holding concessions there.

The whole French press is pleased over the conclusion of the Franco-German accord as terminating a four months' political crisis which looked at times as though it might result in war, and while deploring the loss of so much of the French Congo, hails with satisfaction the creation of a great French empire in the north of Africa, consisting of Tunis, Algeria, and Morocco.

The Temps says: "The historic work commenced by Charles X. is thus crowned by the Third Republic."

BERLIN, Nov. 3.—Revelations of dissensions in the Government, on the eve of the Moroccan debate in the Reichstag, have greatly weakened the positions of Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg and the Foreign Secretary, Herr von Kiderlen-Waechter.

The Secretary of State for the Colonies, Dr. Lindequist, to-day renewed his request that his resignation, tendered last Summer, be accepted. Later the Chancellor requested an audience with the Emperor, to whom, according to an inspired statement, he recommended the immediate acceptance of Dr. Lindequist's resignation, and to-night it is announced that the Emperor has acted on his advice. The Colonial Secretary asked during the Summer that he be permitted to retire because of his dissatisfaction over the compensation which Germany was to receive for certain concessions to France in Morocco. The Emperor refused to release him because the Franco-German negotiations were pending. Last Saturday Dr. Lindequist denied that he intended to withdraw from the Cabinet.

The Councilor of the Colonial Office, Herr von Danckelmann, also resigned to-day, and it is believed that the explanation in his case will also be found in dissatisfaction over the German compensation.

In making public the treaty the Foreign Office issued this statement:

"The German Government believes that both parties can be in accord over the contents of the new treaty. It will have a calming effect not only upon conditions between Germany and France, but also upon the general political situation.

"Germany stands at the conclusion of this treaty in the same position as to French undertakings in Morocco as does England. It is especially emphasized that England has not interfered in the negotiations."

COLOGNE, Germany, Nov. 3.—A dispatch to The Cologne Gazette from Berlin says that the resignation of the Councilor of the Colonial Office, Herr von Danckelmann, accompanying the "indiscretions" of the press, disclose most unjustifiable conditions The "indiscretions" assert that the Colonial Office is not willing to accept responsibility for the treaty, and, apparently, the dispatch says, this is correct.

"An attempt of this kind, by a subordinate of the department, to make more difficult the imperial Chancellor's position, no matter who is in the right, is utterly unpermissible," the newspaper declares, and adds that "in the interest of good government there is no doubt that the Chancellor will take the necessary steps to follow up the matter."

$870,000 LONDON, ONT., FIRE.

Flames Destroy Several Stores in Business Section—500 Employes Idle.

LONDON, Ontario, Nov. 3.—A destructive fire broke out in the business section of the city this morning, and before the flames were subdued damage amounting to $870,000 had been done. Five hundred people were thrown out of employment.

The fire originated in the store of J. H. Chapman & Co., and when discovered the place was a seething furnace. The flames were shooting across the street. In a few minutes firemen had fifteen streams playing on the blaze, but it was impossible to save the adjoining property. The plants of the Purdon Hardware Company, the Chapman Company, and many others were totally destroyed.

The loss is mainly covered by insurance. The firemen were in constant danger from falling walls, but no one was seriously injured.

100 DIE IN MEXICAN RISING.

This Loss Is Reported in Fight with Rebels Against Juchitan Mayor.

SALINA CRUZ, Oaxaca, Mexico, Nov. 3.—Refugees arriving here to-day from Juchitan, on the Pan-American Railway, report that a rebellion has broken out against the new Mayor of Juchitan.

In a fight between 300 Federal soldiers and a mob inside the town it is reported that 100 rebels were killed. This estimate is believed here, however, to be exaggerated.

The rebels were led by a local attorney, José Gomez, who had been deposed as Mayor of the town.

TO POPULARIZE CONSOLS.

British Financiers Seek to Restore Public Confidence in Them.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Leading bankers and financiers are conferring with the object of devising some means to restore public confidence in consols.

A favorite plan suggests ultimate redemption and the Chancellor of the Exchequer will be asked to receive a deputation to discuss the subject. Some insurance companies have written the consols down to 75.

PARENTS KILLED AT A FIRE.

Wife, Seeing Husband Die, Jumps to Death—Two Children Hurt.

Tenants of the house at 250 Powell Street, East New York, were driven to the windows early yesterday morning when a fire which started in the basement, cut off their escape by the stairs. Julius Shapiro and his wife Rose, aroused by the smoke, hurried their five children to the front windows and shouted for help.

They were on the third floor, but Policeman Goodman of the Brownsville Station found that he could almost reach their windows from the cornice over a store to which he climbed. Shapiro handed down Aaron, 7 years old, and Sidney, fifteen months, to Goodman, and was trying to help 15-year-old George and 12-year-old Sadie, when he lost his balance. He and the children fell. The boy and girl struck the cornice and bounced off into the street, the boy with a broken leg and the girl badly cut and bruised. Shapiro landed on the pavement on his head and was killed instantly.

From another window Mrs. Shapiro, her hair and nightgown on fire, saw her husband fall, and with a cry jumped after him. She landed close beside him and died before an ambulance surgeon reached her. Samuel, a 16-year-old son, had lowered himself from a window, dropped to the cornice, and jumped to the street. He was unhurt.

George and Sadie were taken to St. Mary's Hospital, and the other children were cared for by an uncle, Aaron Wagner, of 559 Sutter Avenue. The death of their parents left them penniless, as broken health had prevented Shapiro from doing more than making a bare living in the last few years. Neighbors last night took up a collection for the children, though their uncle has agreed to give them a home.

WHAT MEANS "HIGH JINKS"?

Momentous Question Argued in the Court of General Sessions.

Just what the phrase "high jinks" means was discussed before Judge O'Sullivan in General Sessions yesterday in the argument on a demurrer filed by Samuel L. Weller, publisher of The New York Review, a weekly theatrical paper, owned by the Shuberts, to his indictment for criminal libel for publishing an article so describing a show that was to take place at the home of Abraham Erlanger instead of on the New York Theatre Roof.

Terence McManus, counsel for Mr. Weller, read this definition from the Standard Dictionary:

> High Jinks, (slang,) lively but boisterous sport.

Then he quoted from Barham's "Ingoldsby Legends":

> There was nothing but sport
> And high jinks coming on
> Night and day at the court.

Assistant District Attorney Delehanty said that, although the dictionary might say that high jinks meant only play and sport, the article in The Review didn't mean play when it mentioned that high jinks were to take place at the Erlanger home, but meant that there was going to be "a grand old time, with all the trimmings."

HUNGRY THIEVES FREED.

Judge Believes Brothers' Story and Priest Promises to Get Them Work.

"We stole because we had nothing to eat for three days and couldn't find work in this country," pleaded Max and Walter Muller, two boys from Germany, when arraigned before Judge O'Sullivan in General Sessions yesterday for sentence after pleading guilty to taking a package from an express wagon a month ago at 124th Street and Broadway.

"We had been only five months in this country and didn't know much of the English language," the boys said, through an interpreter. "We had been at work in the country, but came here expecting to get better employment. We failed, and for three days before we were arrested slept in the parks, and had nothing to eat."

Judge O'Sullivan, in suspending sentence, said that it was evident that the boys had no criminal instinct and were driven to break the law through hunger. The Rev. Thomas Lynch of the Catholic Protective Society promised to get work for them.

MOTHER MORTALLY BURNED.

Dying After Vain Effort to Save Child Whose Clothing Was Ablaze.

Returning to her home on the top floor of 142 Steuben Street Jersey City, after a shopping tour last night, Mrs. Annie Wizenewski heard the screams of her three-year-old daughter, Annie. She found the little one running along the hall with her clothing on fire. Catching her daughter up Mrs. Wizenewski ran into the flat and throwing the child on the bed attempted to stifle the fire with the bed clothing. Instead the clothes caught fire.

When the neighbors got in they found the woman horribly burned, and unconscious on the floor. The bed was in flames, and the child was dead. The mother is dying in the City Hospital.

SMITH IN CAMPAIGN TO DEFEAT WILSON

Ex-Senator's Business Trip to the West Had Political Purpose, Too.

HE IS OUT FOR HARMON

But Conferred Also with Clark and Underwood Men on Plans to Sidetrack Wilson as Candidate.

The return of ex-United States Senator James Smith, Jr., of Newark, N. J., from a trip to the West which was supposed to be purely for business purposes has revealed the fact that he spent much time in conference with men who will oppose Gov. Woodrow Wilson as a Presidential candidate at the Democratic National Convention next year. That the former boss of the Democratic Party in New Jersey still smarts under the blow administered to his political ambition by Gov. Wilson is known. His recent activity in National politics is taken by many politicians in New Jersey as an indication that he means to get even with Gov. Wilson, who defeated his attempt to return to the Senate.

While Mr. Smith was in Chicago he was in conference with men who are large factors in National politics. It is known that he obtained the opinions of such men as Roger Sullivan of Illinois, Jerry B. Sullivan of Iowa, Thomas Taggart of Indiana, and Daniel J. Campau of Michigan. He also had talks with men in Ohio whose sentiments are strongly in favor of Gov. Harmon, and men in Missouri who are equally strong for Speaker Champ Clark.

Mr. Smith is not talking for publication regarding his trip to the West, but he has talked to close political friends. He is said to have told them of the strong sentiment in the Middle West for Gov. Harmon, and that he found no Wilson sentiment there. Mr. Smith himself is for Gov. Harmon, and looks upon Representative Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama as an ideal man for the second place on the National ticket.

Mr. Smith is said to have learned while in the West that among the anti-Wilson Democrats there is a strong sentiment for Underwood. It is understood that the New Jersey boss has argued with some of the men favoring Underwood that it would be easier to raise a campaign fund with Harmon as the candidate than it would be with Underwood. He has also argued, in exchange of confidences with his friends, that a division can be figured by which Gov. Wilson will lose Alabama and Georgia in the convention.

It is said that in the East Mr. Smith counts very largely on the New York leaders and on the assistance of National Chairman Norman E. Mack. There have been persistent rumors that Mr. Smith and Mr. Mack figured in a recent conference of party leaders in New York and the candidate for President on the ticket for 1912 is said to have received much attention.

The former New Jersey Senator is credited with being the main factor behind an anti-Wilson movement with the chief purpose of systematically stifling the Wilson sentiment throughout the country, but more especially in the Middle West and in the South.

WILSON TO REPUBLICANS.

Advises Them to Get Into Line with the Real Leaders of the People.

Gov. Woodrow Wilson spoke yesterday in Hudson County in support of Nicholas P. Wedin, Democratic candidate for Sheriff, and Mayor H. Otto Wittpenn, who is seeking re-election as Mayor of Jersey City. In the afternoon the Governor visited the Old Soldiers' Home at Kearney, and after dining with State Senator James F. Fielden in Jersey City, went to St. Patrick's Hall, where a year ago he made his first political speech.

A number of Republicans were in the audience of 1,500, and the Governor addressed himself particularly to them. He declared that as far as he could see the only object of the Republican Party in New Jersey was to put the Governor out of business, and that whenever a Republican Governor had tried to do something for the people he had got "cold feet."

"Professed Republicans," the Governor went on, "who vote for the Republican candidates will throw their votes away. All through the United States is coming a new line of cleavage. If you are sincere believers in the rights of the people, join the hosts that have discovered the leaders of the people. Then shall we accomplish the deliverance of the United States.

"I would rather convert a Republican than lead an habitual Democrat. We are not fighting for the aggrandizement of the Democratic Party. I would rather have a vote that recorded thought than a vote that recorded blind loyalty. Go home and ask yourselves, not whether you are Democrats or Republicans, but what kind of citizens you are and what you are going to do.

"There is going to be a realignment this year, next year, and the year after that. You can't do anything with a party made up of men who do not agree with each other, and that is the way with the Republican Party now. The new era has come. We have got our guns, and it is the open season. We are going to shoot. Do not get into the wrong herd."

The Governor afterward addressed meetings in Hoboken and Weehawken.

GIVES SKIN TO SAVE BROTHER

13-Year-Old Girl Goes to Rescue of Boy Burned in Bonfire.

To save the life of her brother, Olive Higbie, thirteen years old, of 3,430 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, has offered to give some of her own skin. On Oct. 10, Franklin Higbie, who is only four, fell into the bonfire and was badly burned on both legs. He failed to improve and skin grafting was decided upon to save his life.

His sister heard of this and offered to give some of her skin. The operation will be performed on Monday by Dr. J. C. Bogart at Kings County Hospital. He will be assisted by Drs. Robert Moore, C. W. Graham, and Frank Lett.

A MERGER OF ALL WOOLWORTH STORES

About Six Hundred 5 and 10 Cent Shops to be Run by One Company.

BUSINESS TO BE WORLD WIDE

Organized Now and Running in United States, Canada, and England—Headquarters Remains Here.

Plans have been completed for the incorporation of the F. W. Woolworth Company, which will mean the amalgamation under the same management of more than 600 five and ten cent stores in the United States, Canada, and England. F. W. Woolworth, head of F. W. Woolworth & Co. gave out this information yesterday, and said that while at present the announcement covered only the five and ten cent fields in this country, Canada, and England, the plan contemplates eventually stores in all parts of the world.

Mr. Woolworth said that the new corporation would take over the business of F. W. Woolworth & Co. of New York, S. H. Knox & Co. of Buffalo, F. W. Kirby & Co. of Wilkesbarre, Penn.; E. P. Charlton & Co. of Fall River, Mass.; C. S. Woolworth of Scranton, Penn.; W. H. Moore & Son of Schenectady, and also a controlling interest in the business of F. W. Woolworth & Co., Ltd., of England. The shares of the new corporation will be divided into $15,000,000 7 per cent. preferred and $50,000,000 common stock.

It is stated that Goldman, Sachs & Co. and Lehman Brothers of New York and Kleinwort Sons & Co. of London will acquire an interest in the securities of the new company when it is organized.

"The plan of the new company," said Mr. Woolworth yesterday, "contemplates the operation of five and ten cent stores in every city of over 10,000 population in the United States, Canada, and England, and possibly, some day, in every country on earth. In other words, one of the objects of the company is to play wherever we can make money, no matter where the place is.

"Already there are 600 stores in operation that will be controlled by the new company, about 560 of which are in the United States. The rest are in Canada and England. It is impossible at this time to even guess the number that will eventually be in operation in this and other countries. The combined sales of the stores in the company that is to be incorporated amounted last year to over $50,000,000. These stores employ about 20,000 persons. The head office of the new company will be here in New York in the new Woolworth Building that is in process of construction at 233 Broadway."

Mr. Woolworth said that he would be the President of the new company. He said the names of the other officers and the Directors would not be made public until after the incorporation.

VISITING PHYSICIAN SLAIN IN STREET

Casual Acquaintance, with Whom He Quarreled Over a Trivial Matter, Is Locked Up.

FATE PLAYED AN ODD TRICK

If Dr. Hoye of Newcastle, Penn., Had Found Room in His Usual Boarding Place He Might Be Alive.

Dr. J. C. Hoye, one of the best-known physicians of Newcastle, Penn., who had been in the habit of coming to this city every year for special work in obstetrics in the Post Graduate and the Polyclinic Hospitals, died yesterday in Bellevue Hospital of a beating he got early yesterday morning while walking toward his boarding house in Second Avenue.

Dr. Hoye, who was 45 years old, came to this city on Thursday and went to a boarding house at 312 Second Avenue, at which he had been in the habit of staying while in this city.

Dr. Hoye found a number of acquaintances at the boarding house who remembered his last visit a year ago. He had already written to the boarding house that a room be reserved for him, but he had said in the letter that he would arrive on Wednesday. When he didn't arrive on that day the landlady had rented the room reserved for him.

At her suggestion, Dr. Hoye went across the street and got a room at 303. Then, according to the police, he went out to a nearby café. In the café was a short, thick-set, rather good-looking man with whom the doctor fell into conversation. The two men exchanged addresses and the doctor, according to the police and his friends, became suspicious when the stranger said that he lived at 312 Second Avenue.

"You can't possibly live there, for I have known all the boarders for years," Dr. Hoye is said to have told the short, thick-set man. "Furthermore, let me warn you that I have been buncoed several times before and I've grown wise. Don't try any games on me."

At that the two men got into a furious argument as to whether or not the thick-set man really did live at 312. Finally they both went over to the landlady to have her decide. The landlady told Dr. Hoye that the thick-set man really did live in the house, that he had become a boarder since the physician's last visit, and that he was Theodore Schneider, a cloth cutter.

Schneider by this time was so furious at having been doubted that he struck Dr. Hoye. Miss Sadie Steiner, one of the boarders, who had known Dr. Hoye, interfered and took the physician to her room and made him tell her the news from his home, hoping to separate the two men. The two men met again several times later during the day, and each time Schneider, according to the other boarders, threatened Dr. Hoye.

Dr. Hoye went out to take a walk along Second Avenue late Thursday night, and early yesterday morning he was found lying unconscious at Eighteenth Street and Second Avenue with a big bruise on his forehead. Miss Steiner says she heard Schneider enter the boarding house softly and go to his room about the same hour that the physician was found lying in the street.

Dr. Hoye was taken to Bellevue, where he was found to be suffering from a fractured skull. Central Office Detectives John J. Taft and Stanislaus J. Taczkowski arrested Schneider in his room yesterday on Miss Steiner's complaint and took him before Magistrate McQuade in the Yorkville Police Court. The Magistrate held him in $10,000 bail to await the result of Dr. Hoye's injuries. Dr. Hoye died in the hospital shortly after Schneider's arraignment. Schneider will probably be rearraigned on a homicide charge to-day.

Dr. Hoye had telephoned to his family at 17 West North Street, Newcastle, on Thursday night, saying that he had been unable to get a room in the boarding house he usually went to. While studying here last Spring Dr. Hoye was attacked and robbed by east side thugs of his watch, chain, and stick pin.

Mrs. Hoye is now in California nursing a sick son by a former marriage. Miss Clara Hoye, a grown-up daughter, lives at Franklin, Penn.

FORFEITS $1,500 BAIL.

Wadie Tannoos of Bankrupt Company Fails to Appear at Hearing.

United States Commissioner Alexander forfeited yesterday the $1,500 bail of Wadie Tannoos, President of the Egyptian Importing Company of 101 Washington Street, which went into bankruptcy six weeks ago. Tannoos was held in $1,500 under a writ of ne exeat to appear yesterday for examination before the Commissioner, but did not appear. He is believed to have gone to Los Angeles, to which place, it is alleged, a large amount of the stock of the company was shipped before the bankruptcy.

Leon Labe, Treasurer of the concern, was on a honeymoon trip to Cuba with his bride of 16 when the bankruptcy petition was filed, and was induced by his wife to return to exonerate himself from the blame of the failure. He declares that he was not responsible for the cash and the stock, which disapeared in his absence.

SMUGGLED GLASS EYES.

Customs Men Uncover Illicit Trade and Arrests Are Expected To-day.

The Customs officials have uncovered a plot by which thousands of dollars' worth of the best grade glass eyes have been smuggled into this port from Germany. Federal officers raided the headquarters of the smugglers in Hoboken yesterday and seized about $1,000 worth of the smuggled eyes.

There was a private hearing yesterday afternoon in the office of Deputy Surveyor Smyth. Later in the afternoon a number of officials left the Custom House for Hoboken. Warrants, it is said, are to be issued to-day for two men known to have been in the illicit trade.

The smuggling of glass eyes has been going on for a long time. They were brought here, it is suspected, by men employed on a line of German steamships.

SCORES CARNEGIE FUND.

Foundation Helps Destroy Christian Faith, Says Mgr. McDevitt.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 3.—Declaring that it propagates doctrines logically destructive of Christian faith and morality, Mgr. Philip R. McDevitt attacks the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, in his annual report as Superintendent of parochial schools.

"No believer in Christianty," he says, "can view with indifference the principles and the policy of such a body in carrying out a supposedly high purpose of a multi-millionaire. Catholics in particular have reason to look with suspicion upon its activities.

"While expecting neither justice nor favor from those who openly deride and condemn the denominational school, Catholics must vigilantly guard their rights in education against the unwarranted and aggressive attacks of the administrators of the foundation, who, only a few months since, so interpreted their responsibility for the welfare of education in the State of Pennsylvania as to justify their efforts to prevent a Catholic college from receiving a university charter.

"Catholics can readily understand that the development of their higher education will be an impossibility if the Carnegie Foundation is allowed, without protest, to carry out its high-handed policy."

MAYOR ON MARRIAGE FEES.

Sends Advice to Man Who Paid $5 for City Hall Ceremony and Complained.

Ralph E. Cron of 313 East Twenty-seventh Street paid a $5 fee when he was married at the City Hall two weeks ago. He wrote to Mayor Gaynor complaining that the money had been "extorted" from him. The Mayor sent him this reply yesterday:

Nov. 3, 1911.

Dear Mr. Cron: You are mistaken in thinking that any one in the City Clerk's office or in the Marriage Bureau extorted a marriage fee from you. The trouble is that many of you people go to the City Clerk's office for a license and then desire to get some one to marry you there or in a room near by. If you would go away from the City Hall to your own clergyman or to some Magistrate all this trouble would be avoided. It is an old custom for those who perform the ceremony of marriage to expect a fee, and I know of no way of doing away with that custom. Indeed, most men who marry a girl want to pay a fee to the person who performs the marriage ceremony. If he wants to have it done for nothing he should go away to some minister or Magistrate who does not expect a fee. Men now come to the City Hall and, instead of going away with their license, go into another room and send for an Alderman to marry them, and then when the Alderman intimates that he wants a fee they raise trouble about it and write to me. I wish you would all go away from the City Hall and get married somewhere else, and then this trouble would be at an end. It is beyond my power to prevent an Alderman from expecting the usual marriage fee, and from giving a gentle hint that he wants it, if he be the sort of man that will do that sort of thing. If I had time I would marry you all for nothing. How would that go? It would evidently suit some of you, but ninety-nine out of every hundred would want to thrust a fee into my hand, for such is the good nature and generosity of the normal man to the man who marries him to the girl of his choice. Very truly yours,

W. J. GAYNOR, Mayor.

RALPH E. CRON, Esq., 313 East Twenty-seventh Street, New York City.

Just which Alderman performed the ceremony could not be learned yesterday.

CONFER ON TOBACCO PLAN.

Attorney General Meets Judges and Counsel for the Trust.

Attorney General Wickersham and Junius Parker, of counsel for the American Tobacco Company, had a conference yesterday with Judges Lacombe, Ward, Noyes, and Coxe of the Circuit Court, who are considering the plan for the reorganization of the trust. The conference had reference to certain data bearing on the case that was submitted on Thursday by Felix H. Levy, counsel for independent tobacco interests, and De Lancey Nicoll and Lewis Cass Ledyard of counsel for the trust.

Mr. Levy's data consisted of records of sales of the stock and bonds of the American Tobacco Company from just before the time the decree of the Supreme Court against the Tobacco Trust was handed down, on May 29, to just after the conclusion of the hearing in the Circuit Court on Oct. 27.

Attorney General Wickersham refused to comment on the conference held yesterday or to make any prognostication as to the time when the Circuit Court might render its decision on the plan.

SAY HE DROWNED HIS WIFE.

Moving Picture Operator Arrested When He Tries to Collect Insurance.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 3.—On a charge of having drowned his wife in the Wabash River on July 30, Albert Treichel, 32 years old, of Mount Carmel, Ill., was arrested here to-day. The charge was made when Treichel applied for $2,000 insurance on his wife's life.

Treichel and his wife were employed in a motion-picture theatre. She was the pianist and he the operator. On July 30 there was no performance and they planned an outing on the river. Mrs. Treichel was drowned and Treichel returned to St. Louis and rented rooms in a hotel conducted by William Brock, who formerly had known the Treichels.

A short time after his wife's death, Treichel sought to collect the insurance. The State Attorney at Mount Carmel was informed and filed information against him charging murder. Treichel appeared surprised when arrested and said he would gladly return to Illinois and face the charge. He said his wife was accidentally drowned.

DENOUNCE SCIENTIFIC PLAN.

War Department Machinists to Quit if Adopted in Federal Shops.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Denouncing the indorsement of the so-called "Taylor system" of scientific shop management by the Government as unjust and predicting a general walkout of the 7,000 or 8,000 machinists employed by the War Department should it be adopted, James O'Connell, President of the International Association of Machinists, issued a statement to-day in which he said the machinists were unalterably opposed to the system.

"If the Taylor system is put into operation in Government shops by Secretary Stimson, as he has stated," said O'Connell, "one of two things will result—either Congress will enact legislation relieving machinists of the unjust rigors of the so-called 'scientific shop management' or there will be a cessation of work."

LODGER POISONED; LANDLADY ACCUSED

Mrs. Vermilya, Suspected of Killing Nine, Directly Charged with Policeman's Death.

TO EXHUME OTHER BODIES

Two Husbands Among the Dead—Widow Morbidly Fascinated by Corpses—Ill on Eve of Arrest.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Mrs. Louise Vermilya to-day was formally charged with the murder of Policeman Arthur Bissonnette by poisoning him with arsenic, following the report of toxicologists who had examined the viscera of the dead man. Bissonnette was a roomer at the widow's home. Coroner Hoffman announced that he will have exhumed the bodies of at least two of the other eight persons who have died in the woman's home during the last eighteen years.

Prof. Walter L. Hains, Dr. Ralph W. Webster, and Dr. E. R. Le Count reported to the Coroner that they found more than enough arsenic in the liver and other organs of Bissonnette to have caused his death.

The woman, who has been under close police surveillance for several days, is ill with pneumonia, and her condition was such to-day that Police Captain Harding, who is in charge of the investigation, agreed to wait service of the warrant until to-morrow, but added several men to the guard watching the suspected widow.

Coroner Hoffman likewise became active, and obtained permits from relatives of former acquaintances of the widow, whose deaths now have come under suspicion, to exhume the bodies for toxicological examination.

There is a State law forbidding the use of arsenic in embalming, and the Coroner announced that if the poison was found in the bodies dug up the undertakers would be asked for certificates showing whether the law was disobeyed, and if it was not an effort would be made to connect the widow with the administering of the poison.

Just what bodies would be exhumed Coroner Hoffman declined to say. It was intimated, however, that one of them would be that of Conductor Richard T. Smith, who while living in the Vermilya home was taken suddenly ill and died under circumstances that since have aroused official curiosity. It developed that he had obtained life insurance a short time before, of which Mrs. Vermilya was to be the beneficiary.

The other persons whose deaths the authorities are investigating are:

BRINKAMP, FRED, first husband of Mrs. Vermilya; he left $5,000 to the widow.

VERMILYA, CHARLES, second husband, died two years ago, leaving $2,000.

BRINKAMP, FRANK, son by first marriage, died a year ago, leaving mother $1,200.

VERMILYA, HARRY J., stepson, died a year ago after quarrel with his stepmother over the sale of a house.

BRINKAMP, LILLIAN, granddaughter of Fred Brinkamp, died in 1906 at home of Mrs. Vermilya.

BRINKAMP, CORA, daughter, died when 8 years old at former home, Barrington, Ill.

BRINKAMP, FLORENCE, daughter, died at 4 years of age at Barrington.

When first examined after Bissonnette's death, Mrs. Vermilya declared the policeman was engaged to marry her. This was disproved by the discovery later of his will made only a short time before, leaving all his property amounting to about $1,500 to his fiancée, Miss Laura Rivard of Marshall, Minn. Other statements made by her also were proved to be untrue.

Reports received by the police from Peoria, Ill., where Mrs. Vermila formerly lived, indicated that corpses had possessed a morbid fascination for her, and that she had informally attached herself to an undertaking establishment there, and spent most of her leisure time aiding the employes. This was further established by the discovery of her friendship for an undertaker here.

Servant Causes Realty Man's Arrest.

On complaint of Ida Lundregen, laundress in the home of Douglas Robinson, a brother-in-law of ex-President Roosevelt, at 9 East Sixty-third Street, a man who said he was Ferdinand Dunton of North Sea Cliff, L. I., was arrested yesterday afternoon by Warrant Officers White and Morris of the Yorkville Court, and locked up in the East Sixty-seventh Street Police Station. He was arrested on a warrant signed by Magistrate Freschi on Nov. 1 in which it is charged that Dunton attempted to defraud the woman out of $500 in a real estate deal.

TRY LLOYD-GEORGE IN EFFIGY

Then Cedric Passengers Think Better of It and Hang His Accuser.

At a mock trial held on Thursday night in the smoking room of the White Star liner Cedric, in yesterday from Liverpool, it was the intention to try Lloyd-George in effigy for high treason. With straw taken from steerage mattresses, a frock coat borrowed from the bo'sun, the chief steward's silk hat, and a mask painted to represent the features of the man who may be the next British Premier, an excellent effigy was made and placed in the smoking room.

The Judge was Louis Oppenheim and the jury was composed of six women and six men. Thomas M. Alexander was the foreman. Fred Skull acted as counsel for the prosecution and W. Kelley represented Lloyd-George. The charges against the Minister were that he had destroyed the British Constitution by iniquitous land taxes and driven men like William M. Fison, one of the chief witnesses for the prosecution, who was emigrating to British Columbia, out of the country.

Mr. Fison, who was conspicuous on the Cedric by wearing a long leather coat and cap, told how he had been in the real estate business and had to leave England because he had to bear all his losses and pay a tax of 20 per cent. on his profits, and no business, he said, could be run that way.

The case looked bad for Lloyd-George, when a note was handed to the Judge, calling his attention to the fact that it would not look well to hang a future Prime Minister in effigy on a British ship. After a consultation with the prosecuting counsel, Fison was recalled and asked in severe tones if he had ever been guilty of stealing a sheep. He replied "certainly not." Then the jury brought in a verdict acquitting Lloyd-George and finding Fison guilty of bringing vexatious litigation and also of having once stolen a sheep at Nottingham Goose Fair.

Later Fison was hung in effigy.

No War in Europe, Says Gen. Gill.

Gen. John Gill of Baltimore returned from Europe yesterday on the Cedric, suffering from gout and a bad cold he caught in London. He said that there will not be any war in Europe, because none of the nations has any money except England, and that she will not fight. He added that the Channel tunnel would not be built, and then retired to his cabin. The General was accompanied by Mrs. Gill and his married daughter, Mrs. G. H. Thompson, with her three children.

PLEA FOR BRICK SUBWAY.

Unions of Bricklayers Declare They Need the Work.

An appeal for the use of brick rather than concrete in the new subway was made yesterday before the Public Service Commission by John Gill and Matthew J. Sullivan, who represented various unions with a membership of 40,000 men. They urged that concrete work had not yet been sufficiently tried out to be pronounced safe, and that experts had held brick work safer.

"Concrete work requires less labor," remarked Commissioner Eustis.

"Yes," said Mr. Gill.

"But brick work lasts forever," said Commissioner Cram.

"If the brick is well laid," put in Chairman Willcox, with caution.

Mr. Sullivan did not wish to enter into a technical argument, but said that they represented men who found it increasingly difficult to make a fair living, and that even if the labor on concrete cost less the city could afford to use bricks.

Chairman Willcox referred the matter to Chief Engineer Craven of the commission.

An Even Greater Trimming Sale Than Last Week's Stirring Event

A WEEK AGO WE ANNOUNCED the best sale of new and fashionable Trimmings in years—and appreciation was so prompt and general that not ten yards of the purchase were left to us.

A day or two ago we concluded another purchase which today will present equal values and even greater variety than before.

$4 to $25 Trimmings at 98c to $4.98 a Yard

These are some of the choicest Trimmings that ever came into this country. They were all imported for this season. And, until these two purchases, we had many of the identical designs in our own stocks for the full prices, which will indicate our judgment of their values.

They are not easy to describe, beyond saying that they are in beaded and embroidered effects in the Oriental and Egyptian colorings and exactly the same wonderful Trimmings that Paquin, Poiret, Lanvin and the other famous Parisian couturiers are using for their masterworks of women's dress.

Though sold by the yard, many are suitable to be separated and used as individual ornaments. They are of practically all widths which are desired. Not more than 3 to 6 yards in a piece and few duplicates.

The Sale completes the season's clearance by one of the oldest importers in America after the most extraordinarily successful season he has ever had.

Prices today, 98c. to $4.98 a yard—and the most astonishing values in all our experience.

POLICEMAN PAID DUES TO BARNES'S LEAGUE

Albany Captain, Though a Democrat, Admits He Was Elected and Asked to Give Up.

SECRETARY IN CONTEMPT

Haswell Refuses to Give Up Organization's Books—Chief of Police Tells About the Tenderloin.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Another effort was made to-day by James W. Osborne, counsel of the Albany Investigating Committee, to place on the records of the committee definite information as to the objects and methods of the Lincoln League, contributions to which, it had been shown, are made by Albany city and county officials. From certain witnesses Mr. Osborne had shown that the contributions were 3 per cent. of the salaries of the members. So it was also shown that the league was incorporated at the time that the Corrupt Practices act went into effect, and William Barnes, Jr., as a witness, recently said that the objects of the league were largely of a charitable nature. The league, he said, had carried several discharged State employes through the Winter last year and had contributed to hospitals and churches.

This afternoon Mr. Osborne called as a witness before the Senate committee George Haswell, who is Treasurer of the Lincoln League and who receives a salary of $2,000 a year. He was subpoenaed to bring books and papers showing the membership and the disbursements of the corporation. Mr. Haswell was accompanied by his counsel, John D. Lindsay of New York, who was permitted to make a preliminary statement to the committee. He said Mr. Haswell had been advised that until it had been shown that the affairs of the league were pertinent to the inquiry he should not answer questions.

Mr. Haswell gave details as to his election and said the league had 800 contributors. Then Mr. Lindsay advised him not to answer further. He refused to produce the books of the league and he refused to answer about twenty questions as to the membership and payments that had been made. Mr. Haswell was declared in contempt for his refusal to answer, the committee holding that the questions were pertinent, and the counsel of the committee was instructed to proceed against the witness. In the course of the examination Mr. Osborne declared he would obtain the indictment of Mr. Haswell unless he answered.

Early in the day, while Police Captain James Brennan was a witness, the subject of the Lincoln League was alluded to. The Captain said he was a member of the Lincoln League.

"How long have you been a Democrat, Captain?" Mr. Osborne asked.

"All my life," was the reply.

"And you are a member of the Lincoln League?"

"I am."

"How did you become a member of the league?"

"I cannot tell just how."

"Wasn't it this way?" Mr. Osborne continued. "You received a notice telling you of the dues, didn't you?"

"I suppose that is right."

Edward B. Cantine, Commissioner of Public Safety; Police Chief James Hyatt, and Capt. Brennan were questioned again in relation to the Police Department's policy in handling the disorderly resort problem. The Captain said he made no raid except on the order of the Chief. Mr. Hyatt said he had received general instructions to enforce the law in relation to such houses and to gambling, and he believed conditions had improved within the last ten years. Mr. Cantine said he had given instructions of a general character, but had not made an investigation to see whether or not the instructions were carried out.

Mr. Osborne took the ground that the Police Department should have engaged detectives from outside the city to obtain evidence which it was admitted the uniformed police could not get. He also introduced an affidavit from a woman who said a policeman had been stationed in front of her door, and when she asked the reason she was informed by a politician that it was because her father was a Democrat. She declared the policeman was removed when she induced her father to vote the Republican ticket.

District Attorney Rollin B. Sanford was recalled to testify as to indictments that had not been pressed for trial.

It was shown that the debt of Albany in 1904 was $2,569,825 and in 1911 had increased to $3,751,254. The increase is about 46 per cent. There has been an increase in the assessed valuation in the city of $20,000,000 in the last ten years. In that time the population has increased about 6,000.

The committee sat until late this evening to close up its work for the week. It adjourned until Tuesday, Nov. 14, and the county and city elections will be held before any more evidence is brought out. Mr. Osborne said he would call Anthony N. Brady as a witness week after next. It is believed that little more testimony will be taken. The members of the committee have worked in Albany almost continuously since last January, and they must be ready with their report early next January.

Johnston Livingston, who died on May 7 at his home, 309 Fifth Avenue, left a total estate of $6,087,920, of which more than $990,000 was realty, according to an appraisal filed yesterday in the State Transfer Tax office by Deputy Controller Julius Harburger.

Mr. Livingston held stock in many companies, his largest holdings being 1,000 shares in Adams Express Company at $243,000, 3,315 shares common stock of American Car and Foundry Company at $174,037.56, 1,554 preferred in the same company at $179,371.50, 600 shares preferred stock of American Cotton Oil Company at $62,100, 4,240 Great Northern Iron Ore Properties valued at $260,942.50, 7,600 shares of the Northern Pacific Railway Company at $948,100, 534 Procter & Gamble Company (common stock) at $212,245, 8,500 shares of common stock in the Southern Railway Company at $301,937.50, 1,500 shares of common stock in the Union Pacific Railway Company valued at $266,250, 1,000 shares of preferred stock in the same company at $94,750, a bond and mortgage of William N. MacLean valued at $250,000, 1,573 shares in the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railway Company (guaranteed stock) at $261,904.50, life insurance in the Mutual Life Insurance Company, which, with an unpaid dividend, is valued at $27,875, and 6,000 shares of preferred stock in the Great Northern Railway Company at $761,250.

AUTO KILLS OLD SOLDIER.

Alfred Wilcox of New Haven Run Down Near Noroton, Conn.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Nov. 3.—Alfred Wilcox, 72 years old, an inmate of the Soldiers Home at Noroton Heights, died to-day in the home from injuries, suffered earlier in the week, when an automobile, said to be the property of Anson Phelps Stokes, struck Wilcox and fractured his skull.

The chauffeur, Caeser Grosse, brought the unconscious soldier to the home after the accident. Wilcox came to the home from New Haven.

Mr. and Mrs. Stokes said to-night that they knew nothing of the accident. Mrs. Robert Hunter, their daughter, also disclaimed knowledge of a Stokes car being in any accident.

The Medical Examiner, Dr. Albert House, declined to-night to talk about the case. He said he had reported it to Coroner Wilson, but there would be no inquest.

NOT TO SUMMON ROOSEVELT.

District Attorney Drops Investigation of Gov. Foss's Charges.

BOSTON, Nov. 3.—District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier to-day took up Gov. Foss's charges that the Republican State Committee had been soliciting campaign contributions from corporations in violation of law. H. Clifford Gallagher, Treasurer; John A. Curtin, Secretary, and Charles S. Groves, Executive Secretary of that committee, appeared at the Court House, and were closeted for some time with the District Attorney.

John F. McDonald, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, was another visitor, who responded to the call of Mr. Pelletier. Mr. McDonald brought with him the books of the Treasurer, which he invited the District Attorney to inspect and ascertain if any contributions had been received from corporations in violation of the statutes. The District Attorney will look over the books later. He said to-day that no evidence showing a contribution by any corporation to either State Committee had been presented.

District Attorney Pelletier has decided not to summon ex-President Theodore Roosevelt and the other editors of The Outlook whose names were submitted by Gov. Foss in connection with the unsigned advertisement.

After the District Attorney had decided that he had no ground for action on the charges made by Gov. Foss against the Republican State Committee, the Governor to-night addressed another letter to Mr. Pelletier,, referring to more campaign literature and asking that the District Attorney take action.

The matter of which the Governor's letter of this evening speaks is a circular addressed "To Every One Connected with the Insurance Business" and bearing the names of H. L. Kerrigan, P. W. Linscott, and Arthur W. Burke, purporting to be a committee representing the Industrial Accident Insurance Companies of Massachusetts.

"This circular," says the letter of Gov. Foss, "is being distributed for the purpose of influencing voters in the pending election, in clear violation of Chapter 581, Section 3, Acts of 1907, and Chapter 483, Section 1, Acts of 1908, forbidding certain acts by moneyed corporations and defining certain limitations upon the use of money in elections."

The circular discussed the Workingmen's Compensation act passed by the last Legislature and says in effect that an effort is being made to secure the repeal of that portion of the law permitting all companies authorized to write liability insurance to participate in writing this form of insurance. It says that the repeal of this provision would put the business in the hands of one company and create a monopoly.

"It is clearly apparent from Gov. Foss's own statements that he is in favor of the monopoly and opposed to the insurance companies, the brokers, and the agents," is the concluding sentence of the circular.

START BIG EDISON TURBINE.

It Can Supply Electricity for 350,000—Illness Keeps Inventor Home.

Thomas A. Edison was prevented by a severe cold, which he caught while witnessing the battleship review on the preceding day, from starting the new giant turbine electric generator in service yesterday in the Edison Company's waterside station at First Avenue and Thirty-eighth Street.

His place was taken by George B. Cortelyou, President of the Consolidated Gas Company, and the process of transferring to the turbine the power or load from the seven huge reciprocating engines on one side of the long building was watched with keen interest by a party of engineers and electricians, including C. A. Coffin, President of the General Electric Company, which built the turbine; C. F. McComb, chief engineer of the Department of Water Supply, Gas, and Electricity; N. F. Brady, Vice President of the Edison Company; J. W. Lieb, Jr., Arthur Williams, B. A. Behrend, C. K. Nichols, and Robert Grier Cook.

The new turbine is the most powerful electric generating machine in the world. It can do all the work of the seven reciprocating engines, and yet these, when installed seven years ago, represented the most advanced progress in electric generators. Eventually there will be three of these immense turbines in operation at the station.

The turbine has a capacity of 30,000 horse power, sufficient to supply all the current for a city of 350,000 inhabitants, and it could give power for a chain of cities such as Albany, Syracuse, and Utica. In lighting ability it could furnish power for over 1,000,000 incandescent lights of sixteen candle power each.

The turbine is about 35 feet high and covers 297 square feet of floor space, but a trifle more than one of the old vertical engines. Its weight is 420 tons, the diameter of the wheels 13 feet and each travels at a rate of about six miles a minutes, or over 8,600 miles a day. To keep it in operation 400 tons of coal are required every twenty-four hours to furnish the necessary 7,200,000 pounds of steam.

One of the electricians present stated that he figured that the total electric generating plant of all the battleships on review in the Hudson approximated only 27,000 electrical horse power.

Howard Gould Home After a Year.

Howard Gould returned yesterday on the Lusitania from Europe, after a year's absence. He appeared to be in excellent health and spirits, and said that his time had been passed in motoring 20,000 miles through England, France, Germany, Italy, and Algeria. Mr. Gould added that he had been out of touch with business conditions so long that he did not know anything of conditions anywhere.

Harris and Blanck Plead Not Guilty.

Max Blanck and Isaac Harris, owners of the Triangle Waist Company, where 147 girls lost their lives in a fire on March 25, pleaded not guilty to the seven indictments charging them with manslaughter in the first and second degrees before Judge O'Sullivan in General Sessions yesterday. Judge O'Sullivan said he would hear arguments to-day upon their motion for a bill of particulars.

RICHESON TO CHARGE CRIME TO ANOTHER

His Lawyer, J. L. Lee, Says He Hopes to Present Evidence to Prove Other Man's Guilt.

PRISONER RESIGNS CHARGE

Writes to Congregation That He Is Strong in the Consciousness of His Innocence.

BOSTON, Nov. 3.—John L. Lee of Lynchburg, Va., senior counsel for the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, who is under indictment by the Grand Jury charged with murder, discussed the Linnell murder briefly to-day before leaving Boston for home.

"Mr. Richeson is innocent," he said. "Of that I am convinced. My talks with him, my own observation of the case, and my conferences with counsel have opened up a way by which I shall eventually free him."

Mr. Lee said he hoped to accumulate enough evidence to satisfy a jury of the guilt of another man, but further than this he would not disclose the plans of the defense.

"The public has heard only the Government's side of this case," he added. "I do not believe there are twelve men in this part of the country, who, at the end of the trial, would declare that he was the man gave poison to Avis Linnell."

The remarks of the attorney were taken as indicating that the defense would not advance the suicide theory to explain the girl's death.

Attaches of the District Attorney's office said to-day that the Government's case in ouline practically is complete, and that if the minister's trial were to begin next week the prosecution would be in a position to proceed. It is admitted, however, that no witness to a meeting of Miss Linnell and Richeson on Oct. 14, the day of her death, has yet been found. The Government, it is understood, is relying on the belief that the testimony of the unfortunate girl's mother, Mrs. Edgar Linnell of Hyannis, will place her daughter in the company of Richeson on Wednesday, Oct. 11, the day after the minister is said to have purchased cyanide of potassium at a Newton Centre drug store.

There was much interest to-night in the meeting at the Immanuel Baptist Church, Cambridge, which was held to act on the pastor's letter of resignation, the text of which was made public to-day. It was dated at the Charles Street Jail on Nov. 1, and addressed to Charles F. Cummings, clerk of Immanuel Church. It says:

> My dear Sir: I beg to herewith tender my resignation as pastor of Immanuel Church. Strong in the consciousness of my innocence and firmly persuaded that God in His own good time will lift this burden from me, I nevertheless feel that I should not permit the shadow thrown across my life to darken the religious welfare of my church and its people, whom I love. I therefore deem it my duty to place the church in a position to select my successor.
>
> With my heartfelt thanks for the many kindnesses shown me by each and all of the members of my church, I am, sincerely yours, CLARENCE V. T. RICHESON.

The letter was not made public until after John L. Lee had left for Virginia.

ATTACKS BUDGET FIGURES.

Congestion Committee Says Cleaner Homes Would Cut Health Item.

An attack on the new city budget of approximately $189,000,000 was made yesterday by the Congestion Committee in a bulletin signed by Arthur C. Ludington, Richard S. Childs, and Frederic C. Howe.

Taking up the appropriation of $7,645,281 for the Health and Charities Department, and Bellevue and allied hospitals, the Congestion Committee declares that while this sum, and even more, could be wisely spent in relieving the poor of the city, so large an amount would be entirely unnecessary if the city would follow the policy which the committee advocates for encouraging the people to live in a sanitary way, by providing such houses for them through a system of less taxation on houses than on land.

The present system, it is declared, encourages the continuance of dark rooms, and necessitates high rents and overcrowding, low wages, and unemployment, and it is largely these things which are responsible for the expenditure of the large sums in the budget.

Fire protection and fire prevention are excellent, the bulletin says, but every owner of a fire trap is encouraged by the present distribution of taxation.

DEFENDS RICH SPINSTER.

Miss Van Den Heuvel Not Insane, Says Relative at Will Hearing.

Mrs. Annie Clark, wife of Charles F. N. Clark and one of the relatives of Miss Charlotte A. Van Den Heuvel, was a witness yesterday at the hearings of the contest of a codicil of Miss Van Den Heuvel's will before Surrogate Fowler. Mrs. Clark was allowed to testify because she gave testimony contrary to her own interests.

On Jan. 4, 1899, Mrs. Clark said, she called on Miss Van Den Heuvel at her home and had a long talk with her. Miss Van Den Heuvel complained, she said, that things were going wrong in her kitchen and that she was having trouble with her servants. She said that the death of her brother, John, a short time before had caused her much sorrow. She also spoke regretfully of the death of a Mr. Ruggles, who had managed her affairs.

Miss Van Den Heuvel told Mrs. Clark that Mr. Wickersham, the present United States Attorney General, had taken Mr. Ruggles's place.

"Mr. Wickersham is very helpful, very kind," Miss Van Den Heuvel told Mrs. Clark, "but I long for my own people, I want to see my own. I know very little of business matters. My mother and brother always took care of them."

Miss Van Den Heuvel asked Mrs. Clark and her husband to come and visit her often and to remain for long periods in her house, Mrs. Clark said. She addressed Mrs. Clark familiarly as "Annie." The two women had been good friends since 1874, Mrs. Clark asserted.

Mrs. Clark took issue with other witnesses who had testified that Miss Van Den Heuvel was irrational and that her bodily and mental condition was worse as she grew older. Mrs. Clark said that she had never heard Miss Van Den Heuvel say anything unreasonable and asserted that her health was much improved in 1903, after her illness in 1902. She told of Miss Van Den Heuvel sending for her husband prior to the execution of the second codicil of the will.

Manley A. Raymond, who drew this contested codicil, was also a witness. He said he had known Miss Van Den Heuvel for a long time and that on the day the will was drawn he had gone to Miss Van Den Heuvel's home. Henry W. Taft, counsel for the contestants, expressed dissatisfaction with Mr. Raymond's failure to remember many of the circumstances of the execution of the will. Mr. Raymond said he had not been told before he went to the house that a will was to be executed.

OWN A PARROT AND VOTE.

Miss Roydon Explains How Women May Benefit by an English Law.

The ownership of a parrot may be the deciding point in making one a householder and voter in England, said Miss Maude Roydon to the Equal Sufffrage League members at their regular meeting at the Hotel Astor yesterday afternoon.

If the proposed conciliation bill of the English suffragists passes it will be the women householders who will have the franchise, and Miss Royden explained what an English householder is.

"You are a householder," she said, "if you have only one room, if you have control of that room. If two persons occupy the room it is the one with the most force, who has the controlling influence, who is the householder. This is regardless of sex. If a man objected to a parrot in the family and the woman wished to have it and maintained her point, she would be the controlling inflence and the householder and have the right to vote, so cats, dogs, and parrots may play a leading part in votes for women."

She spoke of the great unanmity of the women suffragists in England, denying what she had been quoted as saying when she arrived in this country that she was going to decry the militant suffragists.

"We are all too busy in working for suffrage," she said, "to have time to oppose any one else. They say that women can never agree, but there has been remarkable agreement in regard to this conciliation bill. It does not give exactly what any of us want, and yet all the women's organizations immediately accepted it and without consultation. It is remarkable that with twenty-seven different ways in which the franchise may be obtained in England, with only two lawyers who are supposed to know anything about suffrage laws, and they disagreeing, the women have unanimously taken the same road."

Mrs. Frederick Nathan gave an account of the International Woman Suffrage Congress at Stockholm, and Mrs. Velma Swanston Howard gave her impressions of it. Miss Mary Garrett Hay presided. A resolution was passed to send a greeting of love and good will to Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, the International Suffrage President, now making a tour of the world.

Fair Without Raffles or Solicitation.

The Home for the Friendless will hold a novel sort of fair in the Hotel Martinique on Nov. 17 and 18, to raise money for the industrial schools for poor children which the institution maintains. There is to be no admission, no raffling, no solicitation to buy. The institution, established seventy-seven years ago, is undenominational and has 10,000 pupils.

FIND MASKED ROBBER SLAIN BY COMPANION

Two Had Attempted to Hold Up a Roadhouse and Shot Its Proprietor.

DRIVEN AWAY WITH PISTOL

Bullets Which Killed Were Not Fired by Robbers' Intended Victim, as Their Calibre Shows.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Two masked men entered the roadhouse of Patrick Hackett on the outskirts of the city late last night, and yelling, "Oh, you Pat!" opened fire with revolvers on Hackett and his bartenders. Hackett was shot twice in the head and once in the thigh, but got a revolver and fired twice at the men, who fled.

On their way out the men fired at Mrs. Hackett, who was in the kitchen, but did not hit her. Hackett is in a hospital in a critical condition.

Several hours later the body of one of Hackett's assailants was found in a ditch beside the New York Central tracks, a quatrer of a mile from the roadhouse. He had been shot in the head and in the body. A partly loaded revolver was found in his pocket, and another lay nearby.

The dead man was identified as A. F. Wright of Pittsburgh, Penn. On August 10 Wright was picked up by the police as a suspicious character and ordered out of the city.

The bullets taken from the body were not fired from Hackett's revolver, which was of a smaller calibre, and the police believe he was killed by his pal.

SUFFRAGISTS EXPECT GAYNOR

He Has Promised, but Has Disappointed Them Before.

Mayor Gaynor, it was announced yesterday, has accepted the invitation of the women suffragists of the State of New York to open their convention in the Hotel Astor Tuesday morning.

A number of times the Mayor has accepted invitations to address suffrage meetings, but at the last moment he has failed to appear and sent no excuse. Most of the New York State women's clubs belong to the federation, and all the thousands of members now have their eyes upon the Mayor.

A debate for and against suffrage will be an unusual feature of the Wednesday evening session of the convention. Mrs. William Force Scott will speak for the anti-suffragists and Dr. Anna Howard Shaw for the suffragists.

"Be sure you are very courteous to the antis," said Miss Hay, President of the federation, yesterday to the federation delegates, "and applaud very, very loud for suffrage."

What Is Your Standard?

Do Your Clothes Assist in Identifying You? They Should.

How many times have you gone into your tailor's with your mind full of ideas as to just what you want and come out again, after having ordered a suit of clothes, with your mind full of the idea of what he wants?

Where did you get your right idea, which was the first one? Possibly from a model made by a far more expensive cutter than any custom tailor could afford to hire. Cutters like these are employed in making Griffon clothes. Most tailors give the man what he thinks he wants, whilst the man, not knowing what is most suitable for himself, generally gets something he does not want.

We have the completed article in everything that is required by smart dressers. We have them ready to try on, giving you the opportunity for selection then and there.

When you buy your clothes at Kesner's you get clothes to be proud of, and clothes that fit you perfectly. If a model you like has a slight difference here or there, alterations to suit you will be made free of charge.

To those who can afford many suits of clothes, or to those who only can afford but one or two, the question of price is just as important a consideration when values are equal.

Griffon Clothes have little points about them that the natty man likes.

Griffon Clothes exemplify careful thought for the appearance of the wearer.

Griffon Clothes personify good taste.

Griffon Clothes invite your inspection at Kesner's to-day.

WHILE RESTING, TAFT WILL PLAN MESSAGE

Draft to be Prepared at Hot Springs, Va., Where He Will Remain Three Days.

GOES HOME MONDAY TO VOTE

Starts Tuesday Night for Frankfort, Ky., Where He Will Make First Speech of Southern Trip.

Special to The New York Times.

HOT SPRINGS, Va., Nov. 3.—The itinerary of the President was changed somewhat after his arrival here this morning. nstead of leaving for Cincinnati Monday night he will start a day earlier that e may obtain his certificate of registration to permit his voting Tuesday. Reaching Cincinnati at 8:15 o'clock Monday morning he will spend that and the next day in the home of Charles P. Taft, his brother, and will leave at 10:30 Tuesday night for Frankfort, Ky., where he will make the next day his first speech of his Southern tour.

Few saw the President arrive. He got in at the very early hour, for Hot Springs, at 8:30 o'clock. Mrs. Taft and her daughter Helen came in a victoria from Fern Villa, where they are staying, and the President's niece, Harriot Anderson, came down with Melville E. and Gladys Ingalls of Cincinnati, who are entertaining here. All made their way to Mr. Taft's car and escorted him to an automobile. Mr. and Mrs. Taft and their daughter breakfasted at the villa, and Mr. Taft did not again appear until 11 o'clock, when he went down to the links and played eighteen holes with his military aid, Major Archibald Butts.

Mr. Taft had not played golf for so long that he found himself in none too good form for the first few holes, but his game strengthened after that and he held his score down to ninety-four. The President got on the green in one at the crater and then made a 20-foot put. The seventeenth hole he did in three, and he got a lot of satisfaction out of these two plays. The President was not accompanied by a gallery, though a large crowd was at the first tee and would have followed but for a gentle hint from Major Butts.

Plans Work on Message.

Although President Taft will remain only three days in Hot Springs, he will do some work here on his annual message to Congress. Secretary Hilles did not come to Hot Springs with the President. He went to Washington and will collect data from Government departments for the use of the President in writing his message. It is expected that this information will be brought here to-morrow by Mr. Hilles, and probably before his return to the capital on Nov. 12 the President will have made a rough draft of the message.

Mr. Taft will devote much attention in his message to tariff reform with reference to the forthcoming report of the Tariff Board on the wool and cotton schedules. He will discuss the "trust question" and recommend that the Federal incorporation bill drawn and presented to Congress two years ago be enacted into law.

The reports of the Hughes commission, which is investigating second-class postage rates, and the railroad securities commission, which is looking into the question of stock watering, will be in Mr. Taft's hands in a few days, enabling him to treat these matters in his message. Conservation with some discussion of Alaska, naval reorganization as suggested in the President's statement issued on the yacht Mayflower after the naval review at New York yesterday, and currency reform are among the matters which will be brought to the attention of Congress.

Major Butts said to-night that the President had declined many luncheon or dinner invitations. While Miss Taft played tennis and Mrs. Taft went walking with Mrs. Thomas K. Laughlin to-day the President busied himself with correspondence, and received informally a few callers. He will golf with his aid at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning. His visitors this afternoon were Francis E. Luke of Washington, George R. Sheldon of New York, and William F. Harrity of Philadelphia.

Major Butts found his cousins, Mrs. George Gunton and Baron and Baroness Rosenkrantz, here, and he is planning a dinner party for them to-morrow night. He had luncheon with the Baron and Baroness at the Homestead to-day, and while every one was craning his neck in the direction of their table, the Baroness's little Chinese poodle crawled out of her muff and ran off. The Major and the Baron gave chase among the tables, and there was a lively scrimmage before the dog was captured under the table of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Black.

Longest Presidential Tour.

Figures kept by the direction of Secretary Hilles show that the trip just ended has been the longest ever taken by a President. In going from Beverly, Mass., to Hot Springs by way of Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Washington, and a few hundred other cities, Mr. Taft has traveled 13,436 miles, beating his own previous record by just about 500 miles. Before he returns to Washington for the Winter the President will visit Ohio, Kentucky, and Tennessee, and will add 1,834 miles to the record. Mr. Taft passed through twenty-six States and made speeches in twenty of them.

The Governor of each State he entered gave him a welcome, and Gov. Colquitt of Texas, which State was not visited, met him in Kansas. He met twenty-seven United States Senators, including six Democrats and seven "insurgents." The President has been on the road forty-eight days, stopping at 205 cities, towns, and villages. He made 306 speeches to more than one and a half million people, while almost five million saw him. The greatest number of stops was made in Kansas, where Mr. Taft delivered thirty-three addresses, four more than he made in Washington, the nearest competitor. Chicago heard him speak eleven times, Los Angeles ten times, and St. Louis six times.

In the seven weeks the President was never out of touch with Government affairs. More than 4,800 letters and telegrams were received and the mails and telegraph wires were kept busy every day. Although nearly thirty railroads handled his special train, the President was late only once, and that was at Omaha after the train had been held up in Missouri by a wash-out.

STEEL SNUB FOR TAFT?

Carnegie Building Undecorated During His Visit in Pittsburgh and Posters Returned.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 3.—Officials of the United States Steel Corporation snubbed President William H. Taft last Tuesday, is the latest charge in connection with his visit here. Comment was made on Tuesday on the fact that the Carnegie Building, home of the Carnegie Steel Company, was bare of decorations, while the Frick Building, its neighbor, reared itself twenty-five stories high with bunting, colored posters, and other decorations.

Following the episode at the Chamber of Commerce dinner Tuesday night, when the President and Congressman Martin W. Littleton had their oral passage at arms, it was openly charged that Steel Corporation leaders had deliberately snubbed Taft

Mayor William A. Magee and the Reception Committee had interested themselves in having the city decorated, and even the Police Department was pressed into service to urge that stores and business houses be decorated. The Colonial Trust Company distributed many thousands of Taft pictures, and a liberal supply was sent to the Carnegie Building, but the package was returned to the Police Department.

SUIT OVER REFERENDUM UP.

Telephone Company Objects to Oregon Tax Thus Levied on Corporations.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The Supreme Court to-day listened to arguments for and against the constitutionality of the initiative and referendum forms of legislation. Two cases were before the court on the same subject, both affecting Oregon, but the other States having the system or some part of it on their statute books were represented and filed briefs in support of the system. They are, besides Oregon, California, Arkansas, Missouri, Colorado, South Dakota, and Nebraska.

The issue was raised first by the objection of the Pacific States Telephone and Telegraph Company to a tax levied under the system at issue and again by certain citizens of Portland in connection with the validation of a $2,000,000 bond issue for a bridge across a river in that city.

A great array of counsel was present and many briefs were filed. Senator Owen of Oklahoma, who calls himself a progressive Democrat, was among those to come to the defense of the initiative and referendum. Many of these briefs were largely of a political nature.

E. S. Pillsbury of San Francisco and R. R. Duniway of Portland, Ore., were heard in opposition to the method in two Oregon cases. When Mr. Pillsbury remarked that there could not, with due regard for the Federal Constitution, be two legislative powers in a State—namely, the Legislature and the people—Justice Lurton interrupted him.

"What is a State Constitution but an organic act of legislation by the people?" inquired the Justice.

"That is expressly what I understand it to be," responded Mr. Pillsbury.

"Then there is legislative power in the people," suggested Justice Lurton.

"To make a Constitution, yes."

BONDS FOR POSTAL DEPOSITS

Exchange May Be Made After Jan. 1—$20, $100, $500 Denominations.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Depositors in the Government's postal savings banks on Jan. 1 next may exchange all or part of their deposits for bonds, according to an announcement made to-day by the Post Office Department. These bonds, which will pay 2½ per cent., one-half of 1 per cent. more than the ordinary postal deposit interest, will be issued in $20, $100, and $500 denominations.

Application for the conversion of deposits into bonds must be made before Dec. 15 at the depository where the certificates were issued. These bonds will not be counted as part of the maximum $500 allowed to one depositor.

RECEIPT FOR MONEY AN AID TO CUMMINS

It Shows Stock He Was to Buy Was to be Held in Trust, but Not the Money.

ON THIS THE TRIAL HINGES

Collateral Given Andrew Carnegie for Big Loan Was Released from Fertilizer Notes.

Joseph B. Reichmann, who was President of the Carnegie Trust Company, was again on the witness stand all day yesterday at the trial of William J. Cummins for the larceny of $140,000. Assistant District Attorney Moss and Max D. Steuer, Cummins's counsel, took turns in questioning him. Mr. Reichmann, who is partly paralyzed, seemed physically distressed at times, but was evidently determined not to give in to his weakness.

"Are you all right?" Mr. Moss asked at one point, as the witness's face showed that he was in pain.

"Yes," he said, with a fain smile. "I'll stick it out as long as you will, Mr. Moss."

Although yesterday was the third day Reichmann has been on the stand the lawyers are not through with him, and he will be called again on Monday.

One of the new things that was developed yesterday was a statement from Reichmann that he knew nothing of an understanding that the stocks acquired by paying off notes with the fund that Cummins is accused of stealing were to be held in trust. The State has contended that not only the stocks so acquired, but also the fund itself was to be held in trust by the Carnegie Trust Company. The defense has maintained that only the stocks were to be so held and not the money, which Cummins took and used. The receipt for the money, which was signed by Robert L. Smith, Vice President of the Carnegie Trust Company, stated that the stocks were to be held in trust, but did not say the money was. Bradley Martin, Jr., testified that this was a mistake in writing the letter. Reichmann's statement was that neither was to be held in trust. The letter was shown to Reichmann, and he said he had never seen it before.

"Then, if Smith signed this letter," said Mr. Moss, "he did so without any authority from you as President?"

"Absolutely," replied Mr. Reichmann. He also said he had never before seen the checks that came from the Van Norden Trust Company and the Nineteenth Ward Bank, which were indorsed over to Cummins by Mr. Smith. He knew, however, that Cummins got the money when it was received. He said he understood that the stock taken up by the payment of the notes was to be held by M. J. Lynam to protect the men on whose notes the $140,000 was advanced by the Nineteenth Ward Bank and $195,000 by the Van Norden Trust Company. These men were Cummins, himself, and their associates. He did not understand that the stock was to be held in trust for any purpose of the two banks. It is conceded that the stock, or at least some of it, was turned over to Lynam, but the State contends that it was improperly used afterward.

"We were all satisfied to have the stock turned over to Lynam," said Mr. Reichmann. "I had access to it and could examine it at any time. I knew about the disposition that was made of it subsequently. Moore, Condon, and myself frequently consulted with Cummins about the use to be made of the stock, and we four were makers of the notes."

Reichmann was also questioned further about the loan of $2,100,000 obtained from Andrew Carnegie, and Mr. Steuer drove home the point that besides the security put up with Mr. Carnegie the individual Directors of the Carnegie Trust Company guaranteed repayment to Mr. Carnegie, and that this money, which they personally had borrowed, was turned into the treasury of the Carnegie Trust Company and used to take up the fertilizer notes to which the Banking Department was objecting. He introduced the checks from the National City Bank, by which the $2,100,000 was paid to Cummins and showed that in each case Cummins at once drew his own check to the Carnegie Trust Company.

"We guaranteed repayment," said Mr. Reichmann, "and put up our own stock as collateral. We didn't get a penny of the money, but turned it over to the bank, and thus lifted the fertilizer notes, which had no value behind them."

Mr. Reichmann was asked to name the non-liquid assets held by the Carnegie Trust Company when he became President, and mentioned enough to make up about $4,500,000. The money to lift them was raised, he said, by the men who signed the agreement with Mr. Carnegie. Besides his $2,100,000 the balance was raised largely through their efforts, he said, by borrowing at various times on their securities and by using the credit of various companies in which Cummins and some of the others were interested. Some of Mr. Steuer's questions that were ruled out were intended to show that all these companies went into bankruptcy as a result of the failure of the Carnegie Trust Company and that the Platt Iron Works had enough assets to pay all its obligations except notes given to raise money for the Carnegie Trust Company.

"In your account of the non-liquid assets," Mr. Reichmann was asked, "haven't you overlooked J. G. Robin?"

Reichmann paused for some time, and then answered in the afirmative. It was the first time Robin's name had been mentioned in the testimony, and the inquiry was pursued no further.

Mr. Moss undertook to weaken the effect of Reichmann's testimony regarding the borrowing from Carnegie and turning the money over to the trust company by asking if the stocks put up with Carnegie by the Directors were not the same stocks, with the exception of 7,000 shares of Van Norden Trust Company, that had been put up as collateral in the Carnegie Trust Company to secure the fertilizer notes. Reichmann wasn't sure about this, but Mr. Moss produced records to show it was the case.

"I have at all times accepted what the records show," said Mr. Reichmann. "I am not denying that this was the case, but I don't remember it."

The records were put in evidence by consent, and the trial was adjourned till Monday, when it will be transferred from the County Court House to the Criminal Court Building.

47 HUNTERS KILLED IN 1911.

Biological Survey List Grows—5,000,000 Huntsmen in America.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The United States Biological Survey has added to the roster kept by that bureau of all hunting fatalities in this country forty-seven names of victims thus far this year. The two latest names were those of Conrad Steelman and John Yost, two New Jersey hunters who were mistaken for a deer on Wednesday and killed by Charles Norcross of Iona, N. J., who with the same load of buckshot severely wounded a third man.

"One fact which we have learned during the three years we have kept this record," said Dr. T. S. Palmer, Chief of the bureau, to-day, "is that there are practically no deer-hunting accidents in States which prohibit the shooting of does. This is because in these States the hunter hesitates a moment before firing to determine whether the animal is a doe or a buck. In case the animal happens to be of the two-legged variety, that brief pause before pulling the trigger is enough to save human life. The New Jersey shooting case was an exception to that rule.

"Of the forty-seven killed this year," continued Dr. Palmer, "the largest number were reported from Michigan, with fifteen deaths, New York coming second with nine and Washington and New Jersey being tied for third place with three fatalities each.

"In proportion to its population, the United States leads the world in the number of hunters within its borders. Unfortunately, it also leads in the proportion of fatal hunting accidents. We estimate that there are almost 5,000,000 American hunters. In several of the Western States the hunters constitute as much as 13 per cent. of the population."

Possesses Purity in a degree absolutely unrivalled.

ACCUSES A CONGRESSMAN.

Woman Detective in Divorce Suit Says Barchfeld Was Friendly with Defendant.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The name of Representative Andrew J. Barchfeld of Pittsburgh was brought into a local divorce proceeding to-day when Miss Clara Ellis, a detective, testified before Justice Wright of the District Supreme Court that the Congressman had bought drinks for Mrs. Charles A. Cotterill, the defendant; had taken her to moving picture shows, and corresponded with her. According to the woman detective, Mrs. Cotterill, in her company, first spoke to the Congressman in Pennsylvania Avenue.

Contrary to the local custom the hearings in the case are private and no record is taken of the testimony. W. Earl Ambrose, counsel for the defense, said to-day that on Monday he will disprove many of the statements made by the detective.

FINDS MEN TEACHERS ARE IN POLITICS, TOO

Miss Strachan Thinks They Should Be Censured as Well as the Women.

THE WOMEN FOR TAMMANY

While the Men Are Out for Fusion—Board of Education Members Regret They Can't Stop the Campaigning.

As evidence that the men teachers of New York are "in politics" quite as much as the women teachers, through their Interborough Association, Miss Grace Strachan, leader of the campaign of the women teachers to elect the Tammany ticket, sent to THE TIMES yesterday a circular letter sent out by the men teachers for the purpose of influencing votes.

Miss Strachan demands in the interest of fair play that any censure of the women for their efforts for Tammany be equally meted out to the men "offenders" for their efforts in behalf of Fusion.

Here is the letter which Miss Strachan says was sent out on the letterhead of the Association of Men Teachers and Principals, with offices at 610 West 139th Street:

> Mr. Benjamin J. Stanton, 56 Marion Avenue, Tompkinsville, S. I.
>
> My Dear Stanton: You letter telling me of the interest the school men of Richmond are taking in the cause of good government in Richmond is particularly gratifying to the members of the Executive Committee.
>
> We have studied the situation in your Assembly district very carefully and feel that there is a good deal at stake.
>
> Purely on the ground of good government it is the duty of every good Democrat to oppose the election of McKee, although he is a Democrat, because Assemblyman Shortt, a better Democrat and a vastly superior man, was refused the renomination solely because he put the welfare of his constituents before the orders of a party boss.
>
> The honest Democrats of Richmond should be made to see the great party advantage that will come from the defeat of McKee as a protest against gag rule in their own party. On the other hand, when we consider the two candidates, McKee, Democrat, and Timlin, Fusion-Republican, on non-partisan grounds, Timlin is so far the superior of McKee on every ground that no one can hesitate a moment in making a choice. Again on questions involving the welfare of the public schools, McKee, although he is a School Commissioner, is on record as opposing the best interests of the schools on several occasions, while Timlin has come out clean and square on public school questions as putting the welfare of the pupils first and foremost. As good citizens and as public school men, all our interests lie in defeating McKee and in electing Timlin.
>
> From those in touch with the situation I learn that the election will be extremely close.
>
> The men teachers of Richmond can defeat McKee and elect Timlin if they will only work with all their might to do so.
>
> They must go out from house to house making a personal appeal for votes for Timlin. They must ask every acquaintance, every tradesman, every member of their community, to vote for Timlin and the public schools.
>
> Without being personally requested to do so, every live man must make himself a canvasser for Timlin, and no such man should consider himself a true citizen or a loyal teacher until he has secured at least five Democrats to split for Timlin.
>
> I believe that there are no better men in the school system than the men of Richmond, and I say this from personal acquaintance with many of them. If it is put up to them squarely and forcibly I know they will spare no effort to make good. Sincerely yours,
>
> JOSEPH K. VAN DENBURG.

As the campaign of both the men and the women teachers progresses many members of the Board of Education are showing an increasing concern as to its outcome.

"There is absolutely no doubt," said Robert L. Harrison, Chairman of the By-Laws Committee of the Board of Education, "that this active participation in politics is materially affecting the efficiency of our teachers. Yet I see no way to check it unless the Legislature does so by new enactment. We have the right in our by-laws only to pass rules to enforce matters already placed under our jurisdiction by statute. There is no doubt that the specific offense against good taste and good ethics of which the teachers are guilty fails to be also an offense against the letter of the law, solely because it was not suspected by the lawmakers that the present condition would be likely to arise.

"We passed a by-law, when the teachers formed the habit of invading Albany in special trains, making such conduct an evidence of neglect of duty. If we had evidence which we now lack that these teachers have been preparing circulars in school hours, then we would have cause for action.

"We thought the settlement of the equal-pay question would bring this practice to an end, but it seems that the teachers think they should go further.

"I regret that they have taken this course. In the board itself we have zealously worked to keep out politics in every form, and it seems to me that a due regard for the properties of their position as public servants should cause the teachers to do the same. The bad taste of their political activity is surely apparent."

Abraham Stern, Chairman of the Board of Education's Elementary Schools Committee, made a careful search of the statutes to see whether some clause could not be found which would cover the case of the politically active teachers. He found that a judicial decision exempted the teachers from classification as State or city "officials," against whom most of the law's paragraphs devoted to improper political activity were aimed. While they were listed as "unclassified" members of the civil service, the law provided that one must be a candidate for office or must expect reward in the form of appointment or otherwise before his or her activity became offensive to the law.

"It is a question of free speech," said Mr. Stern, "but the teachers would be much more advantageously fixed before the public if they would work as individuals, instead of through associations of teachers. Then they would be citizens in politics, as is their right, instead of teachers in politics, using their influence as teachers for political ends. I think the conduct of the teachers is unfortunate in the extreme and that the schools suffer for their activities. The people who pay their wages should not be forced to tolerate them as active political campaigners and canvassers, seeking to put some men in office and to defeat others solely on account of their attitude on a single public question."

ELIGIBLE TEACHERS RELISTED.

Old Applicants and New on an Even Footing, According to Rating.

There was both joy and dismay among 400 or 500 men and women on the Board of Education list of eligible teachers yesterday, when it became known that the board at its meeting on Nov. 22 would fill practically every vacancy in the teaching staff.

The joy was over the fact that, at last, after months of waiting and uncertainty, these hundreds of jobs were to be filled, and the new teachers would report for duty on Dec. 1. But the rankling was with the men and women who have been eligible for appointment for many months, but who have not been appointed, and now that the appointments are about to be made, they are informed that the vacancies will be filled from the merged lists, which will contain the names of those who passed the examination as late as last June.

About the time of the new examniations in June the Board of Education adopted a resolution prohibiting the merging of the lists. Accordingly the Board of Examiners held up the new list, and suit was brought to compel Supt. Maxwell to announce the names of those who passed the examination successfully. Justice Bischoff granted the mandamus, and it is understood that Dr. Maxwell believes, under the court's decision, it is left to him to determine how the names shall be listed.

It is also reported that he believes the new names should be added to the teachers' list in order of their rating; that is, that the old and the new lists should be merged. This would make available for duty at once those men and women nearest the top of the lists, while those whose ratings are low will not be reached, though they had long been on the list.

It is estimated that the new appointments will exhaust the merged women's list down to the rating 71.95, and the men's down to 79. If the lists were not merged, the women's old list would be exhausted, and some twenty-five men appointed from the men's old list.

Men and women on the old lists, therefore, are vigorously protesting.

DREXEL TUTOR TO SANITARIUM

Had Become Violent in Hotel St. Regis, Where Young Mr. Drexel Took Him.

Anthony J. Drexel, Jr., made a hurried trip to Bellevue Hospital at 3 A. M. yesterday to have his friend and former tutor, N. H. Griffith, admitted to the psychopathic ward of the hospital. The commitment was made necessary because of the violent actions of Griffith in the Hotel St. Regis, where he occupied a room, and where he had been cared for by Mr. Drexel.

According to the hotel management Mr. Drexel and Griffith went to the hotel on Monday evening and engaged a suite of rooms. Mr. Drexel, it was explained, had met Griffith in Fifth Avenue, stranded, and had volunteered to give him shelter and food. Early Wednesday evening, it was said, a single drink had been sent to the rooms. A few hours after midnight, it was admitted, there was such a disturbance in these rooms that the night clerk recommended that Griffith be taken to Bellevue.

Mr. Drexel, with a man who later signed papers at the hospital with the name of Frank A. Phillips, took Griffith to Bellevue. Yesterday afternoon Dr. E. Livingston Hunt, Griffith's private physician, appeared at the hospital with a commitment signed by Supreme Court Justice McCall, and removed Griffith to a private sanitarium at Riverdale. The hospital authorities stated that the patient was suffering from maniacal depressive insanity. Dr. Gregory, head of the psychopathic ward, said that Griffith had had a similar attack in London about three years ago. Griffith is 31 years old, and has been two years in this country.

POLICE SERGEANT A SUICIDE.

John W. Zoll of the Harbor Squad Was Ill and Worried About Bills.

Sergt. John W. Zoll of the Harbor Police committed suicide yesterday at his home, 170 Court Street, Brooklyn, by inhalding illuminating gas through a rubber tube. He was in ill-health, and is said to have been worried because he feared he would be unable to meet a bill for $175 for hospital treatment.

A short time ago Sergt. Zoll was operated on for appendicitis. The bill he was called upon to pay was much larger than he had expected, and worry over it aggravated his condition. He was found dead in the bathroom yesterday by his wife.

Zoll had been a member of the police force about seventeen years. Before being detailed to the Harbor Police he had served in the Adams Street, Grand Avenue, and Amity Street Precincts, Brooklyn.

ROOSEVELT AT BOY REPUBLIC

Cordially Received by Young Citizens —Calls on Dean Bailey.

ITHACA, Nov. 3.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt, accompanied by Albert Wood of New York, visited the George Junior Republic in Freeville to-day and ate, played and worked with the young citizens. Their appearance was unexpected and they were cordially received. Col. Roosevelt paid his respects to Dean Liberty Hyde Bailey of the State Agricultural College, who was at the head of the Farmer's Uplift Commission, which Col. Roosevelt created during his Administration.

In a speech to the agricultural students, Mr. Roosevelt said that Dean Bailey was the greatest man in his profession, and that if he did not withdraw his resignation as head of the Agricultural College it would be a calamity to the State, Nation, and the world. The speaker criticised Congress for not publishing Dean Bailey's report of the Uplift Commission.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 3.—Charles A. Charles L. Taylor, the other Pittsburgh member of the committee, is the head of the Carnegie Hero Fund.

EAST FIGHTS WEST AT THE LAND SHOW

PRESIDENT TAFT IN BUTTER

And a Giant Cheese Among the First Things to Greet a Visitor's Eye —Mormon Choir Sings.

Instead of being a Westerner's show, as pictured in the preliminary advertising, the Land Show, which was opened to the public yesterday in Madison Square Garden, turned out to be a rather evenly balanced struggle for supremacy between New York, Rhode Island, and Massachusetts on one side and Wyoming, Utah, and Washington on the other.

For every sheaf of wheat that Wyoming had to offer as a lure, Massachusetts had set up a bushel of cranberries. For each big apple from the Oregon and Washington country, New York had on display an apple not quite so large, but, as handy folks in the New York display would quickly point out, one that was guaranteed to be twice as good in flavor.

New York had captured the central position among the exhibitors, and piled its booths high with every variety of product from up-State farms, with the suggestion that abandoned farms were near at hand for fair prices, with every opportunity to equal, or even excel, the achievements of the Westerners. Massachusetts gained a hardly less advantageous space in which to show her cranberries and maple sugar. She, too, blazoned forth a welcome to her abandoned farms.

The only way a casual visitor could reach the sample wares of the Far Western States was to pass beyond the giant cheese, whose up-State maker passed out little cubes to prove that it was not only the largest cheese but the best-tasting cheese in the world, and was made right close to New York City at a greater profit per pound than a Western dairyman could hope to win. He also had to pass the New York State beekeeper, who had housed himself in a wire beehive, with the bees running all over his arms and face, and listen to the story of money-making out of bees, with a challenge for any Western town to match it.

In the New York State booths—and there were half a dozen of them directly in front of the main entrance—State Commissioner of Agriculture R. A. Pearson was in personal charge. He explained to visitors why New York had taken such a keen interest in matching and excelling wherever possible the Far Western exhibits.

"It was their challenge to us," he said, "and we had to meet it. New England had to help us, for we all know that the real purpose of this show is to lure our farmers away to their Western lands. We need our farmers here; we need Western farmers to come back, in fact, and we have a lot of things to show them that will prove surprises.

"For you see ours has been a slandered State. The West took our farmers away from us half a century ago, and the farmers carried a dismal picture of our conditions away with them. It was true for those days; it is a fiction as to to-day, but the Far West doesn't know it. Why, I heard the slanderous statement made out in Seattle a few months ago that the Pacific Coast apple crop was so large and the apples were so fine that New York State had practically ceased to raise apples.

"Right after that I saw shipped from a single group of five stations in Niagara and Orleans Counties more apples than the whole crop of Oregon and Washington amounted to put together. And just try one of our apples, and then eat one of theirs if you want to judge what State has the kingpin apple crop."

In cars made up as tiny models of New York Central freight cars Mr. Pearson had arranged little heaps of corn and wheat and potatoes, and on each had labeled the cost of reaching the New York market from New York State in freight contrasted with the freights costs of the Western cities. He gave thousands of circulars away showing that New York State excels in twelve different lines of farm produce, while your Western farm is a flat failure every time a single variety, or at the most two or three varieties of produce, turn out bad.

The emphasis gained for their exhibits by the Eastern States has plainly nettled some of the exhibitors from the West. The first thing the Westerners observed was that the crowd lingered about the first New York exhibit, and on crowding close to see what the attraction was found a young sculptor at work making a bust of President Taft in good, fresh butter. A bust of Gov. Dix, also in butter, stood on the right of President Taft, while Mayor Gaynor was in process of being churned into shape on his left.

The crowd, which inquired anxiously for the Burbank potato-tomatoes and raspberry-cranberries and spineless cactus, was taken in hand first by demonstrators from the Arcadia Orchards in Washington. The Arcadia folks insisted that they had outburbanked Burbank in their own special creation, the "apple-lephant." The new creation turned out on close inspection to be a huge elephant made of apples, but the hand of the nature faker was discernible in the little strings that held the apples in their places.

Beyond the elephant the folks found Burbankland and had several smiles at the queer fruits and flowers there. They found that the potato-tomato had been smashed in transit and that the demonstrator was not quite certain whether to describe it as a mashed potato or a mushed tomato. He had to offer as a substitute some fadeless flowers on dry stems that he assured all comers had been picked for three months. He also had some apple-plums, cranberry-raspberries, white blackberries, plumb-prunes, and some shocks of corn illuminated in all the colors of the rainbow. They may be grown, the demonstrator said, especially for table and reception decorations.

The Mormons were represented not only by their choir of 200 voices, which opened the show with songs, but by dry farm exhibits from the church's Wyoming colonies, irrigated lands exhibits from Utah, and bushels of wheat from the Alberta section of Canada. The Canadian exhibit of grains from the Western provinces was especially conspicuous, and all persons connected with it confessed that they were not Canadians by birth but Americans who had gone over the border in search of lands and opportunity.

Minerals were interspersed liberally with apples and grains in the Alaska, Colorado, and Montana exhibits, while from the Southwestern States Indian beadwork gained a place of recognition. The Northern Pacific Railway showed the advantages of buying land along its right of way, while the Southern Railway system sought the names of all inquirers so that they might send literature to their homes. The wonders of the Yellowstone and of the Pike's Peak country were portrayed in large paintings which were conspicuous from all parts of the Garden's main floor.

In the evening the Mormon Tabernacle choir sang to a fair-sized audience in the concert hall, its Southern songs especially appealing to the exhibitors and their friends. Until the show closes on Nov. 12 there will be regular afternoon and evening concerts by the Mormon choir.

DISPUTE OVER PRISON THEFTS

Ex-Warden Cole Calls on Supt. Scott for the Names of the Thieves.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Frank D. Cole, former Warden of Clinton Prison, has forwarded a letter to Col. Joseph E. Scott, State Superintendent of Prisons, in which he takes exception tot certain published statements concerning alleged thefts at the prison. These were to the effect that "more than $10,000 worth of supplies and tools have been stolen and disposed of." Mr. Cole asks Supt. Scott to let the public know the names of the thieves and to order the Warden to prosecute them.

"During my four and one-half years at Dannemora," says Mr. Cole's letter, "only one man wanted, or even asked me to do a wrong thing, and that man since the severing of my connection with the institution has become an employe of the State under your administration."

Warden Cole resigned at the request of Supt. Scott last August.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Supt. of Prisons Scott to-day made public his reply to a letter from ex-Warden Cole of Clinton Prison, in which Mr. Cole took exception to published statements concerning alleged thefts at the prison. Col. Scott says that he has never made any statements reflecting upon Mr. Cole in any way. "I will say for your information, however," says Col. Scott, "that we have at Clinton Prison a large number of articles which have been recovered from different residents of Dannemora and immediate vicinity, which were taken from Clinton Prison and were the property of the State, and a list of these articles, in connection with a statement signed by the parties from whom they were recovered, is on file at the prison where you may see it at any time."

ONLY TWO TARS DESERTED.

Police Praise the Behavior of the Fleet's 25,000 Men.

A circular issued from Police Headquarters yesterday showed that of the 25,000 enlisted men who were here with the fleet during the past ten days, only 2 are reported as deserters and but 7 as stragglers. The police say better behayed bluejackets never visited New York.

Of the 100 ships that were in the mobilized fleet, 8 are still here. They are the dreadnoughts Utah and Florida, which are anchored off Tompkinsville; the battleships Maine, Iowa, Massachusetts, and Indiana, which are at the navy yard, and the Salem and Nashville, still at anchor off 140th Street. The Salem is to follow Vaniman's balloon if it starts on its transatlantic flight, and as soon as the flight starts she will steam for Montauk Point to wait the dirigible.

Capt. Bartlett of the White Star liner Cedric, which got in yesterday afternoon, said that he passed the eight submarines that were in the Presidential review between Nantucket and Fire Island. The underwater ships, the skipper said, were making fine progress, and looked more like a school of whales than anything else. Many of the passengers took pictures of the little squadron.

LODGE IN MARCONI COMPANY.

British Scientist Will Act as an Associate Adviser.

It was announced here yesterday that the patent differences between Marconi's Wireless Telegraph Company, Limited, of England, and the Lodge Muirhead Syndicate, have been settled, and that all of the Lodge patents applying to wireless telegraphy have been taken over by the Marconi Company. Sir Oliver Lodge, the British scientist, it was also announced, has become an associate scientific adviser of the Marconi Company.

Still another announcement affecting the Marconi interests was that an action has been commenced by Marconi's Wireless Telegraph Company, Limited, against Siemans Brothers & Co., Limited, in which action the Marconi Company alleges an infringement of its patents, in using what is known as the Telefunken system.

ADOPTED GIRL SUES FOR FATHER'S HOME

He and His Wife Had Made Her Their Own as a Baby and Brought Her Up.

THEN THE WIFE PASSED AWAY

Foster Daughter Asked the Court to Declare the Old Man's Home Hers by Gift of the Dead—But She Loses.

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., Nov. 3.—Old Peter Deegan they call him now around the stables of Bronson Winthrop at East Williston, where he potters about among the horses as well as his 65 years will allow, but twenty-five years ago Peter Deegan was a strong man, still young at 40, and with only the one regret that he and Ellen, his wife, were childless and without kith or kin in this country.

They talked it over together many a night in the little house, set in a bit of ground at Westbury, which Peter Deegan had bought and was paying for slowly, against the time when he might no longer work, and he and Ellen would need a place they could call home. And finally they decided to adopt a youngster. A girl, it was to be, they settled at last, ane one day Mrs. Deegan found just the child she wanted, and Peter agreed with her.

The baby girl became to Peter and his wife as their own child. They took pleasure in dressing her in fine clothes and in watching her play around the house. They were proud to show the baby off to their neighbors. The little girl couldn't have been more theirs had she been born in the little cottage at Westbury.

Peter redoubled his work. There was more reason now than there had been before for owning the little home free and clear, and presently he laid the deed in his wife's lap. The home was theirs—and the baby's now grown to girlhood—no matter what might befall Peter in the future.

That was years ago. Peter and Ellen grew fonder of the adopted child as the years passed and never spoke of the time when she should leave them to have a home of her own. They never thought that they would have to leave her. But last April Ellen took sick. Peter and Mary, the daughter, tended her carefully, but slowly the old woman lost strength until near the close of April she died.

Peter was broken-hearted at her loss, and pained again soon, when Mary, now a woman grown, married and left the old home. He kept on there, however, for he had no other place to go, and no desire to leave the old home of twenty-five years.

But recently he heard of an action in the Supreme Court here, and investigating, was amazed to discover that Mary, now Mrs. Mary A. Gifford, had brought suit for the little house and the bit of ground in Westbury, alleging that Mrs. Deegan had promised it to her before she died, and that therefore it was rightfully hers.

Old Peter got a day off from the Winthrop stables and to-day he appeared at the Surrogate's office. He told of getting the home, of his life in it with Ellen and Mary, and finally of Ellen's death. When the old man had concluded, Supreme Court Justice Maddox told him to go back to the old home, safe in the assurance that it was his and that no one might take it from him.

Old Peter left the court, happy that he was not to be put out of his home, but perplexed and mystified over the attempt to dispossess him. The court's ruling was based on the fact that the cottage which stood in the wife's name could not be their daughter's, the couple never having gone through the formalities of a legal adoption.

J. W. ALLING ASSAILS THE THRIFT OF YALE

Telephone President Declares University's Shops Take Trade from Local Concerns.

AGAINST NEW LIGHTING PLANT

Granting Such a Permit Would Be Called Graft in Ordinary Cases, He Says—Criticises Hadley.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 3.—Yale University was bitterly atacked to-day for its policy toward the City of New Haven by John W. Alling, who is President of the Southern New England Telephone Company, the Security Insurance Company, and is a Director of several New Haven banking and trust institutions. He was formerly State Attorney.

The attack was made at a hearing before an Aldermanic Committee which had called a meeting to discuss the petition of Yale to be allowed to erect a new central heating and lighting plant in Winchester Avenue. The room was crowded with residents of the locality, who protested against the location of the plant in the vicinity and against the granting of the request of the university to be allowed to lay conduits through the streets to carry the heating and lighting pipes and cables. Mr. Alling lives in the locality, and he declared that Yale had acted unfairly in this and other matters.

His charge of bad faith aroused John Beach, the university's counsel, and a spirited dialogue followed.

"I have lived in this city for fifty-three years," said Mr. Alling. "The university during that time has always been getting further away from the municipal life of the city. To-day they receive millions of dollars by gifts. They are not stinted for funds. In the university to-day they have a bookstore that sells more books than any bookstore in town. They have recently started a flower store, which takes away much of the business from our city flower stores, and they have restaurants and boarding houses. They build buildings and rent them without taxes, except on those that bring in over $6,000 a year income, and this is the institution that comes before us asking favors.

"How can you refuse permission to a manufacturer who wants to build a plant in another neighborhood because the people in his own object to it? If this permission is granted to the university, why not to everybody? Permission like this would be called graft if it wasn't the university.

"Do you realize that the influence of the university in the social boycott is a powerful weapon? The President of the university was the first person who invoked it. He advised using it against the heads of the trusts. But the social boycott never affected me."

Then Mr. Alling read from one of the sermons of President Hadley, which quoted ethical advice to graduating classes. Mr. Alling denied that the university was governed in its relations to the City of New Haven by any such considerations as those mentioned in Dr. Hadley's sermon.

No decision was given by the Aldermanic committee on Yale's petition.

To Give a Dinner to Chief Kenlon.

The accident to Fire Chief Kenlon has held up the plan of his friends to give a dinner to mark his promotion to the head of the department. It will probably be given about the middle of December, the date, of course, to depend upon the condition of the Chief, who is now in Gouverneur Hospital with a broken right leg. The dinner arrangements are in the hands of Patrick J. O'Beirne of 132 Nassau Street and Robert Mainzer of 5 Nassau Street. Chief Kenlon was injured on Wednesday morning while responding to a second alarm for a fire at 299 Cherry Street. His automobile collided at Madison and Jefferson Streets with a hose tender.

BEATS THE GUN LAW IN HIS TEST CASE

HOW TO GET LICENSES

Only Those Issued by Police Commissioner at $2.50 Are Valid, Says Corporation Counsel.

Joseph F. Darling, an attorney of 116 Nassau Street, who has been waging a fight on the constitutionality of the Sullivan law, which makes the simple possession of firearms without a permit a criminal offense, won his long fight to get a Supreme Court ruling yesterday. Darling had much difficulty in getting himself arrested for having a revolver in his home, 344 East Fifty-seventh Street. One Police Captain refused to hold him when he surrendered himself at a station. Then a Police Magistrate discharged him. Finally he succeeded in being arrested and held by a Magistrate for trial in Special Sessions. He then applied for a writ of habeas corpus in the Supreme Court. Here Justice Gavegan advised him to withdraw before it was too late, and warned him that he was jeopardizing his liberty, but Darling persisted.

Justice Pendleton sustained Darling's writ yesterday and ordered him discharged. In his pleadings Darling asserted not only that the law was an unwarranted invasion of the constitutional rights of citizens, but charged that it had been framed in the direct interest of the criminal classes since the necessity of getting a public permit for the private puossession of firearms would warn criminals of houses protected against invasion and insure them of practical safety in depredations and offenses committed in houses of unarmed citizens.

Replying to the letter of Mayor Gaynor, who wanted to know just who had the right to issue pistol permits, Corporation Counsel Watson said yesterday that, in his opinion, the Police Commissioner alone had this power. Police Magistrates who have granted most of the permits in the past, according to Mr. Watson, have no legal right to do so. Regarding the Sullivan law he says:

"I am of the opinion that the Penal Law referred to, with reference to the issuance of a pistol-carrying license, does not repeal by implication the express provision of the Charter, requiring the issuance of such licenses or permits by the Police Commissioner. The general rule is that a statute which is applicable to a particular locality is not repealed by implication by a later statute in general terms unless the intention of the Legislature to repeal or alter the local law is manifest."

Mr. Watson holds that the recently adopted law provides that pistol permits shall be issued by Magistrates or Justices of the Peace "in such manner as may be prescribed by ordinance." All pistol permits for New York, he states, must be issued by the Police Commissioner because of both the provisions of the Charter and the local ordinance. He also holds that the Charter provision for the collection of only a $2.50 fee, the same to be devoted to the police pension fund, holds good now as in the past, making the collection of $10 fees in this city illegal.

"In no event," he concludes, "may such permits be issued in the City of New York by other than the Police Commissioner. The City Magistrates are without jurisdiction."

STATE MEDAL FOR FIREMAN.

Awarded for a Rescue in the East River on a Cold Morning.

State Controller Sohmer notified Fire Commissioner Johnson yesterday that the silver medal authorized by the State as the recognition for life saving had been awarded to Joseph Tyrdy, an engineer of the Fire Department, whose home is at 413 East Seventy-seventh Street.

It was at 2 in the morning of March 4, 1909, and Tyrdy was on house duty at Engine 89, Ninety-third Street and First Avenue, when he heard cries for help. Running out he was seized by an excited man, who told of a friend who had fallen into the East River at Ninety-sixth Street. Tyrdy boarded a passing baker's wagon, and a few minutes later was at the pier. He saw a man struggling in the water, and he jumped in. It was bitter cold that morning, and a stiff wind was driving a sleeting rain before it, but Tyrdy managed to get his man to the side of a scow and there they both clung until a policeman hauled them out. The rescued man's name was Michael O'Brien. He died within a half hour after he was taken from the water.

Non-Partisan Endorsement of

HON. ROBERT LUDLOW FOWLER'S

Nomination as Surrogate

We consider that the office of Surrogate is above all party considerations.

It has no part in the general questions of party policy which honestly divide citizens.

It deals with the estates of all men, rich and poor alike; not with their business.

Integrity, learning, special qualifications and judicial attainments of the highest order should be the characteristics of the incumbent.

We, as members of the Bar, or citizens engaged in other vocations, irrespective of party, record our judgment that Surrogate Robert Ludlow Fowler, by his long devotion to and exceptional learning in these special subjects and by the manner in which he has performed the duties as Surrogate since his appointment by Governor Dix, preeminently fulfills all these conditions and embodies the highest ideals of judicial fitness.

We urge our fellow citizens to continue him in the office he so ably fills by voting for him at the approaching election regardless of party affiliations.

JOHNSON AND BRUSH ON TICKET SCANDAL

Write Letters to Each Other, but There's No Sign of an Investigation.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—President John T. Brush of the New York National League Baseball Club to-night gave out copies of very pointed letters he had exchanged with B. B. Johnson, President of the American League, relative to the alleged scalping of tickets to the World's Series of baseball games, and particularly relative to the alleged culpability of the New York National League Club in the matter.

President Johnson's letter to Mr. Brush, which was an answer to a communication demanding an investigation of rumors of collusion between the New York Club and the scalpers, is as follows:

When the subject for handling the World's Series this Fall confronted the commission, I suggested that the sale of tickets be placed in the control of the officials of the two contending clubs. If anything went amiss they would be held accountable. This position was taken for the reason that I thought the clubs were better informed and equipped to meet local conditions, and could cater chiefly to those who had been their support during the regular championship season.

When I arrived in New York the night preceding the day for the opening game of the series, I was confronted by members of the press, who demanded to know what action would be taken by the commission relative to the ticket-scalping scandal. At that time I had no information that there had been any trouble over the sale of tickets to the World's Series.

In the few succeeding days, from information brought me, I was firmly led to believe that the leading ticket brokers of New York were abundantly provided with tickets and in consecutive sectional numbers.

It seemed to me that this condition could not have happened unless there was collusion between some one in your office and these scalpers.

The demand for tickets in New York was sufficient to have sold the capacity for the Polo Grounds for three games. It is a matter of record that the management of the New York Club turned back as unsold for the second and third games between 1,000 and 1,500 tickets. What steps were taken by the New York Club to notify the public that these tickets were still on sale? The press announced that all the reserve seat tickets for the series had been sold.

A number of leading New York papers insist that there should be an investigation. It appears that you are most vitally interested in this matter and should court an inquiry. If there has been any wrong doing some one in your employ has been culpable, and it devolves upon you personally to investigate.

The National Commission probably would have no difficulty to get at the facts. Our chief aim is to protect the public from graft, and we should work together for that purpose.

Respectfully, B. B. JOHNSON.

To this Mr. Brush to-day replied:

In this, my reply to yours of Nov. 1, I do not wish for an instant to lose sight of the main and only issue, which is that the newspaper article credited to and not denied by you states that you would have investigated the ticket scandal in New York if you had had the consent of Messrs. Herrmann and Lynch, wherein it was charged that some one in the New York Club service handed out to the ticket speculators 8,000 or 9,000 tickets at an advance of $1 each, and that I notified you in my letter of Oct. 28 that you need not wait one minute for the consent of Messrs. Herrmann and Lynch, but that you could begin an investigation at once and have the full co-operation of every employe of the New York Club to aid you in your work.

You have information I do not possess which gives you an advantage in developing the facts. To ask the New York Club to investigate itself and sit in judgment as judge and jury upon its own case would be like asking the National Commission to investigate its own failure to suppress the iniquity of ticket scalping in New York and Philadelphia if it knew how and had the power and knew that the evil was being done.

In saying this, no offense to the National Commission is intended. Respectfully,

JOHN T. BRUSH.

Mr. Brush is ill at a Chicago hotel and his delay in answering Mr. Johnson's letter he ascribed to that fact. His condition was such to-day that he was not allowed to discuss the letters.

NEW SCANDAL OVER SERIES.

Walter Calvin Arrested for Embezzling Money for Baseball Tickets.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 3.—A warrant charging grand larceny was sworn out to-day by William G. Gordon, for the arrest of Walter Calvin, alleged to have embezzled $1,050, furnished him for the purchase of tickets to the world's series baseball games for speculating purposes. Calvin is said to have asserted that he would obtain fifty tickets to each of the seven games from Harry Davis, Captain of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Before the series opened, Gordon sent a certified check on the American National Bank of Richmond for $1,050, made out in favor of "Capt. Harry Davis, Philadelphia Baseball Club." This check was subsequently deposited in Philadelphia, indorsed "Capt. Harry Davis, Philadelphia Baseball Club."

There is, of course, no charge against Davis, but the matter will be presented to the National Commission.

Frank Farrell Inquiring About Harry Wolverton's Managerial Ability.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 3.—That Harry Wolverton, manager of the Oakland team of the Pacific Coast League, was being seriously considered as a possible successor to Hal Chase in the leadership of the New York Americans, was the intimation conveyed in a letter received here to-day by Bill Lange from Frank Farrell of the New York Club. Farrell inquired as to Lange's opinion of Wolverton's managerial capacity.

Wolverton already has signed his 1912 contract with Oakland, but in the event of an offer from New York, it is believed the Coast club would not stand in his way.

Giants at Meyerrose Park.

At Meyerrose Park, Covert Avenue "L" station, Ridgewood, on Election Day afternoon at 3 oclock, the fans will be treated to the banner attraction when the New York Giants, the pennant winners of the National League, will play Joe Wall's All-Stars. The Giants will have several of their regulars in the line-up. Such stars as Hummell of Superbas, Dick Breen of Jersey City, Fischer of Toronto, Joe Lake of St. Louis Americans, Al. Burch, the ex-Superba; Jake Reisigl of Cleveland Americans, and Barberich of Buffalo will line up against the Giants.

Murphy to Captain Athletics.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 3.—Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, to-day announced that he had decided to appoint Daniel Murphy, right fielder, Captain of the team in succession to Harry Davis, who has joined the Cleveland Club as manager. Murphy is the oldest member of the reglar team in point of service. During the past season "Eddie" Collins was Acting Captain in the absence from the field of Capt. Davis.

Honor Baker and Herzog.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 3.—Several hundred baseball fans sat at tables arranged in the form of a diamond at the Fourth Regiment Armory here to-night and "rooted" for Frank Baker, the home-run hitter of the World's Champions, and Charley Herzog of the New York National League Club. Baker and Herzog, who are Marylanders, were the guests at a dinner given under the auspices of the Advertising Club of this city. They sat at the "home plate" and went through "nine innings" of edibles and then some speeches.

Adelphi Defeats Bushwick, 32 to 2.

The Adelphi Academy Association football eleven easily defeated the Bushwick High School football team in a one-sided game of soccer yesterday afternoon on the former's field by the score of 32 to 2. The Adelphi Academy representatives had a big advantage over their opponents, as all the players on the winning team were heavier than the Bushwick boys. Capt. Nolan, Well, and Court played a good game, and put up a strong defense for a while, but their teammates played ragged football. Nolan, who played left half back for the Bushwick eleven, tallied the only goal that his team made in a spectacular kick from the twenty-yard line in the third quarter. The Adelphi team displayed excellent form, and easily outclassed their opponents at every angle of the game.

HARVARD SOCCER VICTORY.

Crimson Eleven Scores Two Goals on Princeton Team.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 3.—Princeton and Harvard had a clash on the soccer field this afternoon, Harvard winning by 2 goals to 0. Harvard's play showed more experience with the game than the Tigers, although the Princeton eleven forced the ball into the visitors' territory through the greater part of the second half. Harvard, however, forced the play during the entire first period, and it was their inability to shoot past Baldwin, the Princeton goal keeper, that held their score to 2 goals.

Greene, the Harvard centre, made the first score for the Crimson after sixteen minutes of play by a pretty shot just under the crossbar, and Murdock made the last goal as the whistle blew ending the game. Dell was the most aggressive man on the Tiger eleven, and would have scored several times with proper support. The line-up:

Princeton.	Position.	Harvard.
Baldwin	Goal	Brown
Eddy	Left full back	Rushmore
Chester	Right full back	Barron
Townsend	Left half back	Grant
Winants	Centre half back	Francke
Moffat	Right half back	Weston
Sisson	Outside left	Byng
Dawson	Inside right	Murdock
Cooke	Outside right	Needham

Goals—Greene, Murdock. Referee—W. R. White. Linesmen—Messrs. Currier and Baldwin. Time of halves—Thirty minutes each.

WINNERS WITH THE CUE.

In last night's game of the amateur handicap 18.2 balk-line billiard tournament at John Doyle's Forty-second Street Billiard Academy, George Avery, playing 100 points, defeated Sam Garfunkle, who is playing at the scratch mark, 150 points, by the score of 100 to 87 in 29 innings. The winner's high run was 19, and he had an average of 3 13-29. Garfunkle's high run was 27 points. In the continuation of the tournament this evening Dr. George Hammill will oppose William Croll.

Manhattan won its second victory over Brooklyn in the second metropolitan game of the National Billiard League at Keeney's Knickerbocker Academy in Brooklyn last night, when Leon Magnus, playing for New York, easily defeated Charles Otis, a Brooklyn representative, by the score of 50 to 26. The contestants played three-cushion carrom billiards, and the Gothamite led throughout, the game going 58 innings. Magnus displayed remarkable form for an amateur, and made some difficult shots at times. He made a high run of 6 points twice. Otis's high runs were 4 and 3. John Huking will represent Brooklyn in to-night's game at the Knickerbocker Academy.

Willie Hoppe, who is practicing at George Slosson's Billiard Academy, Thirty-first Street and Broadway, in preparation for his championship match with George Sutton, easily defeated the "Student" in an exhibition game at 18.2 balk-line last night by the score of 500 to 380. The champion ran out his string of 500 points in 12 innings, and he had high runs of 201, 102, and 90 points, with an average of 41 2-3. Slosson's high runs were 84, 73, and 61 with an average of 31 2-3.

Harris Hall Wins at Basketball.

Townsend Harris Hall Basket Ball team defeated the team of the City College senior class, by the score of 15 to 10 yesterday. The Townsend Harris team is strengthened this year by Hendricks, who was formerly a Rochester High School star. He tossed all of the field goals for his team, with the exception of one and his all-round playing probably kept the Harris team from defeat. The senior team played a hard game throughout and had the younger lads hustling at all times to hold the lead. The line-up:

Townsend Harris.	Position.	C. C. N. Y. Senior.
Adler, Kallman	Right forward	Gottlieb
Schwartz	Centre	Novotny, Levy
Nudelman	Right guard	Slutzker, Waldman, Rosenkrantz

Bohemian Wrestler Coming Here.

Josef Smejkal, the Bohemian wrestler, will arrive here Tuesday and will be seen in action Friday night, Nov. 10, at Sokol Hall, East Seventy-second Street. On that occasion he will endeavor to throw three heavyweight wrestlers.

TRAVIS DOWNS TWO IN ATLANTIC CITY GOLF

Outplays C. B. Buxton and M. A. Risley in First Two Rounds of Match Play.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 3.—Two rounds of match play carried the open golf tournament to the semi-finals on the links of the Country Club of Atlantic City to-day. The only metropolitan district survivor in the first sixteen was Walter J. Travis of Garden City, who disposed of C. B. Buxton of Philadelphia and M. A. Risley of the Home Club in successive matches. Other successful ones were: George Crump of Philadelphia, J. Ernest of Wilmington, and McLeod Thompson of the home club.

Travis had to work hard to beat Buxton, the man who put him out of a tournament here two years ago. The pair kept well together for the greater part of the round, being all square at the turn. Buxton then became one up by winning the tenth hole in 3, but from there on the veteran played golf, getting a halve in 3 at the eleventh, due to a long put and winning the next two in par figures. Buxton missed a put on the twelfth green and topped a drive at the fourteenth. Thereafter, Travis held his man safely, winning by 2 up and 1 to play. He went around in 80 to his opponent's 82.

Later Travis kept up this same steady golf against Risley, improving as the match progressed. The first named went out in 41 and stood one up then. Coming back the best Risley could do was to halve two holes so that the contest ended on the fifteenth green. The summaries:

First Sixteen.—First Round.—M. Risley, Atlantic City, beat H. Wendell, St. David's, 1 up; W. J. Travis, Garden City, beat C. B. Buxton, Huntingdon Valley, 2 up and 1 to play; G. A. Y. M. C. A. SWIMMERS IN POOL

A. Rasch Wins Fancy Diving Contest After a Tie with Hexamer.

The west side branch of the Young Men's Christian Association held its opening swimming meet in its thirty-three foot tank last night, and each of the six events run off was productive of keen competition. This is the first of a series of meets that will be held every two weeks this season. The events are closed to members.

Three of the events decided were handicap affairs, and in two out of the three the scratch starters were returned victorious. The exception was in the fifty-five-yard swim, which was won by A. Hamfton with the aid of a twelve-second handicap, in the fast time of 0:38. C. Tifft, the scratch man in this event could finish no better than third. He defeated fourteen contestants in the 220-yard swim, in which event he started from the scratch mark.

The feature event was the fancy diving contest, which resulted in a tie between A. Rasch and E. Hexamer, each scoring 87½ points. In the dive-off Rasch was returned the victor, having an advantage of 1½ points over his opponent. The summaries:

110-Yard Swim, Handicap.—Won by M. Friedlander, (scratch;) G. Ennis, (15 seconds,) second; F. O'Neill, (10 seconds,) third. Time—1:10 1-5.

55-Yard Swim, Novice.—Won by S. Gilbert, H. Knecht second, G. Ennis third. Time—0:34.

220-Yard Swim, Handicap.—Won by C. Tifft, (scratch;) A. Korn, (15 seconds,) second; G. Hippard, (30 seconds,) third. Time—2:32.

Fancy Diving Contest.—Won by A. Rasch, 83 points; E. Hexamer, 81½ points, second; S. Gilbert, 79½ points, third.

Bouts at Brighton Beach A. C.

Eddie Mack and Eddie Smith did not come together, as scheduled, last night at the Brighton Beach Athletic Club, owing to poor attendance. Smith was willing to take on a substitute boxer, but none could be secured to go against him. The semi-final bout furnished plenty of action, Eddie Jordan and Frankie Nelson being the principals. The fighting was fast all the way and the bout ended with honors even. In the four-round preliminaries Smoke Jones scored an easy victory over Danny McGrath, and Coke Williams outpointed Young Jimmy Ryan.

NOTES OF THE BOXERS.

One of the longest programmes of boxing that the Long Acre Club has ever staged will be held this evening. Nearly all classes will be represented. A long list of future greats has been sent in, and only the most promising has been selected. These future greats are the means of creating real pleasure and at the same time some of them furnish more excitement than many star events seen at the local clubs. There will also be a battle royal between six negro fighters.

Young Cashman's reputation as a knockout fighter will be placed in jeopardy to-night at the Fairmont A. C. when he clashed with Young Hickey. The latter is somewhat of a sleep producer himself, and promises to end the bout before the limit of ten rounds is reached. In addition to this bout there will be ten-round bouts between Jim Coffey and Young Ketchel of White Plains and Charlie Barry and Mike Carroll. There will also be six-round bouts between Young Lavigne and Young Ketchel of New York and Kid Lewis and Charlie Smith.

At the Sharkey A. C. to-night the main bout will bring together K. O. Eger, the West Side bantamweight, and Barry Hill, the former amateur champion. A six-round semi-final and four four-round bouts will precede.

Johnny Dohan of Brooklyn and Paddy Sullivan, the fighting Irishman, will clash in the main even of ten rounds at the Standard A. C., Brooklyn, to-night. Walter Fagan of Long Island City and Eddie King of Harlem will come together in the six-round semi-final. George Bray and Jack McFarland, two heavyweights, will furnish the feature bout.

Bull Anderson of Brooklyn has been secured to oppose Freddie Kelly of Philadelphia in the star event at the Royale A. C., Clermont Avenue Rink, Brooklyn, to-night. Willie Howard was scheduled to box Kelly but his eye has not recovered from the effects of Monday night's bout with One-Round Hogan, and he called off his part of the bout.

Tommy Houck of Philadelphia and Johnny Dundee of this city will be the headliners of to-night's show at the Olympic A. C. Katey Phelan and Battling Travers will come together in the semi-final.

PRINCETON FALL REGATTA.

Juniors Win Eight-Oared Race, with Seniors a Close Second.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 3.—Princeton's junior class eight won the fifth annual Fall interclass regatta this afternoon on Carnegie Lake, rowing a close race, but winning by a half length over the senior eight.

In the four-oared race between the juniors and sophomores, who had qualified for the finals, the sophs pulled away from the 1913 boys in the last quarter mile, winning by a length.

The race between the four class eights covered a mile and three-quarter course, and the junior crew rowed it in 9:47¼. The sophomores finished a length and a fourth behind the seniors, while the freshmen were a poor fourth, ten lengths in the rear. The four-oared race covered three-quarters of a mile, and was won in 4:57.

To-day's regatta completes the Fall training on the lake, and the Winter work indoors will start in a week.

POLITICAL.

HEARST

The Political Acrobat

Mr. Hearst is with us again. Once more he is a democrat. To sketch his political meanderings is a harder task than getting to the center of a mystic maze at Coney Island, and not less funny.

Have you stopped to consider this "human whirligig," as The Evening World describes him? As a matter of fact he has been against nearly everything and everybody at one time or another except—Hearst. He has been—

For and against PARSONS
For and against MURPHY
For and against ROOSEVELT
For and against BRYAN
For and against TAFT

A few of his parties have been as follows:

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP
INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE
CIVIC ALLIANCE DEMOCRATIC
REPUBLICAN FUSION

In view of the fact that these are about all the parties we have had in New York in the last fifteen years, it can be seen that Mr. Hearst has been utterly impartial. The joke is on these parties because he has been a candidate of all of them. Just once was he elected, and then to Congress through the grace of Tammany Hall.

Our political acrobat has sought to be Mayor, Governor and President. Occasionally, when utterly worn out running for office, he mutters "Let George do it," and produces a city editor as candidate for Sheriff, or a private counsel for Governor or Judge.

Who will deny that all this has entertained and amused the voters; or who will claim that it has decreased the circulation of his papers which are avowedly sustained by their comic features?

How dull would have been life in New York without him, since Mr. Hearst arrived with his turned-up trousers, his wide brimmed sailor hat with its tri-colored band! But now what a great sea-change! No longer the jaunty, slender, sportive young editor, with the gilded halo, but a regular solemn, serious, pale, corpulent "statesman," with a sure-enough run-for-office sombrero and frock coat.

No man ever rigged himself thus who did not hope to be President of the United States. No announcement is necessary. Just take a peek these days at "W. R." emerging from his modest Riverside apartment, and all you have to do is to paint in Pennsylvania Avenue, the Capitol and the White House.

And why not? He has millions and some newspapers. These go far. Murphy and Parsons and Schieffelin are compelled to go to the expense of printing pamphlets and handbills around election time, but not so William Randolph. All "W. R." has to do is to call Brisbane away from coddling woman for wearing corsets, and turn him loose on two weeks of Hearst adulation.

Then there is the morning paper and the evening paper—a double convenience. He can accuse in the morning and deny at night. He can attack in the evening and qualify in the morning. He can take Turkey's side in the American and Italy's in the Journal. He can support the Hague tribunal at sunset, and at sunrise demand that America exterminate Japan.

This puts the old-fashioned politicians to a serious disadvantage.

How can men with but one fixed, direct set of principles, and with limited means, combat this money-laden political ferry-boat, which goes backwards and forwards without having to turn around?

And this comic supplement to the politics of our decade now essays the local leadership of the party of Lincoln, McKinley and Taft, and the nominal leadership of the party of Jefferson, Jackson and Cleveland. Isn't it about time to regard it all, as this rich, cynical turncoat probably himself regards it, as a practical joke?

Dr. Cook's big joke left the North Pole intact and only offended a few honest old professors at Copenhagen. But this man actually makes us print ballots now and then with his name on them. Is not this, as Josh Billings used to say, "2 much"?

HARVARD PICKED TO DEFEAT PRINCETON

Crimson Eleven Generally Is Regarded as Being Stronger Than the Tigers.

After a lapse of fifteen years, Harvard and Princeton will renew football relations at Princeton to-day. It is the first of the big games among the Eastern colleges, and the renewal of gridiron struggles between these two universities has aroused so much interest that the game takes place as one of the most important of the football season. Harvard was never very successful against the Tigers in the old days. From 1877 to 1896 Harvard and Princeton clashed fourteen times, and only three victories out of the number went to the Cambridge team. Harvard last defeated the Orange and Black in 1887, twenty-four years ago. The last game between the elevens was in 1896, when Princeton won, 12 to 0. Then football relations between the two institutions were severed and were not renewed until this season.

It promises to be a cold crisp day in Jungletown to-day, and although on the face of the performances of both elevens thus far this season Princeton's chances are none too rosy, nevertheless the Tiger, encouraged by the fact that in the past it was easy to take Harvard's measure, will go into to-day's fray full of hope.

Harvard invaded New York last night and made headquarters at the Hotel Aberdeen. In the 'Varsity squad are thirty-eight players, eleven coaches, and four managers, and in the freshman party, which is also en route to Princeton to tackle the Tiger youngsters, are twenty-six players, five coaches, and two managers. Also a large party of undergraduates came to town last night, and more are expected to-day. There is much interest at Cambridge over the game and the Crimson contingent will be plenty large enough to give the team all the encouragement it needs.

The Harvard squad will go to Princeton this morning over the Pennsylvania Railroad on a special train on which luncheon will be served. The squad will return to the Aberdeen immediately after the game and will stay in this city until Sunday morning. The players will be taken to the theatre this evening.

The Crimson team is in excellent condition. Quarterback Potter, who has been injured for the past week, will start the game. After Harvard's fine showing against Brown last week, there is a strong feeling of optimism noticeable in the Cambridge crowd, and they are confident of winning to-day's game. The team does not regard Princeton too lightly, for past experience has taught Harvard that the Tigers are always due for a stubborn fight.

Princeton's development this season has been slow and unsatisfactory. Lehigh played a tie game, 6 to 6, against the Tigers on Oct 11, and the Navy held them to an 0 to 0 tie on Oct. 21. Frequent shakeups by the coaching forces has prevented any systematized policy at Princeton. Two weeks ago the team was in the throes of a serious slump when it met the Navy. The coaches since then have been driving the team hard, and it is not unreasonable to suppose that they will show a lot more football to-day than most people expect.

The only line of comparison between the teams on comparative scores is the games with Holy Cross. Harvard played Holy Cross on Oct. 7 and won by a scant score of 8 to 0. Last Saturday Princeton played the Worcester college team and won by a score of 20 to 0. However, Harvard has improved wonderfully since the early season contests.

For the past week the Princeton coaches have been trying to get some semblance of team work in the Tigers' attack. There has been much secret practice and Princetonians look for a surprise in the team's showing. As far as comparison on paper goes, Harvard looks much the stronger eleven. At ends the Crimson has Smith and O'Brien, two fast rushes, who on the season's performances more than match Brown and White, the Tiger pair. Smith is a veteran and one of the best ends of last season.

At tackles there seems to be little choice. Eddie Hart, Captain of the Tigers for the second time, is a powerfully aggressive linesman, who will be a match for the best that Harvard can present. The other Tiger tackle, Pete Vaughn, is an experienced player from Notre Dame, and his worth in the East has not been fairly tested yet. Great things are expected of him. Against these two will probably be Gardiner and Hitchcock.

Harvard seems to have a decided advantage in the guard positions. Capt. Fisher and Leslie are an experienced pair that would be hard to beat, although Wilson, Brown, and Duff are formidable linesmen. Duff has come into prominence in the work of the past two weeks, and will get first call in to-day's game. There is little choice between the centre men. Storer of Harvard will face Bluethenthal, and as both are young and of somewhat unknown ability, in a big contest their work will be watched with interest.

Potter at quarter back is perhaps a better player and commander than either Chrystie or Penfield of Princeton. Potter has shown great aptness at hurling the forward pass, and in this feature of the game Princeton's work has been disappointing, for it has not yet shown any marked ability to use this great ground-gaining play with success.

Both back fields are fast, with Harvard presenting a star of the first magnitude in Percy Wendell. He is one of the smashing, irresistible types of half backs that the game nowadays rarely develops. He runs low and fast and is a hard man to bring down. In Pendleton Princeton has one of the fastest half backs in the East. He is best in an open field. Baker, the other back, is also fast, while in Reynolds or Campbell Harvard has valuable ground gainers. De Witt, the Tiger full back, will probably do the punting, and with Felton out of the game this task will fall on Potter. Interesting things are looked for in the kicking line, for it is believed that Princeton will resort to a kicking game early in the struggle. There is little choice between the rival full backs, Huntington and De Witt.

The exodus for Princeton both by train and automobile will begin early to-day. Special trains on the Pennsylvania Railroad leave here at 8:28, 9:02, 9:28, 9:55, 10:10, 10:20, 10:30, 10:45, and at intervals of ten minutes until 11:30.

The season records of the teams is as follows:

HARVARD THE FAVORITE.

Crimson Backers in Princeton Bubbling Over with Confidence of Victory

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 3.—A short and snappy signal drill for a half hour this afternoon concluded Princeton's preparation for the game with Harvard to-morrow, and all Tigertown is now on edge for the battle. The lack of confidence among the Princeton following is in strong contrast to the enthusiastic declarations from an advance Harvard contingent which reached here early this afternoon, and the odds are strongly in favor of the Crimson. Princetonians are loyal to their aggregation, however, and show an eagerness to take up Harvard's offers. The Tiger evidently has no intention of lying down before the mighty New Englanders, and seems to be counting on more than a little luck.

The official line-up of the Princeton team to-morrow, announced by the coaches after the signal drill this afternoon, was what was expected after a week's secret practice. It is as follows:

There will doubtless be many substitutions in the Tiger line-up to-morrow, more than in many years in a big game.

Sawyer is sure to take a place in the backfield before the end of the game, if only to give the first string backs a rest, and Hammond is likely to substitute for Dunlap at right end after the play is under way. Phillips may also displace Vaughan at right tackle, a 'Varsity berth he has filled in many of Princeton's games this year and which he can take care of in good style. Vaughan has been a bit slow in charging during the past week and may not play during the entire game. There are so many strong second string men on the Princeton squad this year that the coaches will have an opportunity to rest the first eleven toward the end of a period.

Chrystie and Joe Duff, as predicted, have first call at quarter back and right guard, respectively, and it is felt that they will both give a good account of themselves. Chrystie has been practicing running back punts during the last week, and with the exception of a tendency to fumble is a valuable man. Duff may be kept in throughout the game, but otherwise Brown or McLean will substitute for him. Waller would be the most logical choice for left end, though Sam White is in much better condition than last week at this time, and feels that he can stay in for four periods.

A heavy frost fell here last night, but the gridiron at Osborne Field was well protected with straw, and the field was solid to-day. The Princeton contingent seems more concerned about the weather than the respective strength of the teams, and a fair day to-morrow will give them some degree of confidence.

It is the general opinion here that Princeton's offensive strength to-morrow will be settled when it is seen how well the line is protecting the Princeton scoring machine. Baker has shown up well in the secret practice at skirting the scrub ends, but on many occasions the forwards have broken through the 'Varsity line and downed him in his tracks.

One of the greatest individual duels in years will take place to-morrow when Fisher and Gardiner, at guard and tackle, respectively, face for the first time Tom Wilson and Capt. Hart. As the left side of the line is supposedly Princeton's Gibraltar, Harvard relies most on its right side, and a battle royal is expected when these two tandems of giants clash. Wilson is not in the best condition, but Capt. Hart has been working hard all week, and is in great fighting trim.

AUTO ROUTES TO PRINCETON.

Road Conditions for Motorists Attending To-day's Football Game.

Persons who contemplate going to the Harvard-Princeton football game at Princeton to-day, starting from this city, will be interested in the following report on the condition of the various routes, which has been issued by the Bureau of Tours of the Automobile Club of America. The bureau declares that the road via New Brunswick will undoubtedly be found to be the best route. The report follows:

NEW YORK TO PRINCETON, N. J., VIA NEW BRUNSWICK.

NEW YORK—(Route via Staten Island good macadam to Perth Amboy, worn macadam to Metuchen.) Hudson County Boulevard, on route via Newark in fair condition, although becoming worn. Newark Turnpike all good asphalt, with the exception of the last few blocks, which are rough cobble entering.

NEWARK—Badly worn macadam to Elizabeth. Good macadam to Rahway. Section of road closed; bad detour necessary. Metuchen—Fair macadam; poor entering.

NEW BRUNSWICK—(To avoid the congestion on the Cranberry Pike it is possible to leave New Brunswick on the Franklin Turnpike over good macadam to Franklin Park. Keep straight on dirt road to Rocky Hill, avoiding turn to the left, which leads into Kingston. Follow good macadam into Princeton.) ARMY FEARS ONLY COSTELLO

Georgetown's Drop Kicker May Break West Point Slate of Clean Victories.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, Nov. 3.—The Army team had a long signal practice to-day and the entire corps gathered on the side lines and cheered the team for the hour that the men were on the field. Since West Point has attained the honor of being the only big team in the East that has not been scored upon, they are doubly anxious to go through the remaining few games before they face the Navy with a clean slate. With the possibility of Costello, Georgetown's drop kicker, upsetting things, the cadets are not overconfident that to-morrow's game will see a zero marked up against the Southerners.

The Army line will be weakened by the absence of Devore at tackle, who is still out of the game with a bad knee. It is not expected that either Cook or Gillespie, the regular ends, will be able to get into the line-up. Cook has an injured side, and Gillespie's thigh has been badly bruised. Lanphier and Hege will in all probability play the ends. Benedict will not play at half back, and McDonald will be substituted.

Public Gets a Peep at Middles.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 3.—The public was admitted to the practice at the Naval Academy this afternoon for the first time during the week and had an opportunity of judging whether the hard work of the coaches during the week had braced up the attack, which was slow and uncertain in Saturday's game against Western Reserve. The practice lasted for an hour and a half, there being no scrimmage, excepting a long signal drill. The attack gave every indication of having improved in power, speed, and solidity.

Capt. Dalton, who has not been working hard heretofore on account of a bruised leg, has been in all the practice during the week and is in fair shape. The team will be directed to hit up a fast pace to-morrow against North Carolina Agricultural and Mechanical College so as to subject the offensive game to a real test.

Glencoes' Football Games.

The gridiron stars of the Glencoe A. C. will tackle the eleven of the Howard A. C. of Tremont to-morrow at Olympic Field, 136th Street and Fifth Avenue, at 3 o'clock. On Election Day, Nov. 7, the Morningside A. C. team will try conclusions with the Glencoes on the same field. A preliminary game will be played.

YALE PLAYS N. Y. U. TEAM IN NEW HAVEN

New Yorkers Not Regarded as Strong Opponents for Elis in Their First Match.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 3.—Yale and New York University will to-morrow play their first football game together, and the Yale coaches are by no means terrified at the outlook. They reversed their usual custom at to-day's practice, sending the regulars through ten minutes of scrimmaging. The day before every previous game this Fall the 'Varsity has been excused from actual football. The fact that Williams defeated New York University 8 to 6 last week has led the coaches to conclude that only a brisk, interesting practice brush faces the players to-morrow, and many substitutes will be found in the Eli ranks.

One of the experiments that will be tried will be testing the playing power of Bob Lore, the heaviest member of the squad. He tips the scales at 235 pounds and holds the intercollegiate record for distance in diving and floating. His football record has not been as brilliant as his swimming feats, but he has been picked by Foster Sanford as a strong defensive lineman, and for the first time will be started in a game to-morrow. He has been used as both substitute tackle and centre during the last period of several games. Lore is the son of the President of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

Another change which has been ordered to go into effect to-morrow is for Francis and Avery to change places at end. Paul's weak defensive play since he returned to the squad two weeks ago has been a cause for alarm, and Paul was really rated behind Perry as a candidate for right tackle when Perry broke his hand recently. Paul now holds the position, but the coaches deemed it advisable to strengthen the right wing by sending the veteran Pete Francis over to that side. Francis has now played every position on the Yale eleven except quarter back. Two years ago he was half back and full back. Last Fall he tried centre and tackle till he was shelved by an injury. This Fall he has been used at guard and end.

To-day's practice wound up the first week of secret practice, and of the formations which will be employed against Princeton and Harvard. The coaches said to-night that they were much pleased with the team's development during the week. The plays work smoothly, and Yale is believed to have some trump cards in reserve for her final games.

To-day's scrimmaging was designed to test a new play which has not before worked effectively. It was manipulated so cleverly by the 'Varsity to-day that they scored in ten minutes without losing possession of the ball. Freeman crossed the line for the score. He will be used at full back to-morrow, and Walter Camp, Jr., who started for the first time last Saturday, will be given a chance to repeat.

Several Yale players and coaches will see the Harvard-Princeton game to-morrow to acquire points on the pet formations of the two elevens. Most of the Yale coaches pick Harvard to win.

Head Coach Olcott took chances of injuring some of the men on the eve of the most important game of the year when he put the New York University team through a hard scrimmage yesterday afternoon. He felt that the men needed the work badly, and so a forty-minute drill was held with the first team opposed by the scrubs. The coaches worked hard to perfect the men and to give them confidence in their abilities. All the plays in the repertoire of the team were used, and over a half-hour was spent on formations to be used within striking distance of the goal, especially within the ten-yard line.

The shake-up which occurred early in the week has evidently not been a success, and yesterday Capt. Brennan was taken from tackle and put at his old position behind the line. Wiener went in at tackle, and Comfort dropped back to the scrubs. The coaches have not sufficient confidence that Comfort will withstand stage fright, since he is practically inexperienced.

Henneberger and Crawford were out for practice, and this fact will greatly raise the hopes of the students, for it was feared that these two veterans would be kept out of to-day's game with Yale by injuries. Vesely has not returned, and it is doubtful whether he can start against the Elis to-day. This will mean a serious loss to the line, as he is a star tackle. All the other regulars are in excellent trim, and are going up to New Haven confident that a good showing will be made against the Yale eleven.

A special train bearing the team and a delegation of 200 students will leave the Grand Central Station at 10 o'clock this morning.

Indians Play Pennsylvania.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Nov. 3.—Supported by a couple of hundred of Indian student rooters, who leave here on a special train to-morrow morning, the Carlisle Indian football team will play its most important game of the year to-morrow against Pennsylvania at Philadelphia. The redskins left this evening for the Quaker City and will stop at the Normandie over night. Coach Warner and Lieut. Treibley, an army doctor, have charge of the squad, which is in as good physical condition as could be expected. The Indian line-up to-morrow will be: Left end, Roberts; left tackle, Newasha; left guard, Jordan; centre, Garlow or Bargie; right guard, Busch or Hill; right tackle, Bodge; right end, Capt. Samson Burd; quarter back, Arcasa or Welch; left half back, Thorpe; right half back, J. Wheelock; full back, Powell.

Coach Warner in commenting on the game merely said that his men were sufficiently trained, and Capt. Burd would only say that his men were determined to offer the best they could.

SYRACUSE VS. MICHIGAN.

Westerners Expect Victory by a Fair-Sized Score Against New Yorkers.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 3.—Admitting that their chances of defeating Michigan are brighter to-night than they were a week ago, but hardly confident of their ability to down the Wolverines, the football eleven of Syracuse University finished the training programme for to-morrow's big battle at Ann Arbor with light practice on the Detroit Country Club's grounds to-day. Michigan indulged in similar work at Ann Arbor, and despite the absence of Coach Yost the Westerners expect victory by a fair-sized score.

Capt. Fogg of Syracuse stated to-day that the injuries which Waldron sustained a week ago means a shift in the backfield. He expects that Salmon will play left half in place of Waldron, with E. Smith at right half and O. Smith at full back. Fogg will start the game at quarter back.

Michigan will face Syracuse with almost a completely new line-up. The inability of either Craig or McMillan to get in the game means Stan Wells at right half and Picard at quarter. It will be the latter's first real test under fire. Kaynor also starts his first big game. Yost switched him from the scrubs early this week on account of his great defensive work. Weak tackling has been one of Michigan's weakest points all season.

SYRACUSE TEAM IN WRECK.

Players Thrown from Berths, but None Is Seriously Hurt.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 3.—The Syracuse football team which will play the University of Michigan eleven to-morrow at Ann Arbor, arrived here to-day four hours late because of a wreck last night west of Rochester, N. Y., when its coach jumped the track.

Many of the players were thrown from their berths, but none was seriously hurt. Linesman Probst pulled the emergency cord and stopped the train.

WILLIAMS AT CORNELL.

Ithacans Do Not Anticipate Much Trouble in Defeating Visitors.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Cornell expects no trouble in defeating Williams College to-morrow, but because a hard game is expected the coaches laid off the entire squad this afternoon, and instead of showing up at Percy Field the men took a long walk into the country. A short signal drill was held this evening in the university armory, in which the few simple plays that are to be used to-morrow were tried out. Butler, O'Connor, and Eyrich also did some kicking this afternoon, and all three men showed that they are fairly accurate at booting the oval across the bars.

It is two years since Williams played Cornell, and in that game the New England team won with a field goal. Last year the Ithacans planned to win, but the sudden death on the day before the game of Payne, one of the members of the Cornell freshman football team, caused the Cornell University authorities to cancel the game. This year, however, the Cornell team is confident of getting even.

There will be several changes in the Cornell line-up in to-morrow's game. Butler will be back at quarter back, the first time he has played since the Washington and Jefferson game. The same is true of Champaign, the 'Varsity right tackle, who has been laid up with injuries. He is expected to play half the game, with Williamson in for the balance. Hawkins is more than likely to witness the game from the side line. His bad fumbling last week has put him in disfavor with the coaches, and he has been displaced at right half back by R. B. Whyte. Fritz and Eyrich will play ends, Munk left tackle, and O'Rourke, Whyte, and Munns will be the centre trio. O'Connor at left half and Underhill at full back complete the list.

Williams College eleven arrived at Rogues Harbor this morning, and after a sharp signal drill this afternoon Coach Daley said they were ready for Cornell.

Lawrenceville Game Called Off.

LAWRENCEVILLE, N. J., Nov. 3.—The annual football game between the Lawrenceville and Mercersburg Academies, scheduled to be played here this afternoon, has been indefinitely postponed on account of scarlet fever. Douglas McKenzie, right half back of the Lawrenceville team, is ill with the disease, and the authorities of the school called off the game, as they did not desire to take chances of scarlet fever spreading.

BALLOT GOING TO ENGLAND.

Keene Stallion and Four Yearlings to Sail on Minnetonka.

Five of James R. Keene's horses will be shipped to England on the Minnetonka to-day. They are the stallion Ballot and four yearlings, two colts and two fillies.

Some time ago it was reported that Ballot had been sold to the German Government, and the story was generally believed on both sides of the Atlantic. It was learned yesterday that no sale had been made, though Mr. Keene has expressed a willingness to dispose of the son of Voter and Cerito if he could obtain his price.

The present intention is that Ballot shall go to the stud at Newmarket, where Colin has been standing since his failure to train after his shipment abroad. Ballot went into retirement one of the best horses that has raced in recent years, and his blood lines will make him a much-sought-after stallion by the English breeders.

The yearlings in the shipment are a bay colt by Peter Pan-Mint Cake, a brown colt by Peter Pan-Amonaly, the dam of Superman, winner of a Brooklyn; a black filly by Disguise-Biturica, a sister to Maskette, one of the best mares that ever raced in America, and a chestnut filly by Delhi-Nora Creina, a sister to Lahore.

It is the second time that Ballot has been sent to England. On the other occasion he was shipped with the other Keene horses that went for an English invasion, but he was so harshly treated by the handicappers that he was never able to show his real worth on the British courses.

Datura Wins Race for Widener.

The first car to reach San Diego will win a special prize of $1,000, and from then on at all of the six places where drivers must stop and register their names and numbers, an additional prize of $500 will go to the first car to arrive. The first arrival at Phoenix will receive $7,000.

TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 3.—Frank Gotch threw James Asbell of Kansas City last night in straight falls. The first was obtained in sixteen minutes and the second in seven minutes.

HARVARD RUNNERS FIRST.

Defeat Massachusetts Tech Over the Brookline Course.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 3.—Harvard University's cross-country team, which has been ably coached this Fall by Al Shrubb, the English champion, won a great race from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology team over the Tech course of four and one-half miles in Brookline this afternoon in the eighth annual cross-country run between these colleges. Capt. Paul R. Withington of the Crimson took first place easily in the time of 23 minutes 24 1-5 seconds and his team mates, Copland and Lawless, captured the next two places.

Twelve men started for each team, the first six of each contingent to finish being counted in the scoring. Harvard took first, second, third, fifth, eighth, and thirteenth places, while the Boston team was well bunched in the following positions: Fourth, sixth, seventh, ninth, tenth, and eleventh. Capt. Withington's time was only twenty-one seconds behind the record set by Jacques, the ex-Harvard champion in 1908. Kermit Roosevelt, son of the Colonel, ran on the Harvard team and finished fourteenth.

The Cambridge men were in fine condition at the finish, and Coach Shrubb expressed himself as well pleased with the outlook for the intercollegiate run on Nov. 27.

ATTACKS ROOSEVELT'S PLAN TO ARBITRATE

Louis Marshall Declares Our Passport Dispute with Russia Should Not Go to The Hague.

WOULD ABROGATE TREATY

Which Russia Has Ignored—The Outlook Answers That His Plan Would Cause Serious Trouble.

Louis Marshall has written a letter, published in the current number of The Outlook, protesting against Col. Theodore Roosevelt's proposal that the passport dispute between this country and Russia be laid before The Hague International Tribunal for adjudication before the treaty of 1832 is denounced.

"But how will arbitration solve the problem?" asks Mr. Marshall. "By entering into an agreement to arbitrate we would but enter into a new treaty with Russia. She has, as Mr. Roosevelt vigorously insists, broken the treaty of 1832. What assurance have we that she will observe any new compact? But if it were taken for granted that she would recognize its binding force, then we as well as Russia would be bound in advance by the outcome of the arbitration. Should the decision be adverse to Russia, after the delay incident to a rather protracted proceeding, we would nevertheless have made no progress. Russia might simply repeat what she has said in the past, that the acceptance of our interpretation of the treaty is opposed to her public policy, and give notice under the terms of the treaty of her election to terminate it.

"The rejection of our interpretation could be due only to the rejection of that theory of citizenship which has been incorporated into our National policy from the beginning of the Republic, and of the fundamental concept of our Constitution, that all citizens, native born or naturalized, without distinction of race, creed, or color, are entitled to equality of right, privilege, and protection without discrimination.

"However desirable may be the settlement of all international controversies by arbitration, Mr. Roosevelt wisely recognizes that it is not every matter in controversy that is arbitrable. It would certainly seem that there are controlling reasons for believing that no controversy, the determination of which is dependent on or involves the interpretation of a provision of the Constitution of the United States, or any rights of citizenship arising thereunder, should be deemed arbitrable.

"At all events, would not arbitration in this instance prove futile, when one considers that, whatever meaning may be attributed as a result of arbitration to the treaty of 1832, our Government, if the decision is against it, would, out of self-respect, be bound to give one year's notice of termination, and Russia might, for any reason which she deems sufficient, give a similar notice if judgment goes against her?"

In answering Mr. Marshall's letter, the editors of The Outlook say that Mr. Roosevelt's proposal was not to arbitrate the question of abrogating the treaty of 1832, but to get the decision of The Hague Tribunal before taking any such step.

"In the judgment, not only of The Outlook, but of Mr. Roosevelt, the treaty will have to be abrogated in the end, if Russia does not treat our Jewish fellow-citizens as she does our Christian fellow-citizens—that is, each on his merits. But in all friendliness we wish to point out to our correspondent and those of his faith who think as he does, that they are most unwise in opposing this proposal. The abrogation of the treaty with Russia, terminating all treaty relations with her, would be a most serious step, and very great trouble would ensue. Unless the American people are thorouhly convinced of the justice of our position, such action would cause a very great outburst of anti-Jewish feeling in this country, and the attitude of those Jews who demand such abrogation without trying every possible means to obtain our end by less drastic means, is most unwise from every standpoint, and is especially unwise from the standpoint of the Jews in this country.

"If the aim of the Jews in America is merely to pass resolutions which will flatter their co-religionists, then they are acting wisely in declining to consider practical steps to achieve their ends, and in holding mass-meetings demanding the abrogation of the treaty, but if they wish seriously to achieve the purpose they have in view, they should instantly support in hearty fashion the proposal Mr. Roosevelt has made."

NEWS OF BOOKS

A CURIOUS sidelight on English literary society has just come out. There were three great English authors in New York at once this Fall—Mr. Robert Hichens, with "The Fruitful Vine," just published, and "The Garden of Allah" on at the Century Theatre; Mr. Arnold Bennett with "Hilda Lessways," just out, and Mr. William Butler Yeats, looking after the Irish Players. Mr. Hichens was asked if the three major planets met and exchanged views on the Americans.

"I met Mr. Yeats here," said he. "Yes—and for the first time. I had never met him in London. As for Mr. Bennett—I have never met him in England either—but once I did have a talk with him in the Sahara Desert, at Biskra. I have never met Wells, in any place, but I suppose now, after these two experiences, that I shall meet him at the north pole."

After the Summer and Fall spent in Paris, London, and Scotland, Frederick Townsend Martin, author of "The Passing of the Idle Rich," recently published, will return home to this country on the Mauretania, sailing Nov. 11. Mr. Martin is said to hold a high place in the life of the British nobility, so is well equipped to compare the idle rich of Europe with the idle rich of this country as he has described them in his book. He has spent much of his time this Fall writing and lecturing on social conditions.

Supplementing the announcement that Booth Tarkington expected to spend the Winter at Princeton, comes the news that he has rented there for a prolonged stay a house noted for its artistic decorations, just outside the town. Mr. Tarkington is said to be at work on a novel treating intimately of Princeton, his Alma Mater, the first book he has written since the publication of his "Beasley's Christmas Party."

The Rev. Francis Higgins, known familiarly as the "sky pilot" of the Minnesota lumberjacks, has just returned from a little holiday abroad. Norman Duncan, to whom missionary work at the outskirts of civilization seems particularly to appeal, has written enthusiastically of Mr. Higgins's virile efforts. In his book, "Higgins—A Man's Christian," he quotes one of these lumbermen as saying: "Higgins's job is keepin' us boys out o' hell; an' he's the only man on the job."

James Huneker, whose new book, "Franz Liszt," has just been published, began his preparation for the writing of the life of Liszt more than a quarter of a century ago. At that time he had started to collect books, articles, and anecdotes on the great pianist-composer. Moreover, he has been personally intimate with many of Liszt's pupils, among whom some became almost as famous as their master; and he has enjoyed the advantage over most biographers and commentators of being able to play on his own piano the Liszt pieces, including the most difficult.

Now that Nansen has finished his "In Northern Mists," a history of early sea navigation, to be published early this month, he has turned to lecturing, and will deliver a number of lectures in England, where his book is issued simultaneously with American publication.

Margaret Cameron, the author of "The Involuntary Chaperon" and other books, sailed last week for England just as her new novel, "The Pretender Person," was put on the book counters. She has devoted the Summer to finishing the novel, which is one of travel, and will now do a little of it herself by way of vacation.

Georgia Wood Pangborn, whose volume of short stories entitled "Interventions" has recently been issued, was the winner of two of the $1,000 prizes offered recently by Collier's Weekly. Both these "prize" stories are included in this collection.

William Romaine Paterson, whose latest novel, "The Old Dance Master," brought him into prominence again after several years of silence, is undecided whether he will write a sequel to this story of Herr Habenichts. Mr. Paterson is a leisurely writer, and while he has a notebook full of ideas he has not yet started work on a new novel. Mr. Paterson finds that he can do his best work in London. The country, he says, "overwhelms" him. Besides, his theory of his craft as a novelist makes the great city a necessity. He holds that all the great creators have been observed above all things, and that the field of observation is necessarily larger in the city than in the country. Perhaps this impression of his accounts for Mr. Paterson's frequent explorations of the Continent. He is as much at home in France, Italy, Germany, and Spain as in England. And the languages of the first three of those countries are as familiar to his tongue as that of his native land.

Frances Hodgson Burnett had a charming model for the description of English country life in her latest novel, "The Secret Garden." For fifteen years she leased Maytham Hall, Kent. She got the impressions for "The Secret Garden" from the hall's antique rose gardens, surrounded by brick walls dating clear back to 1000 A. D.

In the hall grounds stands the ancient Norman Church of the Hundreds of Rolvenden, mentioned in the Domesday Book. The adjacent villages are full of quaint old gaffers and gammers, who wait in the gardens of their thatched cottages to salute the hall carriage as it passes. Among them persist the customs of "Merrie England"—the bearing of the Yule Log, the singing of waits, and the Guy Fawkes celebration.

The towns surrounding have flavorsome names—Peasemarsh, Smallhive, Benenden. Through all the countryside are seen children in funny little red cloaks given them by Mrs. Burnett's neighbor, the Earl of Cranbrook.

James J. Hill has expressed himself as agreeing with the novel economic conclusions reached by George C. Hull in his book, "Industrial Depressions," which is to be published early in November. Incidentally he has expressed his own economic ideas. Mr. Hill, upon reading the manuscript, wrote to the author of "Industrial Depressions":

"You strike bedrock in making the desire for gain, and not any abstract or theoretical cause, the ultimate explanation of industrial operations and their changes. Equally true is the prescription of publicity, with the careful adjustment of demand and supply, as a proper remedy for industrial depressions. Your analytical method is the only one that can disclose finally the cause of industrial depressions."

John A. Moroso's series of New York detective stories, with the plain clothes man, "Solid Ivory" Tierney, running through each mystery, has become a feature of the Red Book. In the current issue the story is entitled "The Master Yegg," and tells of the attempted robbery of a downtown bank on New Year's eve night. Other stories in the series to appear are "Il Gran' Signor" and "The Quarry."

Already inquiries are being made of Edna Turpin's publishers as to the possibility of a sequel to "Honey Sweet." One of these who expresses the hope that Miss Turpin may write another book about Anne Lewis is Margaret Sangster. In a recent letter praising the novel she says: "The atmosphere of the book is wholesome, the little heroine original and natural, and the romance and reality are so well combined that nothing is left to be desired. I think that "Honey Sweet" should have a sequel, for everybody will want to know something about the girlhood of Anne Lewis."

John Fleming Wilson is an Oregonian born and bred—except for his course at Princeton—and as a newspaper writer and magazine editor is known from Portland to San Diego. He has sailed from almost every port in Oregon and California, and in almost every craft from an Oriental liner to a Columbia River fishing boat, and his stories of some of these voyages have appeared in various weekly and monthly magazines. The best of these stories are to be collected and published in book form under the title of "Across the Latitudes."

The Extension Department of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., is offering prizes aggregating $750 for the best epic poem on the civil war. There is to be one prize of $500 for the best book or canto of the proposed epic and another of $250 for the best outline or plan of such a poem. Though this prize is offered for competition by a Southern University, the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., and only Southerners are eligible as competitors, yet a warning is given that only those poems which rise above a spirit of sectionalism will be considered by the judges.

Another instance of a conspicuously successful novel which was rejected by several publishers before it reached the public is "The Wood-Carver of 'Lympus." Originally issued by Little, Brown & Co., seven years ago, this story of a Vermont cripple whom a friend induced to take up wood-carving was some time in attaining its popularity. A twenty-eighth printing, (10,000 copies,) is now announced. Another book by Miss Waller which is finding increased readers yearly is "A Year Out of Life," and in sending it to press again the publishers state that its sales since 1910 have quadrupled.

F. Berkeley Smith, who spends most of his time in the little town near Paris that is the locale of his recent book, "The Village of Vagabonds," is just completing a new novel. Mr. Smith will return to New York for a while after a few months more of France.

Apropos of her new novel, "The Secret Garden," whose scenes are laid in pleasant rural England, people are asking whether Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett is English or American. She was born in England, and for many years had a great manorial estate there. But she is naturalized as an American. She herself has said: "I am English by birth, but American by the birth of my two sons!"

POLITICS AND TRADE.

Wherever business men talk trade there is agreement that there's nothing the matter with trade except "politics," which has been defined as the business of making laws to worry business. Happily there is cause for optimism regarding the outlook just in proportion to the truth of the general idea that trade would be all right if only it were let alone. So strongly was the National Credit Men's Association of the opinion that the commercial outlook depends upon the legislative outlook that it compiled a list of the Legislatures which would meet the coming year. The only States whose lawmakers assemble in 1912 are Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island, South Carolina, and Virginia. Several of those States will be recognized as not in the business of worrying business, so that the list of States where pernicious activity of legislation is possible is exceptionally small. Moreover, the elections of this Autumn are of less than usual interest. Only Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Maryland, Kentucky, Mississippi, Louisana, and New Mexico elect State tickets. The elections of Mayors and local Judges contain nothing affrighting to the susceptibilities of the most nervous business men.

A glance backward is as reassuring as the glance forward, because it shows a little perceived growth of sanity in legislative sentiment toward business in general and corporations in particular. Firm ground for this statement is afforded by the compilation of the legislation of 1911 by the Railway Business Association. Twenty-four States enacted no legislation hostile to railways, and almost no legislation on the subject. Taking the country through, the laws affecting carriers enacted in 1911 totaled 276, against 664 in 1909. No railway laws were enacted in Texas, which has finally awakened to the fact that it needs railways more than it needs politicians. In Texas, Oklahoma, Alabama, and Iowa the candidates for Governor thought it prudent to go to the people on platforms of fairness toward business, and all four were elected. Epitomizing a mass of detail, the Railway Business Association says:

> It is evident that at the present moment political leaders who advocate a far-sighted policy toward railroads do receive the support of the voters. We point out further that the railways and cognate industries have assiduously conciliated the public, and that toward the railways the growth of public friendliness is now shown.

The outlook for National business has improved in this respect as much as that for business within the States. Taking the worst possible view, Federal prosecutions are less affrighting since the Supreme Court declared that the law against restraints of trade must be construed and enforced in the manner to which traders have been accustomed immemorially. There is nothing fearsome in the enforcement of the equivalent of the common law against conspirators. On the contrary, all who are not conspirators will breathe more freely by restraint of those who combine against their trade. Moreover, there is a growing suspicion that, whether intentionally or unintentionally, the prosecution of the trusts is riding for a fall. A long series of successful prosecutions had given the idea that a complaint was equivalent to a sentence, but there is a certainty that sooner or later the Government will bring an unsuccessful case, while experience is showing that even a Government victory is not necessarily disastrous.

It is true that next year we are to have both a Presidential election and renewed tariff agitation. There have been good Presidential years, judged even in respect to Wall Street operations as well as to general traders. The tariff years which have proved most disturbing have been those in which fundamentals were already unsound, and when there were complicating side issues. The marvelous manner in which trade this year has stood against assaults from all sides at once attests a superstructure standing upon excellent foundations. This year there are no fears from such side issues as threats to alter the standard of value, or a currency stringency, or the culmination of an extravagant speculation. Altogether business was never in better shape to withstand any fate, and seldom has there been less cause for undue apprehension. The Nation's mandate is to be taken under indications of returning sanity among the lawmakers of the States, but while there is still some fever at the National capital. When the States were aflame there was reason for fear about what the National legislators might do. Slender was the hope for the interests which might be caught between the two fires. But when one fire has burned itself out the material for a conflagration is lacking. After such a fever the system is immune for a space, and those who have thought to improve their fortunes by exploiting the patient's delirium will be prudent to reconsider their position in case the raving ceases. The people are more likely to put the extremists in straitjackets than further to cripple business. Considerable damage has been done, but nothing beyond repair. The sober and solid interests can control the situation if they will, and if they choose to respond to the warning summons of the President.

THE NATIONAL CITY COMPANY.

The management of the National City Bank has shown great wisdom in causing the National City Company, which it controls, to dispose of its holdings of shares of other National banks. Whatever appearance of aloofness and separation of identity and of interest may have sprung from a dual incorporation, the general impression that the control is one and the same is quite ineradicable. Since the National Banking act does not permit National banks to have branches or to buy and hold the shares of other National banks, the creation, by banks, of holding companies for that purpose must of course be looked upon as an attempt to do by indirection what the law forbids.

The decision taken by the National City Bank is wise, sensible, and public spirited. It is a waste of breath to urge upon the people of the country the acceptance of the Aldrich plan of currency reform so long as one National bank, through a holding company, may control twenty, fifty, or one hundred other National banks.

THE CHINESE CONSTITUTION.

The insurgents in China must have been pretty well prepared for the success which to foreign eyes has seemed so sudden and surprising. They have turned out, at a day's notice, the framework of an elaborate Constitution, which the Regent has promptly accepted. Even the dreamers of the French Revolution never equaled this celerity.

The chief purpose of the new system is to put close bounds on the power of the dynasty and to take into the hands of the Parliament practically all the activities of the Government. The Emperor is declared inviolable and his rule perpetual, but he cannot do much without the assent and the immediate co-operation of Parliament. That body chooses the Premier, whom the Emperor must appoint, and the Premier chooses all the subordinates, subject to the indirect control of Parliament. Provision is made for the election of the upper house, but none for that of the Parliament, so far as appears from the published summary. But it is plain that the Provincial Assemblies will have a good deal of influence in the general organization. Peace and war, the direction of the army, and the making of laws, together with all finance, are placed in the hands of the Parliament. That body also has the right to change the Constitution. YUAN SHI-KAI declines the post of Premier, but whether he will ultimately accept it depends, we imagine, on the opinion he forms as to the success that awaits the experiment.

KEEP THE JUDICIARY OUT OF POLITICS.

There is a sound principle, a safe rule for the guidance of every voter in Manhattan and the Bronx in making a choice of judiciary candidates. The way to vote intelligently and to vote right is to cast a ballot for those candidates for Supreme Court Justiceships who are free of Tammany entanglements and of all ties of personal or professional loyalty to any boss or leader. There are seven candidates for the Supreme Court bench. Four of them meet the conditions of the test we have applied, the other three do not at all meet it. The four candidates who are independent of Tammany and the bosses and leaders are FRANCIS M. SCOTT, FRANCIS K. PENDLETON, HENRY DE FOREST BALDWIN, and NATHAN OTTINGER. Justice SCOTT has served a full term upon the Supreme Court bench. MURPHY was much inclined to refuse him a renomination, on the ground that he was not an organization man. The Tammany boss yielded to the protests of the Bar, and, quite against his will, allowed Justice SCOTT's name to go upon the ticket. Neither is Justice PENDLETON a Tammany organization man. He was nominated as Justice SCOTT was nominated, because of his good record on the bench and because of the appeals of the Bar. Mr. HENRY DE FOREST BALDWIN has always been an opponent of Tammany. He is a thoroughly independent Democrat and a lawyer of high standing. Mr. NATHAN OTTINGER, also a lawyer of unusual ability, is a Republican, but one who has had little to do with political strifes. The Bar Association's resolution is the best possible testimony as to the qualifications of these candidates. That resolution, unanimously adopted, declared that Mr. BALDWIN and Mr. OTTINGER have furnished evidence of qualification for judicial office and are otherwise, in learning and character, fit candidates for judicial office, and are, therefore, entitled to the approval and indorsement of the association.

The Bar Association also testified to the professional qualifications of Justices SCOTT and PENDLETON and of Justice COHALAN and Mr. HENRY D. HOTCHKISS, who are the other two Tammany candidates, and of Mr. CLARENCE J. SHEARN, the Fusion candidate. But Justice COHALAN, Mr. HOTCHKISS, and Mr. SHEARN one and all fail to meet the test of personal independence of machines and bosses. Mr. COHALAN has long been considered the brains of MURPHY. He is his most intimate adviser. Mr. HOTCHKISS, also, has long been a close personal adviser of MURPHY, and he was an adviser of CROKER before the days of MURPHY. Mr. SHEARN has occupied the same relation to Mr. HEARST. The bench should be free, absolutely and altogether free of such close relations, past, present, or future, to politicians. The ugly scandal that has arisen in the Second Judicial Department over the Murphy-Cassidy-McCooey nominations for the Supreme Court bench has its warning and its lesson for the voters in Manhattan and the Bronx. The voters in the Second Department will know what to do with KETCHAM, CALLAHAN, and WILLETT. In this department there should be no wavering or hesitation. Elect the four candidates who stand aloof from the bosses and the organization. The judiciary must be kept out of politics.

Carrying the selective process further, to the remaining places on the county ticket, there can be no doubt that Surrogate FOWLER, who has been renominated to that office by Tammany, and JOHN J. HOPPER, the Fusion candidate for Sheriff, should receive the suffrages of all who desire to vote for the best qualified nominees. Surrogate FOWLER's fitness has been demonstrated by actual service in the office, while Mr. HOPPER is a man of ability and of sturdy character, who enjoys the confidence and respect of all who know him.

THE ARMY.

The mobilization of the great battleship fleet in the Hudson was not an isolated phenomenon; a like policy was adopted for the army manoeuvres on the Mexican border last Summer, and the massing of soldiers in important centres, if the plans of Secretary STIMSON and Major Gen. WOOD are carried out, will bring the army more into the eyes of the Nation.

Secretary of the Navy MEYER has just reviewed the fleet. Secretary of War STIMSON has likewise been active. With Gen. WOOD he has visited many of the military posts in the East, and last week he went on a tour of inspection westward. He finds that the army departments and posts in the United States are widely scattered, a fact which in itself prevents the ready mobilization of any considerable body of soldiers for drill and manoeuvres. He thinks that many of the posts are useless. In the West they were established because of former troubles with the Indians. The Indians, the Secretary says, "are no longer a military problem," so that the army stations, representing a series of petty and unassembled units in remote places, may now be vacated and a few large posts established, around which the main divisions of the army may rally.

Unquestionably the assembling of our army and navy in formidable and spectacular proportions tends to heighten public interest in them. They become popular for enlistment; the problem of recruiting them with young and sturdier applicants becomes simplified. Future manoeuvres, made more possible by the concentration of effective forces, will give the newly enlisted men a valuable training in the art of war and stimulate activity and interest in all branches of the country's defensive service. The new policy is a good one.

MEDDLESOME WOMEN TEACHERS.

The Board of Education will be strongly upheld by public opinion if it takes strict measures with the women teachers who have been trying to force the schools into politics. Under the Corrupt Practices law policemen, firemen, and other city employés are expressly forbidden to belong to political clubs or to use their places in any way to influence political contests. The horde of women advocates of the Equal Pay bill, which was signed by Gov. DIX in one of his worst moods, have already brought under criticism the whole body of women teachers in the public schools. We all know that a large proportion of these teachers are self-respecting, but they must suffer from their enforced association with women who adopt the practices of Tammany politicians. The present invasion of the political field in this city by some of these women deserves vigorous condemnation and the severest punishment that can be inflicted. The amount of influence they can exert to secure the election of the candidates to the Assembly whom they are supporting, candidates who in every instance ought to be defeated, is probably small. But their offense is not to be measured by the amount of damage they can do.

There is a feeling of confidence that many of the Fusion candidates for the Assembly will be elected. That they are generally men who would never have voted to increase the city's burden of taxation by supporting the Equal Pay bill at this time is greatly to their credit. The overthrow of MURPHY's cohorts is the object that will be uppermost in the mind of every intelligent, right-thinking citizen when he enters the election booth next Tuesday. The opposition to this desirable end, engineered by a few heedless women, whose ability to judge in political matters is questionable, and whose deliberate association of their position in the public service with politics is scandalous, is not likely to change many votes. On the contrary, the support of the women, for the reason that they avow, is likely to prove a severe additional handicap for more than one of Mr. MURPHY's candidates.

Nevertheless, for the sake of precedent, and for the good of the whole school system, which will be imperiled if such tactics are countenanced, the Board of Education should rebuke and punish these meddlesome women. They are doing what no other public employés are permitted to do, they are defying the spirit of the law if not its letter, as, if the Corrupt Practices act does not apply directly to women employed in the schools, this defect is due to a lack of foresight on the part of its authors. They never supposed that women teachers would organize to secure the election of unfit candidates. The unfitness of these particular candidates is not to be questioned. But the women employed as teachers have no right to organize for the support of any candidates whatever. They should be compelled to keep out of politics.

THE SHOOTING SEASON.

Save in one respect, the November circular on the progress of the hunting season, issued by the Secretary of Agriculture at Washington, is adequate. The woods are full of game birds and animals. This month opens the hunting season for quail in every State from New York to Nebraska and from Florida to Texas, with the exception of Georgia, where they have shrift till December. Wild turkeys have been hunted in Arkansas, Arizona, and Maryland since September; in most other States from Pennsylvania to New Mexico this month portends havoc to the turkeys. Last week Pennsylvania, latest of all the States, permitted shooting of ruffed grouse. On the Susquehanna flats, on Chesapeake Bay, and at Currituck Sound, N. C., the duck hunters are shooting water fowl. Michigan, Louisiana, and Mississippi open their black bear seasons. In New York and everywhere in the West shooting of the deer has ceased, but in most other States it will continue until the close of November.

But the woods are full of men as well as of beasts. The shooting season should take account of the human animals slain. They are game for crude, inexperienced, often drunken sportsmen, renowned for their heavy charges and wild and scattering shots. There is a bag limit on other game, why not on men? This State has enacted a praiseworthy law which requires that drivers of heavy and fast vehicles be examined for their competency. Before issuing licenses to men and boys who wish to discharge rifles and shotguns during the shooting season, why not find out what their experience is and cross-question them about their proposed methods of warfare upon game animals and birds? The results of such an examination might be startling.

While this city is ashamed of the thirteen craven runaways in automobiles within a month after their drivers had run down individuals in the streets, it may praise the conduct of Mr. THOMAS SHERLOCK. Mr. SHERLOCK, after his machine collided with a man who had jumped from the rear of another automobile and run directly into his path, carried the unfortunate to a hospital and then returned to his post the traffic policeman whom he had taken with him from the scene of the accident. The letter of commendation to Mr. SHERLOCK, sent by the National Highways Protective Society, was well merited.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Betrayed by an Analogy. If the suffrage women who have been so much offended by RUDYARD KIPLING's metrical condemnation of their cause were even half as adroit as they are indignant they could very quickly make their enemy as sorry for his rash attempt to settle this somewhat large question as he is—or should be—for his recent effort to tell the Canadians why they should reject reciprocity.

His "female of the species" poem isn't, indeed, such a bad poem, as poems of its class go. In spite of being timely and didactic, which are two qualities which no poet can seek to exemplify without most serious danger to whatever reputation he may have, Mr. KIPLING has succeeded in writing some verses that almost everybody will read with interest of one sort or another, and not a few of the lines have the ring and rhythm that have raised so many of his lines to the immortality of "familiar quotation." Their sound, however, is very appreciably better than their substance, for never, surely, was a would-be serious argument supported by analogies more unfortunately chosen.

To prove that women, being female, shouldn't vote, Mr. KIPLING instances the she bear and the she cobra and charges them with inferiority to their masculine consorts for the particularly absurd reason that they are readier and fiercer, and more often victorious, fighters against the foes of their race, including the one foe, most ruthless of all, from whom the he bears and the he cobras run away if they can! Does not the eminent bard see that his anthropocentricism has led him far astray from the destination at which he aimed?

Judging, as he asks us to do, from these two specimens of femininity, it will be necessary for us to change the refrain of his poem and make it read—"For the female of the species is more efficient than the male." The "deadliness," from the bear and cobra point of view, which is the only one bears and cobras can reasonably be expected to take, or even to consider, is not a fault or a sin or a disqualification, but the exact opposite of each. Now it is contended—whether truly or not remains a matter of opinion and open discussion—that woman is a "deadlier" antagonist than is her mate in humanity's war with more than a few of its worst foes, abstract and concrete. If the contention be true, so far as it goes it is a reason for giving her the ballot, not for withholding it.

An Appeal Likely to be Heard. At last the vilest of our imported habits, that of giving and taking tips instead of wages for services rendered, is threatened with an attack which, if made with the promised energy and determination, is sure to be to a considerable degree effective and may lead to a complete success.

The National League of Commercial Travelers, so its President informs us, has decided to revolt against a custom that compels its members, according to what they say is a careful estimate, to pay out sums aggregating $50,000,000 a year. Their annual hotel expenses they put at $325,000,000, and 15 per cent. of that amount goes in tips to boys, waiters, and porters and for checking privileges. And this computation does not include the tipping done by auditors, adjusters, experts, inspectors, and others who, while not "traveling men" in the common sense of that phrase, are really in the same category of commercial voyagers.

The first step taken by the league has been the writing of official letters to the proprietors of big and little hotels all over the country, informing them that the tipping evil has grown to be intolerable, and that unless the hotel men take prompt and sincere measures to abolish it, the commercial travelers purpose as a body to transfer their patronage to private boarding houses the owners of which are willing to pay their own servitors. With this end in view the league has prepared lists of such boarding houses in many villages, towns, and cities and put the lists in the eager hands of its members.

This sounds like business; it also sounds just a little like "conspiracy in restraint of trade," and if the commercial travelers don't watch out the Sherman law will get 'em. That danger apart, however, the plan seems likely at least to make the hotel men do a lot of thinking. A plan at once simpler and safer, it seems to a stay-at-home hater of tips, would be for each one of the C. T.'s to raise his right hand in the presence of as many of his fellows as happen to assemble and solemnly promise himself that never, never, never, will he pay another tip. He would assure for himself a good deal of unhappiness and inconvenience, for a season, but no hotel would refuse to lodge him because of the making of such a promise—or because of keeping it—and enough travelers not commercial would hasten to join him in his temporary martyrdom soon to make it necessary to put a few tips on museum shelves if future generations of Americans were to know what a tip looked like.

We Print, He Says, No Politics! And now cometh the amiable ALFRED MOSELY with criticism of the American newspapers and with a recipe for making them what they ought to be! Both the criticism and the advice are strangely familiar, though Mr. MOSELY varies a little from the best known formulae. He has studied our papers and risen from the study in grief and pain because—he found in them no political news! Not too little political news, but none at all!

This, at first thought, to anybody who knows that the American papers, especially at this time of year, devote an enormous amount of space to news of just that kind, is deeply mystifying. But the mystery lightens on reading what Mr. MOSELY proceeds to say in elaboration of his grievance. It then appears that what we call politics he ignores, and that he found none because he applies the name only to British politics.

In other words, he condemns us for giving to our politics exactly the prominence and the share of attention that the Britons give to their politics, and he does not credit us, as well he might, with giving far more space and attention to European politics, in spite of his failure on certain days or for a week to find one editorial utterance or news dispatch about the House of Lords or the Balkan war cloud, than the papers in the European capitals give to American politics. That is because we have always taken some interest in European politics, and have lately taken a good deal, while until recently the European papers took no interest at all in American politics and do not now take much.

Without knowing it, Mr. MOSELY, like the other foreign critics of the American press, was looking, not for politics, but for local politics—his local politics, that is; and he grieved—and mildly scolded—because he found it not. Americans abroad do the same thing, with as little reason, so the account balances in the end.

MISS STRACHAN'S CIRCULAR.

It Damages the Standing of the Women Teachers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Miss Strachan's astounding appeal to the teachers of New York, published in to-day's TIMES, strikes us as being as reckless an attempt to prostitute the educational force of the city to partisan ends as has ever been publicly made.

The President of the Interborough Association of Women Teachers apparently lacks any conception of legislative action as a matter of right and justice arrived at by a judicial consideration of conflicting claims, but regards it as a sentimental partiality toward beneficiaries whose consequence will be shown by reciprocal services in the following election. That certain politicians, better known for their consistency in working for their pockets all the time than for any ethical quality in their activities, have held this view is not doubted; but that it should be proposed to teachers and Principals as one on which all can unite is scarcely less than scandalous.

Can any body of self-respecting public instructors find patience to condone the premise that the equal salary law, instead of being due to a legislative sense of right and fairness, is the mere betrayal of sentimental interest in a politically active class? We fear that nothing said or done by any public leader of recent date has so damaged the professional repute of the teachers of this city as has Miss Strachan's latest circular. Is it not time for open and indignant protest by the body of our Principals and teachers at so unfit a conception alike of the spirit of legislative practice and the temper in which public employés of any class concern themselves with governmental action by State or city? We believe that Supt. Maxwell's strictures on this subject will receive the warmest commendation from the general public, every friend of education, and all to whom the dignity of the pedagogic profession means anything.

Mona Lisa's Smile.

Wow,
Now
We are to have the Mona Lisa hat!
What do you think of that?
Ah, Mona Lisa, your strange smile
No doubt will wreathe about the pile
Of stranger things that women wear
As crowns of glory on their hair,
While you, mysterious and serene,
Smile through the years, a hatless queen.
And, Mona, when we see that pile,
We'll know at last what makes you smile.

"YOUNG CHINA."

A Chinese Student in Columbia Tells of Its Aspirations.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is a great possibility to see our revolution successful to the end and it is a moral wrong to hope it otherwise. Although it is in want of money and supply, it has good hearted leaders who are supported by all earnest people and followed by all brave soldiers. To our understanding, it now extends onward in excellent order, in good faith, in commendable spirit, strength, and patience. To whose surprise, then, it will turn up a new government while the old rule is being torn down? In many respects it is alike to the French Revolution and the American Revolution. Since the French people and the Americans had gained their freedom, independence, rights, and power, why should not we, the Chinese, accomplish to the same end?

On the surface, it is caused by political dissatisfaction and "tribe" discrimination; but, underlying it, we find the economic forces and social influences which are its real antecedents. These forces and influences have long been growing significant and are now so complicated that there are natural and good reasons for us to stand by the revolutionists and share their movement. Unless our blood is cold, we should have some feeling, if not a will of generous succor, while hearing amid the patriotic Celestials the voices of "Liberty or Death!" And who, under a Heaven so broad, so bright, and so full of blessings for all; and, with a more or less close relation to the four hundred millions of people so honest, so industrious, and so renowned throughout the world history, will create any project, prejudice, or condemnation against the rise of a Young China?

Notwithstanding their logical connection with it, its prosperous future resulted to them, and their friendship involved in it, some people within and other without our China have not the slightest sympathy on this great struggle.

On the other hand, those who now protest the revolution without a careful analysis of its causes; or who now try, taking advantage of the situation, to step in; or who now secretly arouse on the Government side or on the People side the thought to ask foreign aid or to against foreigners, are simply tricky, jealous, and selfish. However, let them remember that self-interest may be gained in many ways—but not in the way of a cowardice, a traitor, or a robber. Is he, who desires to force down the present revolution directly or indirectly, against the principle of progress and against the doctrine of morality?

I, speaking for our country to the readers of NEW YORK TIMES, wish to declare as loudly as possible, that our revolution will be beneficial to mankind. Young China is to be a Republic, therefore, the world political progress would have, into another stage, advanced. Young China strongly believes in peace, therefore, the world peace would have been more firmly maintained. Young China herself is to take care of her own interests, therefore, the Far Eastern Problem would have been solved. Young China is to invite the Occidental Idea in, therefore, the boundary between East and West would have disappeared. Young China is to have reciprocity with all nations on earth, therefore, the world commercial development would have been in a greater rapidity. Young China is to build up industries, therefore, her general wealth would have made the whole world richer. In fact, all the other materials of civilization and ideals of wise men would have been far reaching, for Young China is willing to learn and work for the good of all Creator's children.

A false monarchy will certainly block our welfare, welfare of the world at large; but, a revolution like this, then a Republic—never too early for our China—are the big and strong wheel to turn our human progress. Will not the readers of NEW YORK TIMES justify our young Chinese action?

Again, I am surprised that a man like Rear Admiral Evans, retired, has, in regard to the revolution, made such a statement as appeared in the different New York papers on the morning of Oct. 20. Doesn't it seem that he sees the Chinese struggle from only one point of view; that he thinks a revolution in China is impossible; that he agrees with those short-sided merchants who are not willing to sacrifice some profit a while for the future prosperity between themselves and our people; and, finally, that he believes that the so-called intervention into our own affairs is justifiable?

A CHINESE STUDENT.

John Davis for a Judgeship.

John Davis, who is a candidate for Municipal Court Judge on the Independence League ticket in the Second Bronx District, came to this country from Ireland, and was, for a time bookkeeper in a small business uptown. Taking employment in the law office of Theron G. Strong, he began studying the subjects necessary to pass the Regents' Examination. This he accomplished without outside assistance, and then took up the study of the law. For several years he worked at this, without the advantages of a law school training, and by his unaided efforts passed the requisite examination for admission to the bar. Gradually he secured a law practice. All of this he accomplished while he had the care of his family.

In the Bronx he is highly esteemed and respected and has taken a considerable part in all civic affairs. He has been identified with the Citizens' Union and the Independent Democracy, and has never been an adherent of Tammany Hall.

ORIGINAL CO-OPERATION.

Said a primitive man as he sat in a tree,
Where a wolf, seeking food, had caused him to flee:
"Competition is fierce, I am tired of strife.
A sabre-toothed tiger has eaten my wife,
My children have gone the same way, one by one;
The life I am leading is not any fun.
In front of his cave over there on the hill,
Is a man whom for weeks I've been trying to kill.
If he sees I am helpless up here in a tree,
It's a ten-to-one shot he will kill and eat me.
It's gotten my nerve, this competitive game—
I wish there was some way to alter the same."

Now the man on the hill had not eaten that day,
So, armed with a club, he had stolen away,
And chance led him straight to the tree where the man
Sat musing upon the competitive plan.
"Ha! ha!" he exclaimed, "Here's some good easy meat,
My wife and the children will now have a treat."
Said the man in the tree, "Hold on! Over there
In those rocks are a couple of cubs of a bear.
It would not be safe to attack them alone,
But together we'll strip them of hair, hide, and bone.
Their flesh is quite tender, for both there's enough—
As for me, I am lanky and stringy and tough."

Now the man from the hill was suspicious because
The idea was opposed to competitive laws;
But he finally consented, the bear cubs were slain,
And together the rivals went hunting again.
Thus primitive man with unbounded elation,
Discovered the blessings of co-operation.
Now, isn't it strange there should still be a man
Who favors the ancient competitive plan?

"EXCESS CONDEMNATION."

Would Not "Amendment No. 4" Confer Too Much Power?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The proposed Amendment No. 4 to the State Constitution, Section 6 of Article I., is of particular interest, both because of its legal importance and its practical consequences. Article I. is the "Bill of Rights." The pertinent part of Section 6 as it now reads is:

> No person shall * * * be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation.

There is no direct prohibition in the Constitution of the taking of private property for a private use, but the courts have held that this is implied in the Constitution. The additional words proposed are:

> When private property shall be taken for public use by a municipal corporation, additional adjoining or neighboring property may be taken under conditions to be prescribed by the Legislature by general law. Property thus taken shall be deemed to be taken for public use.

The amendment seeks to authorize what is known as "excess condemnation," or the taking of more property than is necessary for the proposed street, park, or other improvement, by condemnation proceedings, and giving the municipal corporation power to sell the portions of the property taken which are not necessary for the improvement. I understand that this method is practiced on the Continent and in England, and in many cases has proved to go far toward paying for the entire improvement.

The Legislature attempted to authorize excess condemnation as early as 1813, (see 2 Laws 1813, Ch. 86, Sec. 179.) The portion of the act of 1813 which authorized the policy was held unconstitutional in the Matter of Albany Street, (11 Wend. 148.) In that case Judge Savage says:

> It [excess condemnation] is a violation of natural right, and if it is not in violation of the letter of the Constitution, it is of its spirit, and cannot be supported.

It is now proposed, in order to render this method of taking private property constitutional, to say that what has heretofore been considered a private use shall be deemed a public use. The question what is or what is not a public use has always been held to be a question for the courts and not for the Legislature. If, however, the Constitution shall be amended so as to say that the taking of excess property shall be deemed for a public use, such a taking becomes a taking for a public use unless the property holders are still protected by the Federal Constitution.

Passing over this question for the moment, we may ask, Is the amendment in accord with the spirit of our Bill of Rights? Is not the prohibition against taking private property for any use but one which would be held public by the courts a great safeguard to every citizen? If the purpose of this new power is to prevent narrow strips of land being left along the new street or other improvement, would not a power to purchase instead of a power to condemn be all that the city would require for the protection of the property owner? It is also to be noted that the power granted is to condemn adjoining or neighboring property. This would seem to cover a great deal more than the right merely to take the remainder of lots of which a part has been taken. There would seem to be danger in allowing such broad power.

The question remains as to the effect of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Federal Constitution: "No State shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law." In the case of Fallbrook Irrigation District vs. Bradley (164 U. S. 112) and in Missouri Pacific Railway Company vs. Nebraska (164 U. S. 403) it has been held by the Supreme Court that the taking of property by condemnation proceedings for a private use is within the prohibition of the Fourteenth Amendment, and that the question whether the property is being taken for a private use or for a public use is one to be determined by the court. Will the declaration by the State Constitution that such a taking is for a public use make it a taking for a public use under the Federal Constitution?

This letter is not written in opposition to the proposed Fourth Amendment, but for the purpose of calling the attention of your readers to some of the questions to be considered before voting upon its adoption.

Chancellor MacCracken Supports It.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The editorial advice of THE TIMES to vote against Constitutional Amendment No. 4 has surprised and disappointed many readers interested in making New York a better home and mart for its 5,000,000 people. The amendment has the approval of our own Merchants' Association. The experience of Vienna and London shows that the city needs the power of excess condemnation in order to make new streets and public places at minimum expense.

Mayor Gaynor's project for the much-needed new avenue between the present Fifth and Sixth Avenues is impracticable on account of the expense, unless the city can acquire a strip 100 feet wide either side of the new avenue, control the type of improvement, and from the increased value—especially of the corner plots—recoup itself for a large part of the cost. The expense of opening Seventh Avenue to the south can be minimized in the same way.

Any real estate operator knows how largely real estate values depend on the ability to control and shape the development of a large plot. The small holder knows how the value of his one lot is at the mercy of the present unrestrained debauch in real estate improvement. The question raised by Amendment 4 is: Shall the city have the advantage of the large capitalist, or shall the citizens collectively suffer the disadvantages which they suffer individually?

The Judiciary Candidates.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Allow me to thank you for your leader on the judicial candidates at the coming election.

This is entirely consistent with your course a year ago in reference to the judicial election then pending. At that time The Tribune, The Sun, The Post, The Zeitung, and The American took the same ground and advocated the nomination and election of a competent Judge who had been appointed by a Republican Governor to fill a vacancy in the Supreme Court. The cry was "keep the judiciary out of politics."

Can it be that this cry is only applicable when a candidate is appointed by a Republican Governor? That surely would not be to keep the judiciary out of politics. The case of Surrogate Fowler is especially clear. He is a man especially fitted for judicial office. He has had a large practice at the bar, is a man of learning, judicial temper and uniform courtesy, and is well versed in probate law. There is probably not a Probate Judge in the United States who is his superior in fitness for the office.

It is well known that he was an independent Democrat, and was Gov. Dix's own selection, supported as he was by many leading members of the bar.

A committee of the Bar Association has examined carefully his record and that of Mr. Justice Pendleton since they took judicial office and finds the record entirely satisfactory.

Surely this is a case where the voters of New York, without distinction of party, should support these candidates.

EVERETT P. WHEELER.

Howard C. Taylor for Alderman.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you allow me to recommend Mr. Howard C. Taylor, candidate for the Democratic Alderman in the Twenty-first District? I have known him for a great many years and have the highest opinion of his ability and probity, and general fitness for the position he is striving to obtain. Mr. Taylor graduated from Columbia Law School in 1902 and was admitted to the bar the same year. He has lived in the Twenty-first District practically his whole life and has never before been a candidate for any kind of office. In all matters affecting the welfare of the district, Mr. Taylor has shown interest and activity and especially in social and charitable affairs. We need an upright and honest man to represent us in this district, and one who will give us his attention at all times.

PHILADELPHIA OPERA HAS GREAT OPENING

Biggest Audience in House's History Hears Mary Garden Sing Carmen for First Time.

DIVA RECEIVES AN OVATION

Campanini Celebrates the 28th Anniversary of His First Operatic Conducting in America.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 3.—The season of grand opera opened to-night under the most favorable conditions. The spacious Metropolitan Opera House, at Broad and Poplar Streets, was packed, every seat in the many boxes, the parquet, parquet circle, balcony, and gallery being filled, while in the standing places down stairs and up, there were three and four rows of spectators.

It was an occasion of enthusiasm, first because it was the opening of the grand opera season, which always initiates the Winter's social festivities, and, second, because it was a Mary Garden night, when the diva was making her first appearance on any stage in the character of Carmen, a part to which she lent unusual charm and individuality.

Some idea of the crowd present can be gleaned from statistics, which said that 1,652 carriage checks were given out, and that there were nearly 5,000 paid admissions to the house, the attendance being the largest in the history of the house, exceeding that of the famous "Salome" night of two years ago by more than 200. The scene during the interval between the second and third acts was a beautiful one, for it was then that the social notables from the many boxes and parquet seats took occasion to promenade in the lower foyer, and in the big hall on the second floor.

After each act there was an ovation, flowers being showered upon Miss Garden after the scene in the inn.

Honors were shared between her and Signor Cleofonte Campanini, the general musical Director of the operatic organization, who led and who incidentally was celebrating the twenty-eighth anniversary of his first operatic conducting in this country. Curiously enough it was "Carmen," led by him when he was just a trifle more than 20 in his home city, Parma, Italy, which first brought him to the attention of an American manager, who at once engaged him for work at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York.

The first opera which he conducted there just twenty-nine years to-night was "Mignon," and not long afterward he directed "Carmen" in Boston. It was likewise "Carmen" in which he won his laurels during his first season with Hammerstein in this city, so it can readily be understood what a flood of recollections to-night's performance of this same Bizet work recalled to the conductor.

The jovial spirit of the occasion was manifest on many sides. Among the auditors were E. T. Stotesbury, President of the Metropolitan Opera House Company of Philadelphia; Andreas Dippel, the General Manager of the Chicago Grand Opera Company; Bernhard Ulrich, its Business Manager; Harold F. McCormick, President of the Chicago Company; Charles C. Dawes, its Vice President; John C. Shaffer, Vice Chairman of the Executive Committee; Philip M. Lydig, Clarence H. Mackay, and Otto H. Kahn of New York, and Victor Herbert, the composer.

It was a gala occasion. From the box on the left, in which Miss Carolina White was entertained by Mrs. William Hatton Green, all the way around to the right box in which Mr. and Mrs. Eli Kirk Price entertained a large party, there was a delightful spirit of joyous fellowship, such as only a first night brings with much visiting, and enthusiastic greetings. The grand tier boxes presented a similar appearance, beginning with the Converse box on the right, in which Baron Uxhull was a guest, and ending with Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Coxe's left-hand box. Mrs. Converse was in gold brocade, with the entire upper part of the corsage of duchesse lace.

All the way through the house it was an enthusiastic assemblage of fashionable folk gathered to inaugurate the season of 1911-12, for one of the time-honored laws of Philadelphia society is that "first night" opens the season, prior to which nothing but débutante teas are given. The first night is always one of family parties, and this rule held good to-night when the majority of the boxes were filled with the immediate members of the holders' families.

It was a marvelously gowned audience, too, with an Oriental aspect given by the tapestry frocks, the quantities of gold lace and glittering passementerie used in lavish profusion, and the headdresses of glittering gold lace studded with jewels.

Probably the most interesting group in the house was made up of Miss Katherine Elkins; her brother, Blaine Elkins; Mrs. Oliphant, and William F. Hitt of Washington. Miss Elkins was attired in white satin, over which was draped a beautiful Spanish lace overdress.

Philip Lydig was also noticed in the throng, as were Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Thomas, Mrs. Benjamin F. Guinness, Mr. and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Frank Crowninshield, and Judge Gerard and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Percival, all of New York.

Chicago was represented by Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCormick, Gen. and Mrs. J. A. Johnson, and George S. Graham.

Those who went to the opera to-night in the expectation of witnessing another portrayal of the versatility of Mary Garden in the role of Bizet's mercurial and volatile heroine, were not disappointed. In her impersonation the singer deliberately set at naught all conventions and traditions when it suited her artistic purpose to do so. She gave free rein to her individuality, her instinct and keen intuition for dramatic values, and her unique and pronouncedly individual personality.

The Carmen of Mary Garden is a siren seeking to bring every men she meets under the hypnotic lure of her personal charms. Her one passion is to achieve the conquest of a heart supposed to be impregnable.

She was an intense, vibrant, thrilling individuality without a slackening fibre, except in the scene where at the inn of Lillas Pastia she visits at the table and Don José sings to her. One might have supposed it would be necessary to sing beautifully, before everything else, in order to make a success of this part, but Miss Garden made the acting mean much more than the vocal requirements. She was never the tame and passive spectator. In all that was acted, sung, or danced she was an active participant, never a tacit, listless partner.

Dalmores was an ideal José. His performance was fully as interesting as that of the prima donna. He is such a splendid actor always, and last night, after the long rest, his voice was in prime condition and his top notes rang out in sonorous challenge. He rose to commanding heights of tragedy and despair in the final scene when Carmen spurns and scorns him for the sake of the toreador.

Miss Garden and he so accustomed to the dual artistic alliance were hosts in themselves. Henri Scott, making his Philadelphia début after a highly successful season in Italy, was an excellent Capt. Zundga. Zeppilli was a charming Micaela, and her voice has distinctly improved since she was last heard here. She was vociferously applauded after her arias. Hector Dufranne did not sing the toreador's song especially well, but he was nevertheless effective in Escamillo's rôle as a whole. Marie Cavan and Giuseppina Giacona were a lively pair as Frasquita and Mercedes.

The performance went with plenty of verve and dash, because Campanini's vigorous conducting kept orchestra and chorus at the highest point. The time was never allowed to drag and the action was always brisk. The orchestra acquitted itself admirably.

Campanini was warmly applauded as he came to the conductor's desk.

In his first year with Hammerstein, 1907-08, Campanini conducted the opera nineteen times, and never on any of the occasions when the presentment of Bizet's work was committed to his authoritative guidance did he lead his musicians to better purpose than in the altogether admirable performance of this evening. Victor Herbert said to-night that he had heard every Carmen for twenty-five years and Mary Garden excelled them all.

MME. SIMONE IN 'LA RAFALE.'

Not Lacking in Strength in This Hectic Bernstein Role.

THE WHIRLWIND, a play in three acts, by Henri Bernstein, English version by George Egerton. Daly's Theatre.

The Baron Lebourg	Albert Gran
Robert de Chaceroy	Edwin Arden
Henri Lebourg	Charles Francis
The Comte de Brechebel	Wilfred Forster
General the Duke de Brial	Ben Greet
Bragelin	Sydney Herbert
M. de la Veillarde	Thomas S. Louden
Francois	Percival Vivian
Servant at Lebourg's	G. E. Weller
Helene de Brechebel	Mme. Simone
The Baronne Lebourg	Louise Rial
The Marquise de Doullence	Helen Weathersby
Mme. de Thizieux	Grace Halsey Mills

At Daly's last night, Mme. Simone was seen for the first time here in M. Bernstein's "La Rafale," which as well as any other play illustrates the methods of this dramatist and the requirements for the actress who would play his leading heroines. Almost everything in it is highly colored, if not to say actually overdrawn. The Baron Lebourg, with his extravagant social climbing, the atrocious cousin Henri, with his wretched suggestion of a contract, the utterly selfish and unscrupulous lover, Robert, with a pose of heroism, and lastly, Helene herself—ready to go the limit for the man she loves—all extravagant figures in an extravagant play. But it is a play which holds one's interest, (indeed, what one of Bernstein's does not,) through the cleverness of the development and the skill of the theatrical contriving.

For those who found Mme. Simone somewhat too cold and unemotional in "The Thief" this rôle of Helene will probably be regarded as sufficient answer. Certainly the actress was not cold last night. Indeed, there were few tricks in the so-called emotional gamut which she did not display throughout the evening. She was by turns cajoling, threatening, laughing, weeping, and not infrequently she blended them all. She did not lack feeling in the climaxes; she did not seem to be without passion. She was, in short, almost all the things that she was not when she played Marise a week or two ago.

The whole of the scene with her father in the second act, for instance, was played very powerfully—with anxiety, terror, scorn, defiance, and now and then a momentary joy followed by a blank collapse. In the last act there was the impressive moment when, left alone, the memory of the price she has paid fills her with horror and self-loathing. Somehow it seemed last night that to those unfamiliar with the play in French the meaning of this could not be quite clear. But the fault was not with Mme. Simone.

When Mme. Simone seemed to miss was in the final moment of horror when she hears the pistol shot and realizes that her lover has killed himself. There was not quite the suggestion of agony one might have expected. On the whole, however, what she did was very strong. We should hesitate to call it exactly great. But there will be plenty of others less particular as to the exact word of description.

Mr. Arden, as the lover, played capitally and Mr. Corrigan, by inflection rather than by dialect—an atrocious thing always in a French play acted in English—colored the rôle of the father with much cleverness. He played throughout with firmness and with power.

AMES GETS FOREIGN PLAYS.

Bringing Pieces for Little Theatre—Thomas, New Theatre's Director.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Winthrop Ames, late Director of The New Theatre, New York, is back from the Continent, where he has been in search of plays for production at his new little theatre which is to be built in New York.

Beyond saying that he had been looking over similar theatres in Paris, Berlin, Munich, and Dresden, and watching what they are doing, Mr. Ames wouldn't discuss his plans, preferring to wait until he arrives in New York. "My plans are not yet fully made," he added, "although I may say that I have several English and German plays under consideration."

Discussing plans of the new New Theatre, Mr. Ames said there was every prospect of it being opened on the original date set, October, 1912, as he had heard from the architect recently that the building plans had been finally decided upon.

While in Europe Mr. Ames has been in constant touch with The New Theatre officials looking out for suitable plays for them. He said it was practically certain that Augustus Thomas would be the new Director, and he expects that the official announcement will be made before he gets back to New York. He is sailing on the Mauretania Nov. 11.

H. VICTOR NEWCOMB DEAD.

Ex-President of Louisville & Nashville Spent Ten Years in a Sanitarium.

Horatio Victor Newcomb, capitalist, who in the early 70's and 80's was a prominent figure in Wall Street, and who was for many years President of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, died suddenly at midnight on Thursday at his home, 171 State Avenue, Atlantic City, of neuralgia of the heart. A cousin was the only member of the family who was with him at the time of death.

Mr. Newcomb was born in Louisville, Ky., and early in life entered the accounting room of H. D. Newcomb & Co., commission merchants at Louisville. Shortly after he came to New York and became a partner in Warren, Newcomb & Co. of this city. Thereafter his business interests were divided between Louisville and New York, and when his father, who had been President of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, died Mr. Newcomb became a Director in the railroad company. Soon after he became Vice-President of the company and later its President.

In 1880 Mr. Newcomb organized the United States National Bank in this city and became its first President. Among his fellow Directors were Gen. U. S. Grant, Henry D. Hyde, and Col. J. J. McCook. He became wealthy, but his strenuous work a few years later caused a physical breakdown and a retirement from active business. While in this city he lived at 683 Fifth Avenue.

After this setback in health Mr. Newcomb took to the excessive use of chloral and by 1891 had become enslaved to the habit. While in this nervous state he did many strange things and once threatened to kill H. M. Flagler of the Standard Oil Company, and announced that Henry M. Stanley, the explorer, whom he had met on a transatlantic voyage, had designs on his life. He was committed to a sanitarium, but ten years later was released, rehabilitated and sane. He regained possession, after a long fight in the courts, of all the property which had been held in trust, and brought suit for separation against his wife, making a sensational affidavit about her habits which threatened to cause his recommitment to the sanitarium. In business management, however, he became the same successful man that he had been before his physical breakdown.

A few years ago he retired from business altogether and went to live on his estate at Stroudsburg, Penn. He went to Atlantic City in the Summer of 1908 and purchased a home, where he had lived since.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The Shuberts will give a dinner to the principals of the company in the evening, and in the afternoon women attending the matinee will receive souvenirs of fancy handbags.

Virginia Earle, who has not been seen in a Broadway production for several years, has been engaged for one of the leading roles in "The Wedding Trip," a new musical comedy with music by Reginald De Koven. Miss Earle has been ill for more than a year, and previous to her illness she played several seasons in vaudeville.

Cyril Scott and the company that is to support him in "A Gentleman of Leisure" will leave for Baltimore to-morrow morning to begin a week's engagement at the Auditorium there. After a road tour lasting through the holidays William A. Brady expects to bring the play back to town to complete its New York run.

JAPANESE HERE HONOR THE MIKADO

Consul General Midzuno Gives Supper at the Astor to Celebrate Emperor's Birthday.

GUESTS IN NATIVE DRESS

Host Pledges Japan's Desire for Continued Friendly Relations with This Country.

A reception and supper in celebration of the sixtieth birthday of the Emperor of Japan was given last night by Consul General and Mme. K. Midzuno of Japan. The East Room of the Hotel Astor, where the supper was held, was decorated with American and Japanese flags and oak leaves. The scenic effect was very striking, many of the Japanese ladies being in native costume and the multi-colored silks, together with the bright uniforms of the army and navy officers present standing out against the dull Autumn coloring of the oak leaves.

In a speech reviewing the relations between Japan and the United States, Consul General Midzuno referred to the desire of Japan to remain in all things a friend of this country.

"You may be anti-trust in domestic and commercial affairs," he said, "but so far as relations between our two countries are concerned, we must be pro-trust. The United States was the first to treat with Japan, the first to conclude the new treaty, and will be the first in the hearts of the Japanese people. The appointment of Baron Uchida, our Ambassador at Washington, to the highly important post of Minister of Foreign Affairs, is another indication of Japan's sincere desire to maintain and promote good relations with the United States."

Gen. Frederick D. Grant responded to the Consul General's toast in an address replete with reminiscence of his visit to Japan as a child. Ex-Gov. Fort spoke of the business relation between Japan and the United States. Prof. Nitobe, the first of the new exchange professors between the two countries, spoke about educational matters, and Adjt. Gen. Verbeck, who was born in Japan, told of life in the Land of the Rising Sun.

The closing speech of Consul General Midzuno was characteristic of the imagery of Japanese thought, and the picture of the future painted by him was a happy one.

"Let the Stars and the Stripes," he said, "guard by night that ocean which has properly been called Pacific and the Rising Sun guard it by day, and let these two people do their part in making all the world a better world to live in."

The women at the supper received intertwined flags with the date 1854, the date of the signing of the first treaty, between the United States and Japan and the men a stampbox bearing the Japanese legend, "Kotobuki," meaning "long life."

Prominent at the dinner were E. Hioki, Japanese Minister to Chile; A. Shito, Commissioner of Commerce to America; Capt. T. Higara, Naval Attaché of the Japanese Embassy at Washington, and Dr. H. Noguchi of the Carnegie Institute. August Belmont, who was present, was referred to as the grandson of the man who opened the door of Japan to the rest of the world. William Spieden, who is one of the three living survivors of the historic Perry expedition, was present with his wife. Others present were Henry Clews, J. H. Schiff, Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Finley, Dr. I. Ishiguro, Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Seligman, Judge and Mrs. T. Burke, Dr. and Mrs. W. Seward Webb, Mr. and Mrs. S. H. P. Pell, Col. I. Inouye, Gen. and Mrs. E. H. Ripley, and Dr. M. Honda.

N. J. COLMAN DIES ON TRAIN.

First Secretary of Agriculture Was a Pioneer in That Field.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 3.—Norman J. Colman, First Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, died this morning on a train which was bringing him to his home here. He suffered a stroke of apoplexy yesterday while in a sleeping car berth, near Lexington Junction, Missouri. Mr. Colman was being brought here by a son-in-law. He died after being unconscious for nearly twenty-four hours. He is survived by two daughters.

Norman Jay Colman was born May 16, 1827, near Richfield Springs, Otsego County, N. Y., son of Hamilton and Nancy Sprague Colman. He was reared on the farm, and received his early education from the district school. For several years he was a teacher in New York State, removing in 1847 to Kentucky. While at Louisville he studied law, received the degree of LL. B., and formed a partnership with M. C. Kerr, subsequently Speaker of the House, with whom he began the practice of law at New Albany, Ind.

Mr. Colman became District Attorney in 1885, but resigned in favor of his partner, and removed to St. Louis, where he bought out an agricultural paper, afterward known as Colman's Rural World. He served with the Missouri militia during the civil war. In 1865 he was a member of the Missouri House of Representatives, and was elected Lieutenant Governor for the term 1875-7.

Mr. Colman was United States Commissioner of Agriculture, 1885-9, and was appointed Secretary of Agriculture by President Cleveland when that department was elevated to an executive branch of the Government, in February, 1889. He was for twenty years connected with the Missouri State Board of Agriculture, a founder and first President of the Missouri State Horticultural Society, President of the Missouri State Fair, Curator of the University of Missouri, and President of the Missouri State Press Association.

Mr. Colman married Miss Clara Porter of New Albany, Ind., in 1851. She died in 1863, and in 1866 he was married to Miss Catherine Wright of St. Louis.

DANIEL F. DRAWBAUGH DEAD.

Inventor of One of the Earliest Telephones Was 84 Years Old.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Nov. 3.—Daniel F. Drawbaugh, an inventor of telephonic and other appliances, died at his home near this city to-day. Mr. Drawbaugh was 84 years old. He was the inventor of one of the earliest telephones, and was involved in extended litigation over patent rights with other inventors. He also invented pneumatic tools, hydraulic rams, folding lunch boxes, barrel faucets, measuring machines to be used in wrapping goods, and coin separators.

Mr. Drawbaugh experimented for years with wireless telephones, and a few years ago is said to have succeeded in carrying on a conversation at a distance of four miles.

For the last month he had been at work on a wireless burglar alarm, and was seized with an attack of apoplexy while in his laboratory.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The telephonic patents claimed by Daniel F. Drawbaugh were the subject of many years' of litigation before the Patent Office and in the courts, his claims conflicting with those of Alexander Graham Bell in many particulars. The controversy ended by giving the main patent rights to Bell.

UNGASTRONOMIC AMERICA

Dr. Wiley furnished the text for it when he said:

"Nowhere in the world is food so plentiful; nowhere in the world is it so badly cooked."

We get far too little out of the legitimate pleasures of the table. The whole world has much to teach us about new foods and new ways of preparing old foods, but we do not listen. Meanwhile our own foods are not treated with proper respect. The real smoked ham has disappeared. Only a few know how much better sweet butter is than salt. We put fowls in cold storage without drawing them. We do not let our fruit ripen on the tree. If we only knew how, our food would not only cost us much less, but would be infinitely pleasanter to eat.

This is the message of Henry T. Finck's three papers, the first of which, "Ungastronomic America," appears in November CENTURY MAGAZINE.

The November number begins the 83d volume.

Serving the Republic

By Gen. Nelson A. Miles

Both an addition to history and a colorful, stirring story of a man's struggles and responsibilities. The part of the story dealing with the Civil War is only second in importance to such memoirs as those of Grant and Sherman. General Miles took part in many of its bloodiest battles. The narrative continues with General Miles's Western and later experiences.

The Power of Tolerance

By George Harvey

These collected addresses by the Editor of the North American Review and Harper's Weekly on various occasions during the past few years cover a wide diversity of subjects, from "A Plea for the Conservation of Common Sense" to "Have Women Souls?" The problems are discussed with clear vision and forceful expression, and Colonel Harvey flavors his words with the salt of humor.

Spiritism and Psychology

By Theodore Flournoy

Translated by Hereward Carrington

About once every ten years a really good book upon psychics is published—a book, that is, which is epoch-making. Professor Flournoy's previous book ("From India to the Planet Mars") was one, and the present volume is another. The book begins with a brief account of the results of an extensive inquiry, conducted by the author, into alleged super-normal facts—this being a study from the psychologist's point of view, not only of the facts, but of the subjects who experienced them. Mr. Carrington has contributed a number of valuable foot-notes.

GENERAL FUNSTON TELLS OF FIGHTING LIFE

"Memories of Two Wars," a Vivid Record of His Romantic Career.

"MEMORIES OF TWO WARS," published by CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS yesterday, is General Funston's own story of his fighting career; one probably unequaled by any living soldier in romantic brilliancy.

Young Mr. Funston from Kansas manages to get smuggled with some other men and several cannons into Cuba before the Spanish War, and though quite untrained in things military, he takes command of a gun in the insurgent army; that is the beginning. General of Volunteers Funston and a little band of chosen men, by highest courage, endurance, and cunning, capture Aguinaldo, and virtually close the Philippine War; that is the end. And the links in the chain that join these events are battles, marches, and skirmishes. It is all very valuable as history—especially the part about the Philippine War, which traces the lines on which the subjugation of the Islands was brought about, more clearly than they were ever traced before—but it is far more valuable as fascinatingly rapid and adventurous narrative.

If any man is tired of novels, but not tired of adventure and excitement in his reading, here is the book for him. If anyone is in doubt about what to give any man for a Christmas present, he or she can't go far wrong in giving him this. Its price is $3.00 net; postpaid $3.30; and it is strikingly illustrated by F. C. Yohn.

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY

A BEAUTIFUL HOLIDAY EDITION

There Are Full Colored Pictures and Many New Black and White Sketches by Reginald Birch.

Mrs. Burnett in her preface explains why this new edition, with its twelve full-page illustrations, and its many new pen and ink sketches by the original illustrator, Reginald Birch, is issued:

"About twenty-five years ago this story was written. The children who read it first are now men and women. Many of them have children of their own and these children it seems are reading it also—or want to read it, or their friends wish to give it to them to read. As I myself loved Fauntleroy, it is a happiness to me to know that so many others loved him. The book which told his story has been read so many thousand times that its lettering has been worn out and its pictures have faded away. As he himself has not faded away, there has been made this new book with new pictures by the same hand which years ago created the first Fauntleroy who made his cheerful little bow to the world."

It is a beautiful book to be had for $2.00 net; postpaid $2.20.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Hold Their Advance, with Special Strength in the Anthracite Shares.

READING LEADS THIS RISE

Possible Effect of Moroccan Settlement on European Money Markets and Our Own—Better Bond Inquiry.

Prices as a whole held fairly well at their advanced level yesterday, with particular strength displayed in several of the anthracite coal road stocks under the leadership of Reading, which closed at the high price of the day, with a net gain of 3¼ points. United States Steel, in the final count, just held its own and it yielded in point of activity to Reading, which was the most active stock of the session. The selling which the market was called upon to encounter included not only profit-taking sales but also more or less selling by traders who the past couple of days have resumed a bearish attitude toward the market because of the rapidity of the recent advance. There was, moreover, a disposition in some quarters, where much importance has been attached to the expected approval of the plan for the reorganization of the American Tobacco Company, to wait on the actual confirmation by the court of the plan which the company has submitted with such modifications as the court may make of its own motion or in compliance with the suggestions advanced at the public hearing. This attitude of reserve in certain quarters in respect to the acceptance of the very general belief that the plan will be approved in its general outline does not suggest any dissent from this view, but serves rather to emphasize the importance which is attached to the successful outcome of the American Tobacco reorganization.

With the formal announcement yesterday of the agreement between France and Germany regarding Morocco the question arises how far this settlement will be effective in bringing about easier conditions in the French money market with resultant influence upon the other European money centres, particularly Germany, which was most largely affected, so far as its monetary position was concerned, by the withdrawal of French funds. Those withdrawals were prompted, at least in part, by apprehensions over the questions which have been amicably settled, and which are formally set at rest by the Franco-German agreement published yesterday. The immediate interest of our own market in this situation lies in part in the effect which a distinct easing of the French monetary situation would have upon the European demand for American funds at higher rates than those prevailing in this market. The return to this centre of the bulk of the money which New York has loaned abroad would add just so much to the surplusage of funds here, and the question would arise whether this would not in turn stimulate investment demand here at home. Even now some improvement in the inquiries for bonds is being reported arising in part from the effort of institutions to employ profitably funds which are not in current demand in the time money market. Yesterday's indications in respect to the immediate cash position of the New York banks were that the week's operations have resulted in a cash loss variously estimated at from $1,500,000 to more than $3,000,000. There appears to have been some gain on the direct currency movement to and from the interior, which was offset by losses to the Sub-Treasury, including the transfer made during the week to San Francisco.

FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The Consular and Trade Reports will note the following foreign trade opportunities. Further information regarding these may be obtained by addressing the Bureau of Manufactures, care of the Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, D. C., giving the number of item referred to:

7,529. SEA SHELLS.—An American Consul reports that a merchant in a European city desires to correspond with American houses in a position to furnish him with the following varieties of sea shells: Strombus Gigas, Hippopus Maculatus, Murex Inflatus, Casis Tuberosa, Casis Rufa, and Casis Tuberculato.

7,530. STEEL WIRE.—A report from an American Consulate in Russia states that a merchant in that country desires to purchase large quantities of steel wire, provided he can get it in accordance with his requirements. What he especially needs is wire of a thickness between 5¼ and 10 millimeters.

7,531. AGENCY IN WASHINGTON.—A business man in Washington, giving references, desires to establish himself as the local agent of exporters to handle trade opportunities published in The Daily Consular and Trade Reports, with a view to sending catalogues, price lists, &c., to prospective purchasers more promptly.

7,532. HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE.—Inquiries have been made at an American Consulate in a European country by several persons as to American household furniture. The individuals are particularly interested in oak furniture, and it is suggested that American firms interested in this market send their catalogues to the Consulate in question, with their discount prices quoted free on board ship New York, (not at the factory.)

7,533. PUMPING MACHINERY AND LARGE HYDRAULIC RAMS.—An American Consul reports that an engineer, who is in charge of the public works department of a foreign country, is planning several large irrigation projects in the country in question, and also certain drainage works in various parts of the country.

7,534. SAW MILL AND WOODWORKING MACHINERY.—A report from an American Consul states that a leading capitalist in New Zealand is planning the erection of a large saw mill and would like to secure catalogues and price lists of the latest American improved force-feeding saw mill and woodworking machinery at the earliest possible date.

7,535. AMERICAN BROWN OLEINE.—The Bureau of Manufactures is in receipt of a communication from a business firm in Germany stating that it would like to get in touch with American manufacturers of brown oleine.

7,536. MERRY-GO-ROUNDS AND AMUSEMENT DEVICES.—An American consular officer in Canada reports that a business man in his district desires to purchase a merry-go-round outfit, including engine and organ. Manufacturers communicating with him should be sure to specify the name of the organ to be furnished with the outfit.

Inspiration, La Rose, and Nipissing closed even with the opening levels, while Kerr Lake rose from 3⅜ to 3½. Trading in the bond list was well diversified, but without marked activity in any particular issue. Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation 4s continued their advance, going from 92⅝ to 93 on sales of $68,000.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

The market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange had to withstand large profit-taking, as well as short selling by professional operators, who were working for a reaction. Offerings were, however, generally well absorbed, with the undertone continuing strong and several stocks, notably Reading and Erie common, closing at or near their best for the day. Reading's high was 145⅛, which was a fraction under the high touched on the New York Stock Exchange. Steel common did not account for as heavy a proportion of the total business as has been the rule recently. Its total was 23,840 shares out of an aggregate for all stocks of 85,740 shares.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Bottles and Jars Used as Containers Pay Same Rates as Contents.

In sustaining protests by John A. Conkey & Co., the Board of United States General Appraisers made a decision yesterday affecting the classification under the Tariff act of 1909 of bottles and jars containing ad valorem goods. In the new tariff, Congress made a change in the law dealing with containers of this kind.

The decision construes Paragraph 97, and sub-Section 18 of Section 28. Judge Sharretts holds that Congress having added as new matter in sub-Section 18 of Section 28 of the act of 1909, the words "bottles, jars, &c., whether holding liquids or solids," it is clear that it intended to modify the law as construed by the Circuit Court of Appeals in the case of the Government vs. Hensel, where it was held that such bottles were not dutiable as containers at the ad valorem rates applicable to their contents, and so granted the containers of ad valorem merchandise the same rate of duty as accrues on their contents. The Collector is reversed.

Rusch & Co. and other importers obtained a reversal of Collector Loeb's action in assessing paper and cardboard wrappers or containers of imported merchandise subject to specific duty or free of duty. The coverings were assessed at rates at which they would have been dutiable if imported separately. The protestants contended that the wrappings and boxes are the usual coverings for the merchandise they contained, and as such free of duty. Judge Hay sustains this claim for Rusch & Co., F. Schmidt, Mills & Gibb, Taylor & Wecheler, Overton & Co., and R. Tuck & Sons Company, Ltd.

VOTE ON COTTON GRADES.

Exchange Has Proposal for a Third Revision Up Again.

As a result of the recent conferences between representatives of the Cotton Exchange and the cotton spinners' associations, the Board of Managers of the Cotton Exchange have sent down for a vote by the members amendments to the by-laws regulating the issuance of certificates of grades of cotton delivered on contract and providing for an additional revision of spot cotton quotations. The proposed amendments will be voted on Thursday, Nov. 16.

The question of more frequent revisions of cotton quotations and grade differences has been agitated on the Exchange for years, and those in favor of revisions on the plea they would make a more valuable commercial contract have always been defeated. Last April the proposal to make a third revision annually was defeated partly by the vote of members who wanted still greater concessions and hoped by defeating a third revision to leave the question of more frequent revision open. It is now proposed to have a third revision made in February, a month when trade is dull on the Exchange, and the consequent disturbance on contract values less of a factor.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

American Securities Quiet in London—Paris and Berlin Bourses Firm.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Money was in increased demand to-day for the payment of $15,000,000 in Treasury bills, and discount rates hardened thereon.

Most of the sections of the Stock Exchange reacted under profit-taking and bear pressure, with Kaffirs very weak. Foreign bonds and railway shares were steady exceptions. Consols, in which the settlement was concluded, eased off an eighth.

American securities were quiet and featureless during the forenoon. Later the market improved sharply on Wall Street and Berlin buying, and the closing tone was strong.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

President Taft on the Sherman Law.

Had it not been that President Taft had very freely discussed his attitude in respect to the enforcement of the Sherman law during the trip through the country he had just completed, Wall Street might have taken more notice yesterday of the statement telegraphed from Hot Springs, where the President is resting after his 15,000-mile journey, that he was going to spend part of his few days there in preparing the part of his annual message to Congress which will be devoted to the trust question. It is being taken for granted that what the President may have to say in his message on the subject will merely be a repetition of what he has already said on other occasions regarding the "anti-trust" act and his policy for its enforcement.

⁂

Cheaper Grain.

It is reported from the Minneapolis grain trade that the recent decline in the price of wheat has added considerably to the orders for flour on the books of some of the Western millers. The Northwestern Miller says that there were buyers who seemed to have fixed upon a price they would pay, and the decline of the last few days has made it possible for the mills to accept these orders. Thus to some extent, at least, the flour trade is feeling the stimulus of lower grain prices. In the wheat market yesterday there was a further decline, which carried the December option in Chicago as low as 93 9-16. Ten days ago this same option was quoted 9 cents higher.

⁂

Chinese Demand for Silver.

Closer information of the Far Eastern demand for silver which sent the metal to 25 3-16d in London last week, equivalent to 54⅝ cents here, the highest price since last January, is contained in current London comment reaching New York yesterday. The leading London authority on silver reports that the demand for cash in China as a result of the rebellion and the disturbances of credit practically stripped Hongkong of British dollars and that demand for Chinese purposes drew heavily on supplies in India and London as well. Bombay sent to Hongkong 1,300,000 British dollars and more than $1,250,000 more in value of silver went from London to the East on one steamer last week. Another factor which has stimulated speculation in the metal in the London market is the belief that the Indian Government may have to enter the silver market to cover its own requirements before long.

⁂

Bank Exchanges Fair.

The volume of bank exchanges this week makes a closer comparison with last year than has recently been shown. Dun's compilations put the total clearings at $2,940,385,384, which is a decrease of only 1.5 per cent. as compared with the same week in 1910 and of 8.1 per cent. as compared with 1909. The gain is due largely, however, to increased Stock Exchange activity in this city, where the total was only 2.8 per cent. smaller than in 1910. Outside cities made a gain of 1.3 per cent. over 1910.

Foreign Security Holdings.

There has been a widespread impression that the amount of American stocks and bonds held abroad has been greatly lessened in recent months, and that for this reason the dividend and interest payments being sent to Europe would be decreased. Inquiries yesterday failed to support this belief. A banker who is in close touch with the situation in Germany said that the report of foreign liquidation had been greatly exaggerted, and that while there had been some disposition to realize on American securities, the total holdings abroad have not been materially changed. An officer of one of the transcontinentals said that his company was sending more money abroad to holders of its bonds and stock than ever before, and that the transfer books did not reflect any uneasiness among the European shareholders.

⁂

Smaller Stocks of Merchandise.

It has been said frequently of late that merchants throughout the country were buying goods only for current consumption, and that the stocks on hand were much smaller than usual. A number of insurance men who have been interviewed on the subject estimate that stocks of merchandise are 30 per cent. below the average. Aside from the fear of a business recession, many merchants have been cautious about loading up their shelves lest changes in the tariff result in lower prices for their goods. It is said that the larger dealers in dry goods and other merchandise throughout the country have reduced the amount of insurance they carry, on the ground that their stocks have been greatly lowered in the past few months.

Weekly Failure Report.

Bradstreet's reports 200 business failures in the United States during the week, against 231 for the previous week, and 179, 212, 205, and 226 for the corresponding weeks of 1910 to 1907. The Middle States had 83, New England 21, Southern 42, Western 36, Northwestern 10, Far Western 8. Canada had 31, against 22 for the preceding week. About 86 per cent. of the total number of concerns failing had capital of $5,000 or less and 8 per cent. had from $5,000 to $20,000 capital.

Minority Committee for Wheeling.

A protective committee, consisting of J. R. Nutt, W. G. Mather, George T. Bishop, and J. W. Platten has been formed to represent minority stockholders of the Wheeling & Lake Erie Company. Mr. Nutt's application on behalf of himself and other stockholders for permission to intervene in the receivership suit at Cleveland has been set for hearing on Nov. 17 before Federal Judge Day.

STOCKS OUT OF TOWN

More Steadiness Results from Lessened Volume of Trading at Other Centres.

KANSAS CITY RAILWAY UP

Advance in Common and Preferred Indicates Progress in Reorganization Plan.

Stocks on other Exchanges enjoyed a quieter day yesterday, and the trading developed few interesting features.

Bonds continue in good demand at Baltimore, and numerous fractional gains were recorded yesterday. The favorite issues are those selling under par and yielding in the neighborhood of 5 per cent.

General steadiness of tone on a limited volume of transactions, with but few features, was the chief characteristic of Boston trading. Some of the copper stocks, though quiet, scored fractional gains in prices following the firmness in Amalgamated, but in nearly all instances the narrow movement was unaccompanied by enthusiasm. New York interests sent over some orders in the arbitrage issues, and a fair amount of business was transacted in American Telephone during the early part of the session, but the buying was soon exhausted. During the afternoon the list was neglected and prices eased slightly, but pressure did not become important. Fluctuations in Tamarack during the first half hour attracted some attention, but were attributed to scattered orders and were soon forgotten. Some low-priced coppers, mainly Ojibway, displayed more strength.

Moderate advances prevailed on the Chicago Stock Exchange on trading which on most issues was in only moderate volume. A gain of 4 points for Kansas City Light preferred led the list of advances, while Chicago Elevated Railways common rose a full point over Thursday night's price. Fractional advances were scored in Illinois Brick, Pneumatic Tool, and American Can common and preferred. People's Gas, selling ex-dividend 1¾ per cent., closed an even point under last night, a net gain of ¾. McCrum Howell opened at 39, more than a point off, but closed within a fraction of the previous close at 40. Sears Roebuck and Commonwealth Edison lost fractions.

Sales of Kansas City Railway and Light preferred stock at 44 compared with the last previous price of 40 add to the significance of recent buying of the common shares around 16 and higher. The company is in the hands of receivers, and while nothing official can be learned as yet, there is a belief in some quarters that a reorganization plan may be announced soon. At the meeting of the Directors of the American Radiator Company no discussion took place regarding a "melon cutting," which has been a feature of the gossip recently.

After making a considerable display of strength throughout the greater part of yesterday, Philadelphia Stock Exchange prices slipped off all around in the last hour. During most of the afternoon the market had relapsed into a comatose condition after an early bulge, and real weakness did not develop until just before the close, when profit-taking in the arbitrage group caused a general selling movement. The widest recession was in Lehigh Navigation, which, after having risen sharply until it touched 93 and overnight a gain of nearly 2 points, fell back below 92 again. Even at that, however the closing quotation showed a gain for the day. Other stocks were not so fortunate and final prices for the most part were slightly below Thursday night.

Yesterday's transactions on the various out-of-town Exchanges, as reported to THE NEW YORK TIMES, were as follows:

CONDITIONS OF TRADE.

Commenting on general trade conditions, Dun's Review says:

The volume of business is of fair amount and trade continues to exhibit a quickening spirit. In most lines it is still below producing capacity, generally consisting of the supplying of immediate necessities. The absence of large unsold stocks on the shelves and the presence of supplies of credit so great that this country is now able to finance the pressing needs of Europe to an extent that has rarely if ever been equaled in the past are elements of basic strength. The lower prices for cotton and cotton goods, with considerable sales of print cloths for future delivery, contribute to the quickened movement in the dry goods trade. There is a favorable demand for woolen goods and worsteds, and a largely attended auction sale of carpets attracted much interest. Hides and skins are fairly active and firmer, but there is less doing in leather. Good weather has stimulated retail transactions in a number of trades at most of the leading cities, especially those in the Northwest. The excellent conditions favoring the planting of Winter wheat constitute an element of hopefulness in the Winter wheat sections. The October failure record exhibits some increase in number and amount of defaults, which is at variance with the recent record of advance in mercantile activity, but this represents past or passing conditions. Railroad earnings in three weeks of October increased 2.4 per cent. Foreign commerce at the port of New York aggregated for the latest week $32,853,836, against $33,966,301 in 1910 and $32,004,044 in 1909. Exports were about $2,000,000 less, and imports $1,000,000 more than last year.

Bradstreet's says:

Retail trade, which now occupies the centre of the stage as regards distribution, has been greatly stimulated by colder weather over a wide area of country. In fact, reports regarding this branch of business display a better tenor than they have since last Spring. The turnover has been especially marked in such lines as dry goods, rubbers, boots and shoes, furs, clothing, and furnishings, and the long-deferred breaking up of stocks seems to be now under way. Continued cold weather will, no doubt, lead to better sales at wholesale, especially as buying heretofore has been comparatively light. Jobbing lines report a fairly good volume of orders, though it is still too early to expect much benefit from recent cold weather. Road sales sent to wholesale houses show a little improvement, and it is significant that woolen goods, especially for men's wear, are in much better request for Spring shipment, and advances are noted on several lines, which fact suggests that clothiers have made good early sales. But in a general sense wholesale trade, outside of holiday lines, is relatively light, this being a natural concomitant of the season. At the same time there are enough cross currents to prevent uniformity. Thus country merchants continue to buy in a very conservative way, noteworthy snap is still absent, industry remains rather quiet, and the low price of cotton is having a depressing effect on trade and collections in the South. Therefore the holding movement is very general, and warehouse receipts are being more freely employed in connection with past due obligations. Raw wool is firmer in respect to its undertone, but prices are not actually higher, and foreign wools, hitherto very dull, have become a little more active. Sales of cotton goods for future account are hampered by the belief of consumers that the price situation is unstable. Leather is firm and there is more disposition to cover distant requirements. Incidentally, export trade in wheat and flour continues to make an exceptionally good showing, being the largest since Nov. 17, 1909. Another helpful development concerns further recessions in commodity prices and in a variety of manufactured goods, which latter fact, no doubt, affects profits, though in the long run consumption will be enhanced and production quickened.

COMMODITY MARKETS.

WHEAT.—Wheat, after a very irregular and excited session, closed at a decline of about ¾c to 1c for the day, with the feeling still very unsettled. The market opened off with a rush on further sensational statements regarding proposed Government action in connection with the alleged combination at Chicago. It was claimed that the holdings of the Armour interests exceeded what was considered a reasonable holding not in restraint of trade, and therefore the investigation had been started. Assertions regarding possible Government action included proposed indictment and proposed seizing of warehouse certificates. The influence on the market was again to precipitate heavy and excited selling, resulting in an early loss of 1c to 2c a bushel. This was partly recovered later, although final prices showed considerable nervousness with only about half of the net loss of the day recovered. Receipts were heavy in the Northwest, and in five days have gained 1,100,000 bushels over last year, while interior shipments are falling off steadily. The Modern Miller report on growing crop conditions was very favorable. Foreign markets were lower, unsettled by the American decline and on favorable new crop conditions. Argentine cables were of very fine weather and excellent growing conditions. Argentine exports for the week were 600,000 bushels, against 400,000 bushels the previous week. Since Jan. 1 the exports have been 83,754,000 bushels, against 66,653,000 bushels last year. Indian exports for the week were 352,000 bushels, against 680,000 bushels the previous week; Australian shipments, 1,536,000 bushels, against 696,000 bushels; American exports, 4,669,000 bushels, against 3,780,000 bushels, and world's exports were estimated at 10,500,000 bushels, against 10,700,000 bushels last week and 14,200,000 bushels last year. The American exports the past week were the largest of any week since Nov. 17, 1909. Export sales were reported of eight loads of Manitoba wheat. Cash wheat was quoted: No. 2 red, 97¾c, free on board; No. 1 Northern, $1.12⅞; No. 2 hard Winter, $1.04⅝; No. 1 Manitoba, $1.10⅛.

CORN.—The market was active and weak at the opening, influenced by the decline in wheat. There was heavy selling also on the very favorable weather conditions and reports of free offerings of new corn. Receipts were not heavy, however, and later there was strong recovery, the market closing at a small net gain for the day. Cash corn was very steady, with old corn 72c to 74½c for all grades at Chicago, and new No. 4, 64c to 65, or 2c to 3c over the December delivery. Exporters reported fourteen loads. Bradstreet's exports were 329,000 bushels, against 526,000 bushels the previous week. No. 2 corn was quoted at 80c, free on board, for old, while new was 69c, free on board, January to March loading.

OATS were weak at the opening and active. There was free selling in connection with the break in the other grain markets. The receipts were fairly liberal at the West with moderate shipments from the interior. Good commission house buying developed, and prices showed strong rally late, closing at a net gain for the day. Cash oats were steady, standards and No. 3 white being quoted at 51½c; No. 2 white, 52c.

PROVISIONS.—The market was quiet and fairly steady most of the session. There was some selling early on the decline in grain, but the hog markets were very steady, and later in the day the market rallied, closing firm.

COTTONSEED OIL.

There was a marked diminution in the Western inquiry, which factor in connection with freer offerings of crude at the advance, resulting in some hedge pressure, accounted for the reactionary tendency of the market. For a time there was a fair volume of short covering, but support on the whole was meagre. The late advance in the lard market had comparatively little influence. Further tenders of November oil were reported, bringing the total to date to approximately 1,500 barrels, and in reflection of these deliveries the premium for spot oil has disappeared. Crude was quoted at 4.40 to 4.47. Future quotations follow:

COTTON.

The market yesterday was quite similar to that of Thursday, aggressiveness lacking and fluctuations confined to narrow limits, the day's net results being almost negligible. More resistance was shown toward declining materially below the 9-cent level, and on the scale down the inquiry from shorts and trade concerns is liberal, while, on the other hand, an increment in Southern offerings is anticipated in the event of an advance of about ¼c per pound. While sentiment remains generally bearish, there is more cautiousness noted, and many operators are viewing the market at present as a scalping affair, awaiting the results of the pronounced holding at the South and the unwillingness, on the other hand, of spinning interests to purchase in large enough volume to effect a higher level.

At the start of yesterday's session advances of from 1 to 3 points were recorded, but pressure from room operators caused a setback of from 5 to 10 points. The lower levels, however, encouraged buying by interests which sold on bearish National ginners' figures, while spot concerns also absorbed offerings. There was little in the news to offer impetus to either side, advices from Liverpool being about as at due. While there is some difference of opinion in regard to activity at Manchester, it is generally conceded that conditions are encouraging at that centre. Further reports from China indicated that hopes of an early settlement of the revolution are spreading, but there are still fears entertained of cancellations. This, it is claimed, is not entirely due to the fact that conditions have been very much upset by the political upheaval, but also to the fact that Chinese purchases have been based on cotton about 1c a pound or more above prevailing levels. Obviously these cancellations will not be readily submitted to, although a postponement in shipping is not improbable.

Weather conditions were again practically ignored, and the freezing temperatures in various parts of the belt had but a minimum of effect. The idea that a large crop has already been secured is still prevalent, although it is admitted that prospects for a top crop have virtually disappeared, excepting possibly in the extreme Southern districts. The Texas traveler of Shearson, Hammill & Co. estimated the probable outturn of Texas at 3,800,000 bales and of Oklahoma 900,000 bales. This authority also commented upon the holding tendency. Southern spot markets showed but little change overnight, and it is thought that there is some pressure in the low-grade holdings, but prices for high grades are well maintained. The local spot market was .05c higher, at 9.45c.

Week-end statistics were construed as slightly bearish, in the main due to smaller spinners' takings than expected at these prices. These totaled to 397,000 bales, against 415,000 last week and 390,000 last year. Into sight was 671,000 bales, against 680,000 last week and 582,000 last year; since Sept. 1 aggregates to 4,664,000 bales, or about 580,000 more than last year and 260,000 more than two years ago. The visible of American cotton totals to 3,093,-000 bales, against 2,643,000 last year, increasing 274,000 bales, against a gain of 192,000 in 1910. Future quotations follow:

COFFEE.

COFFEE was easier, closing at a net decline of 8 to 21 points, with sales of 87,500 bags. Offers from Brazil showed decided firmness, cost and freight offers from Brazil being practically unchanged. Country buyers take occasional lots to supply immediate requirements, but persistently refuse to buy ahead. Havre advanced ¼f, Hamburg was ¼ to ½ pfennig higher. Owing to holiday in Brazil there were no public cables.

Spot coffee unchanged; 15⅝c for Rio No. 7. Contract prices follow:

BATTLESHIPS AT NEWPORT.

Seven, with Some Destroyers, Arrive There for Fall Manoeuvres.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 3.—Rear Admirals Hugo Osterhaus and C. J. Badger arrived here to-day with the first squadron of the Atlantic Fleet. The Connecticut, flying the flag of Admiral Osterhaus, Commander in Chief of the fleet, was followed by the North Dakota and Michigan. The second division was led by the Louisiana, flying the flag of Admiral Badger, with the battleships Vermont, South Carolina, and New Hampshire, and three torpedo boats.

The ships are here for the Fall manoeuvres in Narragansett Bay, and will remain until Nov. 20, when the squadron will go to Hampton Roads. The second division is due here Nov. 25, to remain until Dec. 5. The officers will have their walking tests here.

Many officers' wives were on hand to greet the ships, and the officers have received many cards for entertainments while here.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 3.—An inspection of the battleship Oregon by Rear Admiral Chauncey Thomas to determine whether repairs were needed was scheduled for to-day at Los Angeles Harbor, where the Pacific Fleet is anchored. The cruisers Cincinnati, Raleigh, and Buffalo were ordered to weigh anchor and steam to San Francisco, where the Cincinnati is to be equipped for the voyage to the China station, a trip which the Raleigh also is expected to take soon. With these three vessels departing northward and the torpedo fleet ordered back to San Diego for target practice and a probable cruise to Honolulu, the start to be made to-day, the complete mobilization of the Pacific Fleet was of the past. By to-morrow night the entire fleet will have left this harbor.

ATTACKS FIRM'S OWN BOOKS.

Scheftels Defense Disputes Correctness of Branch Office Accounts.

Counsel for the Directors of B. H Scheftels & Co., who are now on trial before Judge Ray in the United States Circuit Court on the charge of having used the mails to defraud, attempted yesterday to attack the validity of the firm's own books. Richard Lynch, an expert accountant, was on the stand, and the Government put in through him the books of the Scheftels branches. Ernest E. Baldwin, one of the counsel for the defense, cross-examined him sharply to try to show the books were unreliable, and objected strenuously as the books were put in. He was overruled.

In the afternoon strife between counsel became very sharp as Frederick Adams, a bookkeeper in the Boston office, was examined with reference to a purchase by the Boston office on Aug. 25, 1909, of five shares of Mohawk for Enos Bradshaw of Detroit. On the same day it apeared that Ralph Waterman, the Detroit manager, wired to George Graham Rice in New York and said:

"Our 188 (Bradshaw) is becoming unpleasant about five Mohawk. I must have somthing definite to tell him, as I am out of generalities."

Assistant United States District Attorney Dorr brought out, however, that the five Mohawk shares bought in Boston were not sent to Detroit, but to Chicago, and were there sold to Harry Harris. Bradshaw did not get his shares till five more had been bought on the Boston market on Sept. 19 at $47, and then $49 was charged for them. Consequently, the prosecution is contending that not only was the Detroit man kept waiting for his stock, but that a secret and illegitimate profit of $10 on them was charged on it.

Other evidence was introduced to show that Harris, the Chicago man, had been waiting a month and a half before he received the stock he had paid for. To enable out-of-town witnesses to vote, the case was adjourned till Wednesday morning.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The centre of the high barometric pressure, with its attendant cold weather, has reached the Middle Atlantic States, and during the next twenty-four hours it will pass over the Atlantic Ocean and be followed by a moderation in temperature during the next two to three days over all parts of the country east of the Mississippi and in the Southwest.

GIVING UP CONTROL OF OUTSIDE BANKS

National City Bank Yields, It Is Said, to Objections Attorney General Wickersham Raised.

SCORES OF BANKS IN A CHAIN

Stocks That Were to Go to National City's Holding Company Will Now Be Let Go—The Case Before President.

It was reported yesterday on seemingly good authority that the National City Company, recently organized to hold securities, make investments, and transact other business for the National City Bank, and which immediately aroused the suspicions of Attorney General Wickersham, would dispose of all its shares of other banks, estimated to have a market value of between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000.

This action is to be taken, it is understood, to forestall a possible adverse decision on the right of a subsidiary of a National bank to hold stocks of other banks. This privilege is denied by law to National banks, and Mr. Wickersham has maintained that it is not proper for such an institution to control a company formed for the purpose of handling business which the bank itself is forbidden to handle.

There were more than 200 companies formed along lines generally similar to those followed in organizing the National City Company which were in business before the National City Company. The fact that the National City Bank is the largest institution in the United States and that interests connected with the bank were known to hold 50,000 shares or more of the capital stock of other banks attracted the attention of Washington, and representatives of the Department of Justice visited the bank to make inquiries. The bank had already been told by counsel that there was nothing illegal about the formation of a security company, and Mr. Wickersham's agents were furnished with all the information they sought. When he had reviewed this the Attorney General reported that the National City Company violated the spirit of the National banking laws.

Referred to President Taft.

Franklin MacVeagh, Secretary of the Treasury, held that the holding company had been formed within the meaning of the laws, and the matter was referred to President Taft for review. The papers in the case were sent to Beverly, and the President let it be known that he expected to announce his decision by Nov. 1. His protracted Western trip caused a delay, and he has not yet given the matter consideration.

The $10,000,000 stock of the National City Company is held by three trustees, James Stillman, Chairman of the National City Bank; F. A. Vanderlip, President, and Stephen S. Palmer, a Director. They were out of the city yesterday and could not be reached. Other officers of the bank refused to affirm or deny the report.

In another quarter it was said that the bank stocks acquired by National City Bank interests, and which it was proposed to turn over to the new company, had never been transferred, owing to the objections raised by the Government, and that it has been decided to leave them in their present hands. According to this authority the stocks will not be sold, but the announced intention of turning them over to the National City Company will not be carried out.

Authentic information as to the character and amount of bank stocks acquired by interests identified with the National City Bank has never been obtainable. The largest single holding consists of 10,000 shares of the National Bank of Commerce stock, with a par value of $1,000,000, but for which the purchasers paid $2,000,000.

In March of this year 45,000 shares of the National Bank of Commerce stock, which had been held by the Mutual Life Insurance Company and the Equitable Life Assurance Society, was acquired by J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and interests connected with the National City Bank and the First National Bank. No syndicate was formed for this purchase, and the block of stock taken over was divided among the four participants.

Many Banks Under Control.

More than ten years ago National City Bank interests began acquiring control of other banks, among them the Second National, the Bank of the Metropolis, the Lincoln National, the Fidelity Bank, and the Columbia. In 1901 they got control of the National Butchers and Drovers' and the National Citizens', which soon absorbed the Ninth National. In 1904 the Central National was taken over by the Citizens' Central National. Representatives of the National City Bank were given places on the boards of each of these institutions. The same interests figure in the affairs of the Farmers' Loan and Trust, one of the three largest trust companies in the United States; the Hanover National, the Riggs National of Washington, the American Security and Trust Company of Washington, the Newport Trust Company of Newport, the Fidelity Trust Company of Kansas City, and many other institutions located in various Western cities. The Bank of Havana and several banks in Central and South America are connections, and more ambitious plans for affiliations outside of this country have been proposed.

It has been reported that some of the individuals who were carrying these heavy investments in stocks of other banks were desirous of getting their money out for other uses, and the formation of the investment company was decided upon. The First Security Company of the First National Bank and other bank subsidiaries furnished precedents for the organization. The nature of the company and the business it was to do were described in a circular sent to shareholders of the National City Bank on June 28, 1911. This was in part as follows:

> After careful consideration the officers and Directors of the National City Bank are of the opinion that it will be of material advantage to the shareholders of the bank to unite in establishing a corporation so organized that it may make investments and transact other business, which, though often very profitable, may not be within the express corporate powers of a National bank.
>
> All Within the Bank.
>
> A plan has been presented to and approved by holders of more than two-thirds of the capital stock under which it is proposed to form an investment company having an authorized capital of $10,000,000, in which each shareholder of the bank may now acquire a beneficial interest equal to two-fifths of the par value of the stock of the bank held by him. The capital stock of the investing company is to be issued to and held by three trustees, who shall be officers or Directors of the bank. These trustees will exercise the powers of ownership of the stock of the investing company, will elect its Board of Directors, and will receive all dividends paid by it and pay the same over to the bank for distribution to those of its shareholders who have acquired a beneficial interest in the investing company.
>
> To facilitate the payment of the amount which the shareholders of the bank must contribute to the capital of the investing company in order to acquire their respective interest therein, the Directors of the bank have declared a special dividend of 40 per cent., $10,000,000, on the stock of the bank. Shareholders may apply this dividend to the payment for the interest which they are entitled to acquire.

President Vanderlip is hunting in the South, and it was said at the bank yesterday that he had left no address where he might be reached. In the absence of the trustees, no officer of the National City Bank, and none of the Directors, who were communicated with was willing to comment on the reported decision to dispose of the bank shares.

What May Be Done About It.

One report was that the stocks of most of the smaller banks had already been sold and that a syndicate to be composed of William Rockefeller, James Stillman, and Frank A. Vanderlip, would take over the National Bank of Commerce shares. On the other hand, there was said to be good ground for the belief that the sale of the stock intended to be held by the National City Company would be only nominal and that it would be retained by the individuals who have taken it over. Investments other than bank shares will remain in the treasury of the City Company.

It was said by a man prominent in the affairs of the bank that it was expected that President Taft would uphold Mr. Wickersham to the extent of saying that it was an unwise policy to allow a National bank to control all of the stock of another institution organized under State laws for the express purpose of doing business which the bank itself was not permitted to do.

The statutes prohibit a National bank from having branches or holding stocks of other banks. It was suggested that the President might recommend legislation covering this point in his message to Congress.

Washington Expected It.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Officials of the Treasury Department are convinced of the truth of the report that the National City Bank of New York is unloading the bank stock held by its holding company, but they profess to be greatly puzzled as to the reason for such a move. They assert that Secretary MacVeagh has reached no decision as to the legality or illegality of the connection established between the National bank and other banks, by means of the holding company, so that it would not be from fear of Government action.

In other quarters, however, it is suggested that while no official decision has been reached, and the matter is still technically in the hands of the President, to whom it was referred several months ago to avoid a clash between Mr. MacVeagh and the Attorney General, a suggestion of which is to happen may have escaped, and the bank may be acting on what it considers inside information.

While the issue has never been sharply raised before, the tacit precedents of the department for many years have all tended to support the National City Bank in its position. The Attorney General took the opposite view and precipitated the present crisis by volunteering an opinion to the co-ordinate Department of the Treasury.

At once it looked as if a factional war would divide Mr. Taft's Cabinet, but by gentle handling a deadlock was avoided, and the question itself was left to the President. The papers in the case were forwarded to Beverly in the Summer, and the statement here to-night is that the President still has them.

The decision in the case will affect hundreds of corporations similar in their relations to the National City Company. A well known example is in Chicago, and others are scattered over the country. Mr. Wickersham holds that the law creating the National banking system was certainly designed to prevent one National bank from dominating other banks. In his opinion, the holding of the stock of various banks by a holding company, like the National City Company, the stock of which in turn is held by the identical stockholders of a National bank, is but a verbal evasion of the law.

Attorney General Wickersham's report of his investigation of the National City Bank case virtually charges the National City Company with being an embryo "money trust."

President Taft will take up the case when he returns to Washington.

Recent unofficial advices to the Department have indicated that changes in the internal affairs of the National City Company were being made to square it with the position of Mr. Wickersham. It was reported to the department that the company was preparing to let go of its holdings in many small banks throughout the country, but there have been no evidences that it intends to give up its interest in the dozen or so of prominent banks, which contribute to its powerful position.

REPORT ON NICKERSON DEATH

Coroner and Examiner Find No Clue to Woman's Slayer.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Nov. 3.—That Mrs. Lilly Shannon Nickerson of Jamaica Plain, Mass., whose body was found on Aug. 5 off Little Compton, R. I., was murdered in the Joy Line steamer Georgia July 20 while going to New York to join her husband, is the report filed this afternoon by Coroner D. Frank Gifford of Little Compton. Attorney General William B. Greenough is working on the case, and all the official machinery of Rhode Island by order of Gov. Pothier is engaged in the hunt for the guilty man.

Coroner Gifford's report says that the autopsy by Edward P. Stimpson, his medical examiner, and the testimony of witnesses show that Mrs. Nickerson was killed by "a stunning blow on the forehead and face, injury to the nose so severe as to break down the tissues, indicating a severe pinching by means of which suffocation occurred."

In his report Coroner Gifford states that the woman, who was very attractive, occupied outside Stateroom No. 39. She deposited her money with the purser soon after the Georgia started from Providence. Refreshments were sent to her room just before 9 o'clock, and she was not seen again that night. The next morning when the steamer arrived in New York her room was empty, and six days later her body was found in the water.

When the Georgia arrived in New York Mrs. Nickerson's stateroom was opened by an assistant steward. Her hat was found. The bed was undisturbed, and on it lay her suitcase open. The cabin window was open

HIS CAPITAL 1,000,000 CATS.

Then He Feeds Rats to Cats, Skins the Cats, and Feeds Cats to Rats.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Former get-rich-quick schemes are as the blundering activities of children compared with a plan submitted to Postmaster D. A. Campbell to-day.

The plan is nothing more nor less than to feed rats to cats, skin the cats, and feed the cats back to the rats in endless succession, the only break being the deduction of the cat skins, the sale of which is to supply the profit. The writer outlining his plan, said:

"We will start a cat ranch, getting 1,000,000 cats. Each will have 12 kittens a year. Cat skins are worth 10 cents for white ones and 75 cents for black. They will average 30 cents each. There's 12,000,000 cat skins a year, a daily gross income of some $10,000.

"A man can skin 50 cats for $2, and it will take 100 men to operate the ranch, leaving our profit over $9,000 a day. We'll have to feed the cats. How?

"Start a rat ranch next door. Rats multiply four times as fast as cats. We will have, therefore, four rats a day for each cat, a plenty. How to feed the rats?

"Simple. Feed them on the cat bodies—a fourth of a cat per rat—amply sufficient. Thus, you see, the business will be self-supporting and automatic all the way. The cats will eat the rats and the rats will eat the cats, and we get the skins and wealth. Are you with me?"

CITY FLOWER SHOW BECKONS YOU TO-DAY

Horticultural Society Opens Its Annual Exhibition at the Natural History Museum.

ROSES, ROSES EVERYWHERE

Enormous Chrysanthemum Plants, 10 Feet in Diameter, Greet Visitors in the Foyer's Centre.

The Horticultural Society of New York opened its annual exhibition last night at the Natural History Museum, and it was one of the best flower shows in its history.

Enormous chrysanthemum plants, ten feet in diameter, occupy the place of honor, the centre of the foyer, while the exhibit extends east and west through the wings of the Museum. The chrysanthemum plants, which are exhibited by Adolph Lewissohn of Ardsley, N. Y., and John Canning, his gardener, are broad and low, shaped like enormous mushrooms. In the centre is a yellow plant, with a pink one at the left and a white one at the right. They are giants of their kind and covered with hundreds of blossoms.

Of the three the white is the most perfect, for while the other two have blossoms in various stages of development the white is full blown. It is said to be the finest bush chrysanthemum ever exhibited in New York. The plants won the first prize.

Other beautiful specimen bush chrysanthemums are from the estate of Samuel Untermyer at Yonkers. An anemone bush chrysanthemum took the first prize, and there are other bushes from the same exhibitor very beautiful, and they would be large, too, if not compared with the giant bushes in the centre of the foyer. Mr. Untermyer took the first prize last night for stove and greenhouse plants to occupy 100 square feet. He also took the second prize for twenty-five of the great round-headed show chrysanthemum blossoms.

The east wing contains the cut chrysanthemums, and Mrs. F. A. Constable of Mamaroneck took the first prize for the show blossoms and Charles M. Mallory of Port Chester the first prize for the best pompons, the popular small chrysanthemums. Percival Chubb of Glen Cove also showed some fine specimens.

In the west wing are the roses and orchids. The Killarney roses predominate. A. N. Pierson has a double white Killarney and the Killarney Queen by the same exhibitor is a deep rich pink. The Sunburst of Charles H. Totty is a new rose, and there are a couple of fine exhibits of American Beauties, bride and bridesmaid, and My Maryland roses.

The four alcoves filled with orchids make an exhibition said to be as fine as any ever shown in the city. F. E. Burton took the first prize for a private exhibitor and Lager & Harrell for the best commercial exhibit. The first prize and the sweepstakes, for the best plant in any class, went to Julian Rochrs for a beautiful hybrid orchid, with large, delicate pink and white blossoms, and a little touch of green in the throat. The first prize for the finest collection of cut flowers and orchids went to J. A. Manda of West Orange. A Cypripedium Insigne Sanderae, an orchid rare at one time and covered with spots, in its new edition brought a prize to Mrs. Henry Graves last night. It is almost clear yellow green.

A plate of magnificent great red-cheeked apples, which had the fruit exhibit of the show all to itself, was sent by Mrs. John Wolfe of Tuxedo Park.

The flowers were on private view last night, but the show will now be open free to the public until Tuesday. The society has a continually increasing membership, over 100 new members joining last year. On the Exhibition Committee this year are F. R. Pierson, Chairman; George V. Nash, Secretary; A. L. Miller, P. O'Mara, J. E. Lager, J. A. Manda, F. H. Traendly, and James Stuart.

BEGIN WAR ON TIP SYSTEM.

Salesmen Warn Hotel Men to Stop It—Costs Them $50,000,000 a Year.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Commercial travelers of the United States have started a campaign against hotel tipping which, they say, costs them $50,000,000 a year. That sum P. E. Dowe, President of the Commercial Travelers' National League, says is disbursed by salesmen annually among bellboys, waiters, and porters, in addition to $325,000,000 paid as regular hotel charges.

President Dowe mailed to-day to the various associations of hotel proprietors what he calls the "final call" of the traveling salesmen, in which he says:

"The traveling men, forced to action in self-protection, fully aware of the fact that increased expenses mean decreased salary under present business conditions, and finding only one way to bring the hotel proprietors to a realization that they have underrated public sentiment against the tipping abuse, are preparing to compile lists of private houses where transients can be accommodated.

"For commercial men with trunks it is proposed to establish in the central section of each city a loft or lofts divided into light, clean showrooms. Many of the hotel sample rooms are in damp and unhealthy basements, as numerous commercial travelers can evidence by doctor's bills.

"You can see that we mean business, but in consideration of the self-evident fact that your members have failed properly to gauge the sentiment against tipping we will withhold definite action a reasonable time, and if there are no signs that the hotel proprietors propose to put their help upon a self-respecting basis, making them wage-earners instead of beggars for gratuities, no power on earth can prevent our carrying out our programme of reprisal.

"Hotel guests are expected to hand out the coin for every service or attention by the hotel help, from the hallboy who carries the grip back of an incoming guest to his room and hangs on until the rake-off is provided to the porter who calls a cab or carries a grip from the doorway to the bus."

HYDE'S DEMAND UPHELD.

Appellate Division Orders Him Tried in General Sessions.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court dismissed yesterday the appeal of District Attorney Whitman from an order of Justice McCall transferring the trial of ex-City Chamberlain Charles H. Hyde from the criminal branch of the Supreme Court to General Sessions. Stephen Baldwin, former attorney for Mr. Hyde, obtained the order on a complaint that the District Attorney had been delaying the trial of the case.

James W. Osborne is now Mr. Hyde's counsel, and opposed the District Attorney's appeal from Justice McCall's order. Mr. Hyde was indicted on a bribery charge based on allegations concerning his deposits of city money in the Carnegie Trust Company.

District Attorney Charles S. Whitman in speaking of the decision said later:

"Although I was defeated on the appeal it does not mean that Mr. Hyde must be tried in General Sessions. Any Supreme Court Justice sitting in the Criminal Branch can at any time upon my motion have the case transferred to that court. At the time Hyde asked for an early trial there was no Justice sitting in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court."

HEAVY STREET CAR TRAFFIC.

Metropolitan Lines Carried 265,188,128 Passengers in Year Ended June 30.

The Metropolitan Railroad system carried in its street cars in the year ended on June 30, according to statistics given out yesterday by the Public Service Commission, 265,188,128 passengers paying full fare and 117,145,576 passengers on transfers, of whom 98 per cent. of those paying their nickels and 96 per cent. of those using transfers rode on the electric lines.

The three most profitable lines were cross-town routes, Twenty-third, Thirty-fourth, and 145th Streets, which have no extremities on which the travel is light. Their earnings for each mile a car was run were 46.50, 42.79, and 42.75 cents, respectively. Then came in order of profit the Broadway and Columbus, Sixth and Amsterdam Avenues, Lexington Avenue and Eighth Avenue. Two cross-town routes, on the other hand, brought in very low returns. The Mott Haven cars earned only 8.37 cents for each mile and the Canal Street cars only 8.13 cents.

The record for light returns was, however, held by the Church Street horse cars, which on 7,200 miles of travel enriched the company by one-twentieth of a cent a mile. This line was moribund for years and was finally abandoned on Jan. 5.

On the other hand, the Metropolitan Cross-town horse car tracks, which form a net-work over the district between Fourteenth and Delancey Streets, have been profitable. With earnings of 35.07 cents a car mile, they compare favorably with such electric routes as Eighth Avenue, Fourteenth Street, and Broadway and Amsterdam. The Madison Street horse cars with a record of 30.35 cents a car mile are not so far behind them.

The comparative failure of the 8 and 10 cent transfer arrangement with the Central Park lines is shown by the fact that in the year there were only 526,685 passengers who made the transfer from a Metropolitan to a Central Park car and 53,630 who paid 10 cents for the double transfer from an avenue car to the cross-town and again to an avenue car.
